Martial Law Fights Revolt In Argentina; Score Killed

Rebels Claim Control in One Province; Routed in Buenos Aires.

Cabinet Meeting Calls for Order

Insurrection Follows Radicals' Rejection of Election.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 29 (AP).—A state of siege was declared for an indefinite period tonight by the Argentine government as the result of a revolutionary plot leading to violent disorders in four provinces.

The action, similar to a state of war, followed a cabinet meeting at which it was decided the disorders must be curbed at any cost.

Earlier the government had announced that the plot, launched concertedly before dawn by extremist elements among the nation's million racial voters disenfranchised since a 1930 rebellion, had been suppressed.

20 Slain in One Battle.

Private reports from Rosario, in Santa Fe Province, said firing was renewed during the morning between rebels and loyal forces at Rosario, where 20 persons were slain last night. About 100 persons, including many soldiers, were hurt and 500 were arrested.

Rebels claimed they controlled most of the police stations in Santa Fe, but Buenos Aires, where all policemen and two infantry regiments were held in readiness, and other cities were quiet.

Government officials had announced that "attempts to disturb the order in diverse locations, especially Santa Fe Province, were quelled without major effort."

Today's disturbances coincided with a decision of the national convention of the Radical party in Santa Fe to refrain from participating in March parliamentary elections.

The party contended that the voting will be "manipulated" and that Radical candidates would be defeated, although President Justo promised fair elections and observers believed the Radicals might elect 25 deputies.

In such an event, it was said, the rehabilitation of the party, virtually barred from elections for three years, would begin.

Radical Chiefs Cleared.

The leading radical chieftains were not accused of complicity in the current plot. The party claims the membership of 70 per cent of Argentine voters and contains an extremist element that demands the restoration of the party by violence.

Disturbances in Rosario, Santa Fe, Carcarana, San Jeronimo, Canada de Gomez, Sant Anna, Paso Libres, San Luis, La Plata, Arellanada and Buenos Aires, affecting the Provinces of Santa Fe, San Luis, Corrientes and Buenos Aires, broke out at 3 a. m.

Convicts Slay One, Wound 3

Atmore, Ala., Dec. 29 (AP).—A desperate band of colored convicts, part of 29 white and colored men who escaped from the State Prison Farm here early today, moved north tonight heavily armed after killing one man and wounding three others in their drive to freedom.

The colored men, seven in a group, within half a mile of the scene of the break, shot down Grover Kirby, a farmer, who with another farmer named Parker, sought to check their flight. Kirby died in a hospital here. Parker was in serious condition at Century, Ala.

Seizing shotguns and ammunition Kirby and Parker had obtained to halt the break, the group continued northward and three miles farther shot down Leon Fulmer and his 16-year-old son, obtaining more arms and ammunition.

Rumanian Nazi Kills Prime Minister Duca

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 29 (AP) Ion G. Duca, Rumanian prime minister since November 12 and lifelong foe of King Carol, was assassinated by a student today in the city of Sinaia, seat of the royal palace.

The premier was about to board a train for Bucharest after conferring with the monarch, when the assailant fired four revolver bullets into his head at close range and hurled a hand grenade that wounded Duca's companion, Dr. M. Costinescu, a deputy.

The assassin, who gave the name of Nicholas Constantinescu, and two alleged accomplices were immediately seized by police.

Authorities said the trio were members of the Nazi anti-Jewish and Fascist Iron Guard, which was outlawed by a government decree December 10 after police raids, battles and riots.

The Rumanian cabinet met in extraordinary session shortly after the assassination and ordered a round-up of known members of the Iron Guard.

By midnight, word from Bucharest said, 1,300 persons had been jailed in that city alone.

Duca, 55 years old, had been a leader of the Liberal party since

Litvinoff Sees Tokyo-Berlin Pact for War

Warns Soviet Parliament of "Storm Cloud" and Blames Hitler.

Moscow, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—A warning that both Japan and Germany apparently are threatening to make aggressive war, presumably against Soviet Russia, was voiced in Parliament tonight by Foreign Commissar Maxim M. Litvinoff.

The foreign commissar, back from triumphs at Washington, where he arranged for United States recognition of Soviet Russia with President Roosevelt, depicted Japan and Germany as led by similar motives.

"If I am not mistaken," he said, "they even recognize a racial similarity between themselves."

He declared the former good relations between the Soviet Union and Germany had changed so radically as now to be unrecognizable.

Japan Moves "Dangerous."

Litvinoff devoted separate sections of his 2-hour address to the central executive committee of the Soviet Union (Parliament) to Japan and Germany. He attacked Japan's military leadership, and said:

"Japan is the darkest storm cloud on the international political horizon."

Litvinoff charged Japan is making dangerous and unjustified claims regarding the Chinese Eastern Railway in North Manchuria—a line in which Moscow offered to sell its interests to Manchukuo, through Tokyo.

Referring to the tension in the Far East, the Commissar declared Japan "is deliberately provoking us to stronger actions than protests."

Litvinoff insisted the people of the Soviet Republics urgently desire peace, but warned that Russia and the Red Army are prepared, if necessary, to repel invasions.

In reference to United States recognition, Litvinoff asserted that recognition of the Moscow government was the end of capitalist nations' efforts to isolate the Soviet Union.

Refers to Hitler.

He proposed that the Japanese cease violating the rights of the Soviet government in the Chinese Eastern Railway, sign a pact of nonaggression, and continue commercial treaty negotiations. The nonaggression negotiations are at a standstill.

Litvinoff, on Germany, declared the reason for the change in relations between Moscow and Berlin had been the rise of "a certain leader" who, he said, sought to arrange a bloc of western European nations for a general advance against the Soviet Union. His reference was regarded as unmistakably to Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

City Rum Bill Sure to Meet House Battle

Final Draft, With 50-Cent Tax, Goes to Hill; Delay Sought.

With opposition developing rapidly in the House, where delay will be sought by a strong group of Representatives, a liquor control law for the District of Columbia went to Capitol Hill yesterday.

In its final draft, as presented by the District Commissioners to Rep. Mary T. Norton (Democrat) New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, the bill contains a maximum tax of 50 cents a gallon for spirits, which is believed to represent President Roosevelt's ideas on the matter.

A local option system with zones of only 600 feet radius is a belated feature of the District liquor bill. In communities of a general residential character, a vote of 51 per cent of the residents of each of these tiny zones will determine whether it is wet or dry.

Drops Beer Tax.

The present tax of $1 a barrel for beer is to be withdrawn.

But the bill, while satisfying the Treasury Department and apparently the President, is due to meet opposition in the House, especially as far as plans to rush it through on the second day of the session without debate or votes on amendments are concerned.

House leaders disclosed yesterday the extent of this growing opposition.

Whether the plans will be upset will depend largely on what is done by the House District Committee, which sent the bill to the Government Printing Office yesterday so that copies will be available when Congress convenes.

Fate Up to Committee.

A meeting of the committee has been called for Wednesday afternoon immediately after the House adjourns. Copies of the Commissioners' bill will be distributed to committee members in advance, but there is certain to be opposition to the licensing system. Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, already is on record as opposed to it.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia, yesterday joined the advocates of a Govern-

Roosevelt to Attend Gotham Writers' Frolic

Senate Silver Bloc to Push 16-to-1 Bill

Free, Unlimited Coinage to Be Proposed; See 26 in Group.

Administration's Wishes However, Will Be Considered.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Unless President Roosevelt openly expresses his opposition, there is a distinct possibility that Congress in its forthcoming session will order the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio to gold of probably 16 to 1, it became apparent yesterday after the formation of a bloc of 26 Senators to fight for such a step.

Formed under the leadership of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, this silver bloc has adopted as its keynote the contention that free and unlimited coinage of silver was "the safest way to prevent uncontrollable inflation," as the chairman of the group expressed it. Senator Wheeler predicted sufficient Senate votes to adopt such legislation.

Favor Bimetallism.

After discussing the monetary problem for one hour and a half, the silver meeting, attended by 18 Senators, adopted the following brief and terse resolution:

"We favor bimetallism, the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver, at a ratio to be established by law."

The only reason a specific ratio was left out of the resolution, Senator Wheeler explained, was because it was not known how far President Roosevelt might go in devaluating the gold dollar. He said the conference definitely favored the historic 16-to-1 ratio, and that on Wednesday he would introduce a bill ordering free coinage on that basis.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, in explaining that in his opinion the "only question of debate" in the Senate when the silver proposal came up would be the ratio of silver coinage with gold, indicated that on this point the silver bloc was not unanimous.

Hostile to 16-to-1 Ratio.

It is expected that some Senators who favor the free coinage of silver may take the stand that a 16-to-1 ratio with gold is too high. Speaker Henry T. Rainey, who predicted that such legislation would go through the House faster than the Senate, for one, expressed hostility to the 16-to-1 ratio.

Contending that any fixed ratio for the coinage of silver can not be maintained, Speaker Rainey said if the ratio is to be specified, he would favor 20 to 1.

Instead of fixing the ratio, Speaker Rainey would enact the Flesinger silver bill, which, he explained, provides for the purchase of silver until commodity prices reached the 1926 level, issuing in exchange for such metal silver certificates which would be redeemable in gold.

Bloc Gains Strength.

The meeting of the silver bloc yesterday indicated that President Roosevelt has failed, if it were his real purpose, to quiet the clamor for free coinage of silver when he recently ordered the mints to accept all newly-mined American silver at a price equivalent to 64½ cents an ounce, coining one-half of that received at the legal ratio of about 16 to 1.

The conference also indicated that despite this silver policy and the gold purchase policy, the free silver advocates in the Senate have not lost strength since last April when the Wheeler 16 to 1 silver propo-

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Asked today what he thought of the list of 19 men selected by Prof. Irving Fisher as those who know most about the value of money, Senator Glass, of the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate, curtly remarked:

"It was tactful of Prof. Fisher to have omitted his own name from the list; for if he knows anything about it, he has learned it all since I talked with him about a year ago."

Ties Up Schedule Of Service Fees

'Suicide,' Declares NRA Head of Plan to Tax Depositors.

By Felix Bruner.

As a result of what is described as a misunderstanding, all proposed regional banking codes, including the code for Washington, were canceled last night and a deputy administrator lost his job.

In an amazing tangle of events, New York and Baltimore banks announced elaborate fee schedules to go into effect immediately, Washington banks were ready to announce similar schedules, a press release was given out at NRA headquarters declaring Gen. Hugh S. Johnson had approved standard rules for banking, and Johnson flatly denied he had approved such rules. He declared he had not even seen them.

After announcing he had canceled the schedules, Johnson announced he had dismissed Cary N. Weisinger, jr., deputy administrator in charge of the banking code. It was said Weisinger was instrumental in issuing the press release announcing that Johnson had approved the banking rules.

Schedule Distributed.

It was said a model schedule of charges under which various banks proposed to put their business on a "metered" or "piece work" basis had been circulated among bankers by the Bankers Code Authority, and that bankers had been given to understand that Johnson had approved the proposal.

Johnson sent the following telegram to the American Bankers Association:

"These (the fee schedules) will be suspended indefinitely and immediately until specifically approved by myself in person."

The New York code, containing hundreds of fee provisions, was made public yesterday with the announcement that it would become effective January 1. A similar schedule, to become effective at the same time, was made public in Baltimore. Washington bankers at a meeting lasting all yesterday afternoon and into the evening, approved their proposed fee schedule and then declined to make it public. It was understood the regulations also were to be effective on the first banking day of the New Year.

Muddle Is Mysterious.

How the various misunderstandings leading to the almost insoluble tangle came about was not made entirely clear. The first intimation that there was a misunderstanding came from Gen. Johnson late yesterday.

"It should be distinctly understood," he said in a statement, "that the fair trade practice rules now being formulated by banking and clearing house associations through-

Wanderwell's Widow To Wed Mechanic, 21

New Orleans, La., Dec. 29 (U.P.).—The 22-year-old widow of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, globe trotter, whose murder last year on his yacht off Long Beach, Calif., has never been solved, today announced her marriage to 21-year-old Walter Baker, a mechanic in Mrs. Wanderwell's travel expedition.

Tetrazzini Wins Move To Spend Own Money

Rome, Dec. 29 (AP).—Luisa Tetrazzini, one of Italy's greatest diva's, may retain control of her $5,000,000 fortune, even though her young husband seeks to prevent her from managing her business affairs on the grounds that she dissipated large sums.

The tribunal of Rome today rejected a plea by the husband, Pietro Vernati, that the singer is mentally incapacitated to handle her fortune, and decided to hear her testimony within 30 days.

Wallace Says Science Must Forget Isolation

Needs of Social World Call for Full Aid, He Asserts.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP). An appeal for scientists and engineers to help solve social problems was made tonight by Secretary Wallace in an address before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"It is difficult to see how the engineer and the scientist can much longer preserve a complete isolation from the economic and social world about them," Wallace said.

"A world motivated by economic individualism has repeatedly come to the edge of the abyss, and this last time possibly came within a hair's breadth of plunging over.

"Yet science, all this time, has been creating another world and another civilization that simply must be motivated by some conscious social purpose if civilization is to endure.

Science and engineering will destroy themselves, and the civilization of which they are a part, unless there is built up a consciousness which is as real and definite in meeting social problems as the engineer displays when he builds his bridge."

D. C. Shivers As Cold Sets 4-Year Record

Snow Forecast Tonight; Mercury Here Drops to 9 Above.

Chilled to the bone by temperatures that dropped as low as 9 above zero late last night, shivering Washington awakens today to a prospect of snow tonight—in time for New Year's—with Weather Bureau experts optimistically predicting a rise in the temperature.

Those who braved the icy blasts here last night were muffled to the ears, furnaces were banked high indoors, and extra blankets were requisitioned from storage places in homes.

At 10 o'clock last night the Weather Bureau thermometer showed 9 above zero, the coldest temperature in the present frigid wave and the lowest registered here in four years.

Warmer Tomorrow.

Weather Bureau forecasters said it will be "warmer" tomorrow, with moderate east winds. In prophesying snow for tonight, they expressed a possibility of rain, too.

Temperature of 16 below zero was reported yesterday within 100 miles of Washington in the Backbone Mountains of West Virginia, as most of the eastern United States was numbed by the frigid wave.

Loudoun and several other northern Virginia counties were snowlocked yesterday, according to Associated Press dispatches, with numerous miles of second highways closed by official instructions from Richmond.

Five deaths from cold have been reported so far in the eastern United States, Associated Press reports assert. Three persons died in Boston, one in New York and one in Philadelphia. In Canadian provinces 15 were reported dead.

Mercury Drops Again.

Temperatures here reached 10 above at 8 a. m. During the day the climb was but 4 degrees, reaching 14 at 1 p. m. and beginning another descent. At 6 p. m. the thermometer showed 11.

Borah Assails "Dictatorship" For Oil Trade

Senator Asserts It Will Create Trust, Ruin Independents.

In a strongly worded letter to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, yesterday assailed the proposed marketing and production agreements for the petroleum industry as being "unfair to the public," placing "absolute and dictatorial powers" in the hands of the big oil companies, and as threatening independent distributors with "utter destruction."

The marketing and production agreements, signed by 24 major oil companies early this month, are before Secretary Ickes for his approval as oil administrator under the industry's NRA code, before they can become effective. Senator Borah has started a fight for the rejection of the agreements.

Voices Fear of Monopoly.

Borah several weeks ago attacked the agreements and Secretary Ickes asked him to give his views more fully. This the Senator did in the letter he made public yesterday.

In the letter he summarized his attitude as follows:

"It does not seem to me possible under this agreement to protect the consumers or to save from utter destruction the independents. It seems to me it would in effect be an approval of the combine and monopoly, and then withholding all power of control over the combine and monopoly. The agreements, as a whole, are objectionable. I repeat, if the situation is such as to require price fixing, let the prices be fixed by the Government through responsible agencies."

"Decoy," He Charges.

In making the letter public, Senator Borah explained the situation was being misrepresented when it was asserted the proposed agreements were favored by the Independent Petroleum Association of which Wirt Franklin, close friend of former President Herbert Hoover, is the president.

This association, Senator Borah

Congress to Get President's Views

By Leon Dure, Jr.

For the first time since the National Industrial Recovery Act became law last spring, President Roosevelt yesterday disclosed he wished its provisions revised and its administration strengthened to stamp out the danger of monopolies under codes.

To this end he will ask Congress to clarify anti-trust principles in the act itself, while he contemplates the creation of some machinery—perhaps a new NRA board—for the direct protection of small businesses.

These developments followed closely a conference Mr. Roosevelt had with Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and two outspoken Republican Progressives, Senators Borah, of Idaho, and Nye, of North Dakota, who have been fearful of the fate of small enterprises under the NRA.

Meanwhile, the President also was represented as feeling Congress should maintain closer coordination with the Administration, not for the purpose of regulating the executive branch, but so that it can be constantly informed on the operations of government.

Faces New Problem.

The discussion of the NRA with its administrator and the friendly critics was characterized as purely preliminary. But it brought to the fore two new problems which the President recognizes and proposes to solve:

1. Some codes of fair competition may be working to the advantage of big business against the smaller competitor.

2. Some industries still are inclined to believe the NRA abolished the principles embodied in the Sherman antitrust act.

The first question, which involves creation of some agency to which small business can appeal for relief, the President believes can be solved administratively. Answer to the second, which involves protection of the consumer, he believes can be found in legislation to clarify the recovery act.

Adjust Fair Practices.

Although details remain to be worked out, the possibility was strengthened that some board to parallel that of the National Labor Board, which settles labor disputes under the NRA, would be created to adjust complaints from small business. Mr. Roosevelt said it was

Boiler Blast Fatal to Man

Heating Plant Blows Up in Boardman Home Killing Gardner.

Explosion of a boiler in the cellar of the home of Miss Mabel Boardman, socially prominent American Red Cross official, 1801 P street northwest, last night cost the life of Otto Neimeyer, 55, her gardener.

Neimeyer was firing the furnace when the boiler burst. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he died. He lived at 1711 Fifteenth street northwest.

Firemen said only small property damage was incurred.

Plant Grows at Rate to Exceed Earth 7 Times in Size in Year

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—A single tomato root tip, a quarter inch long, is growing so fast "artificially" at the Rockefeller Institute that if there were food enough it would become seven and a half times as big as the earth in a little more than a year.

The growth is a living proof of the irresistible energy behind the principle of life. It shows what a single seed could do under the "favorable" conditions of a millennium where it had no competition, and enough food.

The scientific aim of the experiment is a study of plant nutrition and certain diseases. It was reported today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. Philip R. White, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

It began with a sterilized tomato seed, a little more than a year ago. One root tip was cut off soon after sprouting, and was placed in water, containing as plant food about half a dozen common chemical salts, a small amount of purified cane sugar and a tiny bit of yeast.

As the tip grew it was cut, and portions so sliced off were placed each in its own test tube to grow alone. This was repeated until there were 100 tubes filled from the original tip. Since then each bit of root has been pared down once a week, and the "other half" thrown away.

"If, instead of many branches be-

Post's Annual Financial Review For 1933 to Appear Tomorrow

Tomorrow's Washington Post will contain a special section of 16 pages devoted to the year's review and forecast of business, finance and economics. Important articles and studies by the Nation's leading economists and business writers will cover every phase of the momentous events of 1933.

Read Ralph West Robey's masterful review of finance and business; Elliott Thurston on the monetary situation and outlook; Alexander Mann on recovery from depression; Anna P. Youngman on the National recovery act, and Denver's survey of commodity trends.

The section will contain also trade and financial news of the world as well as records from transactions in the United States.

(Associated Press.)

A transatlantic telephone wedding of a man in Michigan and a girl in Sweden was ruled invalid yesterday by the Labor Department.

The decision was in an immigration case. The girl had applied for admission to the United States on a nonquota basis as the wife of an American citizen.

The long-distance ceremony was held December 2 when Sigrid Sofia Margareta Carlzon, of Sweden, and Bihrl Clason, of Detroit, were united by Judge John D. Watts, of the Michigan Court of Common Pleas.

Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., Labor Department solicitor, founded the ruling on two points—that Michigan statutes require a couple to "declare in the presence of the magistrate or minister and the attending witnesses that they take each other as husband and wife," and that Congress has specifically indicated that persons who are married by proxy have not satisfied the marriage standard established in the immigration laws."

On the first point, an announcement by the department said:

"Since Miss Carlzon was in Sweden while the magistrate and witnesses were in Michigan, it could not be said that Miss Carlzon made her declaration in their presence."

Of the second, the department observed: "This expression of opinion by Congress tends to show that under immigration laws persons will not be treated as husband and wife unless the marriage has been consummated as well as celebrated."

Sprague Flays PWA Program As Plain Dole

Fight on Prof. Rogers in Statistics Body Loses by 3 Votes.

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Supporters of Dr. James Harvey Rogers, professor of economics at Yale University, today defeated by three votes an attempt to supplant him as a vice president of the American Statistical Association because of his activities as monetary adviser to President Roosevelt.

Supporters of "hard money," as opposed to the present unstabilized dollar, nominated Dr. Harold L. Reed, Cornell University professor of economics. Prof. Reed has been urging a return to the gold standard, although he is a colleague on the Cornell faculty of the President's other monetary adviser, Prof. George F. Warren.

Sprague Raps Policies.

The convention debated the propriety of "chastising Dr. Rogers," as his supporters put it, while Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, who recently stepped out as financial and executive assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, waited to address it.

Departing from his prepared speech, Dr. Sprague attacked the Administration's public works program as "more damaging to recovery than the British dole."

"Production of durable consumer goods is the way to employ capital and labor," he said. "A Government policy of public works that tends to maintain and increase the relative cost of that production works against a trade recovery."

"You have a dole," asserted the speaker. "It is perhaps better than a plain dole, but a work dole which establishes rates of pay so that civil work does not expand, is quite as damaging and, I should say, more damaging to recovery than the British dole to which you objected some four years ago."

Waite Praises Program.

While Sprague was attacking the public works program, Henry Matson Waite, deputy public works administrator, was praising the Federal reemployment drive before the American Economic Association, another of the 17 National economic and social science organizations in convention here.

Prof. Irving Fisher, noted Yale economist, came to the defense of Dr. Rogers in the debate over reelection of the President's adviser, although only a short while before Fisher had told the Econometric Society that "we stabilize every unit of commerce except the dollar."

"It is up to us economists here to see that our Government establishes a dollar that will not fluctuate so," he said.

In the American Statistical Society meeting, Prof. Fisher held there was no connection between Dr. Rogers' views and his duties as vice president in charge of the section of facts and methods of bearing on economic theories.

Vote for "Big, Bad Wolf."

Prof. Rogers, who won, 56 to 53—with 1 vote cast for the "Big, Bad Wolf"—was named for reelection by the nominating committee. Prof. Fisher was its spokesman. Reed was nominated by petition of 15 economists who favor stabilization.

Stuart A. Rice, assistant director of the census and president of the association, took the lead in the discussion as soon as the nominations were presented.

"This is a difference of opinion on an important current question," he announced. "Let's face it squarely as that, a referendum on the issues for which these two gentlemen stand."

Prof. Fisher called it "mixing things pretty badly to allow a group to force an issue into a committee report with which it has no connection" and Rice said it was "unprecedented."

The vote came after Ralph Watkins, of the University of Pittsburgh's Bureau of Business Research, asserted the issue was, "Shall the members of this association chastise Prof. Rogers for his association with the monetary policy with which most of us appear to be in disagreement?"

Morgan Bond Deal Is Probed

Cleveland Inquiry Links Van Sweringens to Transaction.

Cleveland, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Cleveland News says today that County Prosecutor Frank T. Cullitan is in New York investigating affairs of the liquidating Union Trust Co. involving alleged padding of a financial statement in the fall of 1931 to the extent of $10,000,000.

The prosecutor refused to discuss the investigation other than to say it concerned the Union Trust Co. The News says it was known that he had been studying an exchange of correspondence between officials of the Union Trust and Officials of J. P. Morgan & Co.

The newspaper says the transaction particularly engaging Cullitan's attention was an exchange of $10,000,000 in bonds between the Van Sweringens and the bank here. The bonds, the paper says, were carried on the bank's records as having been acquired by the bank and "resold" to the Van Sweringens about a week later.

The News states that the letters indicated that the bonds actually had been pledged to the house of Morgan for loans to the Van Sweringens.

Children Star In Fine Riding At Horse Show

Juniors From 5 Up Give Fancy Exhibition as Season Opens.

By Marian May.

With classes well filled and excellent horsemanship in evidence, the Junior Horse Show season got under way yesterday afternoon at the Riding and Hunt Club. The show was the first of a series of two junior shows which are held annually. Open to youngsters who have not passed their seventeenth birthday, the show attracted entries from children prominent in riding circles throughout the city and suburbs.

Margaret Hill, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hill, of Bethesda, won another trophy in her career of horsemanship victories when she gave a most excellent performance to credit as the best rider in the 10-year-old-and-under class. Margaret, who rides gracefull and nonchalantly, displays a seat and hands that might make many a grown rider envious. Her almost perfect coordination, and the manner in which she handles and sits her mount, bespeak many hours of practice. Little Eleanor Hempstone was an excellent runner-up in this class, riding with a remarkable assurance.

Jimmy Lea, jr., 5 years old, was the recipient of many "oh's" and "ah's" from those spectators who say "oh" and "ah" at the sight of cute youngsters. Jimmy, riding a fat and rather wayward little pony, posted expertly (for a 5-year-old) into third place in the horsemanship class for the 10-year-olds-and-under.

Many Jump-offs.

The Handicap Jumping Class, long drawn out due to the necessity of many jump-offs, finally was won by Busy Bee, well ridden by Robert Palmer. Easter Sunday, whose performance in the last jump-off was marred by only one-half fault, placed second with Lawrence Baker up. Impulse, owner Margaret Cotter up, took third place with one fault in the final jump-off. Bean Beetle, ridden by owner Betty Couzens, was fourth.

The class for the best rider between 10 and 16 years of age attracted nine entries. Betty Couzens, riding her Notary, defeated Edna Roth for first place. Margaret Cotter and Bazy McCormick placed third and fourth, respectively. Excellent seat and hands were displayed for the judges to decide just which one was best.

The egg race was won by Louise Herron, who reached the finish line with "egg" safely in contact with spoon just 20 seconds after starting. Bazy McCormick was runner-up, completing the course in 49 seconds. Participants were required, one by one, to ride up to a basket of golf balls, or "eggs," help themselves to one with the aid of a tablespoon, and ride as fast as they could, without dropping the ball, around the arena to the starting line. Louise Herron and Bazy McCormick were the only youngsters to finish the race, the other three entrants dropping their balls.

Judges Puff and Puff.

The Fault and Out Class, in which laths were laid on the uppermost bars of the jumps and are supposed to detect the slightest touch by falling, was held up when the judges became undecided as to whether Bean Bettle and Impulse had really caused the laths to fall. Their attention called to the fact that it could have been air currents or vibration or what not, the judges proceeded to jump up and down and blow in the proximity of the laths. But when said innocent articles of equipment stood the test without a quiver, the judges decided that the laths were too much bother anyway and the jump-offs were continued without them. Score one for the Riding and Hunt Club over methods employed at Madison Square Garden!

Papoose, owned and ridden by Louise Herron, was awarded the blue, and Busy Bee, ridden by Robert Palmer, placed second. Bean Beetle, owned and ridden by Betty Couzens, and Impulse, owner Margaret Cotter up, placed third and fourth, respectively.

Little Jimmy Lea, jr., rode his pony around an imaginary race track in a colorful jockey costume to capture first place in the fancy costume class as having the most authentic costume. Eleanor Hempstone, garbed as a peasant, was second. Margaret Cotter, looking extremely weird astride Impulse as a scarecrow, had the most original costume; and Mary Lou Miles, as an elf, was second.

Louise Herron was the recipient of two bad falls, but each time she bravely remounted, and continued riding amid much applause.

Meggie Exiled

If a White House dog bites a young woman reporter—that's banishment!

So Meggie, Mrs. Roosevelt's usually amiable "Scottie," found out after taking a nip from the upper lip of Miss Bess Furman, of the Associated Press.

Meggie has gone to join Major—the former White House police dog that bit Senator Hattie Caraway and Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, among others—in that canine exile where a dog can yield to appetite or whim without attracting front-page attention.

The departure of the offending Scotch terrier—taken away by friends of the Roosevelt family—leaves the White House with only one dog—a collie pup, playmate of "Buzzie" and "Sistie" Dall, the President's grandchildren.

An Irish setter pup, now at Warm Springs, Ga., will be brought to the Executive Mansion when he has learned manners.

Naval Air Chief Denies Hawaii Hop Is "Stunt"

King Also Tells Critics Aviation Force Is Equal to Any.

Indirectly replying to recent charges that the United States naval aviation efficiency was vastly inferior to that of other countries, Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval aeronautics, denied the planned flight of six Navy seaplanes from California to Hawaii is a stunt.

Although critics, believed inspired by certain aircraft manufacturers, have cited the Balbo flight last summer as proof of superior performance of foreign planes, the Navy aviation chief declared that the proposed oversea flight is "in no sense a stunt."

Admiral King also announced the Navy is constructing an experimental combat plane, equipped with a double supercharger, which, if successful, will give this country one of the fastest types of military planes in existence.

The contract for the Navy's new fast combat plane, the aviation head stated, has been awarded to Pratt & Whitney, Hartford, Conn.

In announcing contracts for 21 flying boats similar to the six to be used on the Hawaii flight, King revealed the Navy will build no more biplane flying boats.

The admiral said $5,200,000 of the $5,500,000 alloted naval aviation under the National recovery act has been spent.

Puerto Rico Disrupted By Gas Price Strike

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Dec. 29 (AP).—Officials considered the advisability of calling out the National Guard to insure order as a strike and boycott for lower gasoline prices held the island in a firm grip today.

Motor traffic in San Juan was virtually at a standstill.

3 More Selected For Police Board

Officers Named to Hear Department Charges.

Because the supply of alternates for the Police Trial Board has been exhausted by challenges in connection with the trial of Privates H. G. Bauer and Rudolph Schleichert, the District Commissioners yesterday named three more police officials.

On recommendation of Maj. E. W. Brown, superintendent of police, the Commissioners appointed Inspectors James F. Beckett and Benjamin A. Lamb, and Capt. Richard H. Mansfield, commander of the Ninth Precinct.

The trial has twice been interrupted following disqualification of members of the board, and Corporation Counsel William W. Bride has threatened to insist on a civilian board if impartial police can not be found. The hearing will be resumed next week.

Women Fliers Enter 10th Day

Refreshed by Victory, They Continue Grind to Lengthen Record.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—Through alternate thunder, fog and sunshine, Frances Marsalis and Helen Richey continued flying today toward a new refueling endurance record for women.

They were in their tenth day aloft as they received sufficient fuel to take them well into tomorrow.

"We could land tomorrow or Sunday," Mrs. Marsalis said in a note dropped 19 hours after they had broken the previous record of 8 days, 4 hours and 5 minutes.

"Helen and I both feel swell today," she continued.

She attributed their recovery from the weariness and exhaustion that at first threatened the success of the flight "perhaps to the excitement of breaking the record and hanging up a new one."

"We are in gay spirits. Anyway, we don't seem like two people who have just spent the busy and fatiguing nine days that we have."

Capital Urges Congress Study Labor Groups

Manufacturers Ask Study Prior to Broadening of Board's Power.

A Congressional investigation of employment relations before any further legislation on the subject is undertaken was asked yesterday by the National Association of Manufacturers in a petition to Congress.

Referring to reports that Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, who resigned Thursday from the chairmanship of the National Labor Board, intended to seek legislation broadening the authority of that body, the manufacturers' petition declared "such proposals present issues of peculiar gravity at this time."

The petition held that a thorough and impartial inquiry by a Congressional committee into present employment conditions, particularly in the field of collective bargaining, should precede the passing of any more laws on the subject or amendments to existing recovery legislation.

Should Reveal Coercion.

"Any further legislation which is not predicated on investigation of coercion against employes, employers, and the public by labor combinations will be grossly unjust," the association declared, citing the controversy between the Weirton Steel Co. and the National Labor Board as a direct challenge to those who have placed the company in a position of defying the board.

The petition:

"Senator Wagner, of New York, when chairman of the National Labor Board, was widely quoted in press dispatches as intending to introduce legislation in Congress to amend the recovery act by enlarging the authority of the labor board, and perhaps to propose that that body be made permanent, with compulsory authority over all types of employment controversies. Such proposals present issues of peculiar gravity at this time. We submit that before additional legislation dealing with employment relations be seriously considered the Congress should possess accurate and timely information of the facts of present employment relations throughout the United States, particularly in the field of collective bargaining.

Two Points Urged.

"To this end, the National Association of Manufacturers respectfully urges a thorough and impartial investigation by a qualified Congressional committee authorized to report upon:

(a) The facts as to the nature of employment relations in industry and commerce, the viewpoint of employers and employes, the number of employes dealing individually or through various forms of collective bargaining with employers, and the prevailing characteristics of such forms.

(b) The nature and extent of Federal authority to deal with employment relations in industry and commerce.

"The manufacturers of the country ask only an impartial inquiry which will present the actual facts of existing relations, developed in many forms over a long period of time, and an ascertainment of the attitude of the Nation's workers, determined in the light of their own judgment and experience. Recovery legislation has been in effect but six months. The need for haste in enactment does not apply to amendment. Time should now be taken to ascertain the facts suggested, the authority of Congress and the quality and operating effect of the present administrative agencies, before drastic amendment is seriously considered.

"The impression is constantly, but erroneously created that the only coercion existing in the field of employment relations is that alleged to be exercised by the employer over his employes. Any further legislation which is not predicated on inquiry into other demonstrable forms of coercion against employes, employers and the public by labor combinations will disregard our social history and experience, the familiar facts of our daily life and be grossly unjust to employers, employes and the people."

Rumanian Premier Killed by Assassin

ucation, who was summoned to Sinaia as soon as the monarch heard of the assassination.

Atgelescu, 64, is the senior member of the cabinet and a professor of surgery in the University of Bucharest.

Carol ordered Duca's body brought to the royal castle.

Had Fought Nazis.

The opinion was expressed in political circles that the killing would have far-reaching consequences. It was pointed out that Duca, as premier, began a campaign against a rising wave of anti-Semitism in Rumania, and that his cabinet voted to dissolve two of the Nazi bodies in Rumania.

The assassin refused to make any statement.

Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu was immediately summaned to return to Bucharest from St. Moritz, Swithzerland, where he was spending the holidays.

Duca, once minister of the interior, foreign affairs, and public instruction, succeeded Alexander Vaida-Voevod when the latter's government was overthrown.

By outlawing the two Nazi organizations, Duca was expected to prevent them participating in parliamentary elections. They were growing in strength and caused the government anxiety in view of recent Nazi victories in the Transylvania district.

The assassination came as a climax to a long series of disorders characteristic of the new wave of antisemitic radicalism which has swept Rumania since the victory of Hitler's anti-Jewish campaign in Germany.

Reflecting Pool Becomes Ice Skaters' Paradise

Students Told To Delve Into Government

Speakers at Conference Present Divergent Political Views.

Members of the first National Conference on Students in Politics last night were told by Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, that if they read their histories correctly they would learn that merely overthrowing one system of government was no assurance that it would be supplanted by a better one.

Other speakers included Norman Thomas, Socialist; Robert Minor, Communist; Thomas R. Amlie, Farmer-Laborite, and former Gov. William Sweet of Colorado, now a National Recovery Administration official.

The meeting was held in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Mr. Meyer reminded the students that there was no fool-proof system of government.

"What we have to do is to develop a greater interest in government by all the people," he declared. He said he began working toward this end nearly 30 years ago, when he sought the assistance of his own university, Yale, through Arthur Twining Hadley, then its president.

Has No Cure-All.

As to the future, Mr. Meyer smilingly admitted, "I have no plan for the salvation of the world to present to you tonight."

Without exception, the four other speakers painted dark pictures for their youthful listeners. Mr. Thomas called for "the end of this predatory society and the end of war."

"This patching-up of the old order is not the thing your generation needs," he declared in assailing the National Recovery Administration, adding: "Much of the momentum of the New Deal is already spent. Most of the codes are woefully unsatisfactory. What is happening more and more is merely a much better version of the old Hoover plan of share the work. But the arrogance of Henry Ford has successfully defied the one good thing in the codes, the right to collective bargaining."

He reiterated his familiar thesis that the future lies between fascism and socialism. Pleading for the latter, he said: "You will not render any considerable service by trying to be sideline intellectuals, more or less critical or all organizations and in no vital relation to any one of them. Hence you must get into a working class political party if you are to be of genuine use in the struggle that lies ahead."

Minor Talks Revolution.

Mr. Minor, recent Communist candidate for mayor of New York, asserted: "Fellow students, I speak for your orientation toward the revolution."

Amlie, a former member of Congress, found a kind word for the New Deal, because it held off "the revolution" until "the plans are made."

"Until we are prepared," said Mr. Amlie, "the change could not some even though the capitalistic system might break down day after day."

The conference will continue today and tomorrow. Among the speakers at the session which begins at 9:30 o'clock this morning will be Dean Wallace B. Donham of the Harvard Business School. There will be round table discussions this afternoon. Tomorrow, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will address the conference.

Reporter Acts as Judge.

Nashville, Dec. 29 (AP).—Ben West, police reporter, acted as police judge today and found his "hardest" task was to "fine well-to-do citizens for violation of the traffic law." He remembered, however, that "these laws were made to protect them, too," so he let them have it.

Held in Buckley Case.

Indianapolis, Dec. 29 (AP).—A. J. Smon, alias Jack Edwards, address unknown, was released to Dayton, Ohio, police tonight, a few hours after a policeman had told a municipal court judge the man was wanted for questioning in connection with the slaying of Jerry Buckley, crusading Detroit radio announcer.

Local police tonight expressed belief Smon was not wanted now in connection with the slaying of Buckley, shot down in a Detroit hotel lobby after he had been warned to halt a crusade against crime.

U. S. Employes Seeking Lower Retirement Age

Optional Privilege After 30 Years' Service Is Objective.

Plans to seek optional retirement privileges for all Government workers after 30 years' service were made yesterday at a joint conference of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The organization agreed to ask Congress for elimination of present requirements, under which employes must reach the ages of 62, 65 or 70, depending on type of work, before becoming eligible for retirement. Leaders explained the purpose was to permit placing of employes on inactive lists at younger ages.

"We want the retirement fund to cease being virtually a death benefit," said E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Legislation to simplify procedure under which widows are reimbursed for retirement fund contributions of their husbands also will be sought.

House Seat Likely For Pennsylvanian

Opposition to Ellenboggan Has Subsided.

Opposition to Representative Ellenboggan (Democrat), Pennsylvania, which last session kept him out of a seat in the House, last night appeared definitely to have withdrawn, making his formal swearing in next Wednesday virtually certain.

Legally elected to the Seventy-third Congress, Mr. Ellenboggan did not insist he be admitted to the extraordinary session, when it was established he had not held naturalization papers the required seven years.

The seven years have since elapsed and indications were his seating will not be challenged. A native of Austria, Mr. Ellenboggan was educated at the University of Vienna and recently practiced law in Pittsburgh. He is only 33.

Action on U. S. Pay Cuts May Develop Today

President Expects Cost Study on Which to Decide Restoration Step.

A showdown may come today, after months of agitation by Federal employes for restoration of their 15 per cent pay cut, with submission to President Roosevelt of a Labor Department report on living costs.

Statisticians worked late last night in hopes of sending the survey to the White House today. It was generally believed the prices of necessities would be shown to have increased sufficiently for the President to at once restore at least a portion of the salary slash.

President Roosevelt said yesterday at his press conference he was awaiting the report. While he failed to reveal how soon he would act on it, it was understood he hoped to raise wages as a New Year's gift to thousands of workers.

Meanwhile, the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations, representing more than 150,000 men and women, wrote every member of Congress requesting elimination of living costs as the determining factor in Government pay adjustment, on the grounds that "Federal salaries should be stabilized and not be subjected to frequent changes."

The council contended Congress should immediately restore basic pay rates. Another demand was for lifting of a ban on promotions because it "stifles initiative."

The communication concluded, "the Government should inaugurate employment policies which will serve as a real example to private employers."

Restoration of the entire 15 per cent cut was urged by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, on his return to the National Capital yesterday.

"I am very glad to learn that the President is considering the question of restoring part or all of the 15 per cent cut," Senator Capper said.

"The rising costs of living and the salaries paid so many thousands of Government workers in Washington make it necessary that their wages should be restored to normal at the earliest possible date."

Upside Down, Down Up; What's This All About?

Long Beach, Calif., Dec. 29 (AP).—Four hours 5 minutes and 22 seconds after he flopped his airplane over on its back, Milo Burcham, 28, aviator, flopped right side up again today and landed with the upside-down flight record in his possession.

The former record holder, Lieut. Tito Falconi, Italian aviator, last August flew upside down from St. Louis, Mo., to Joliet, Ill., in three hours and six minutes.

No Inquiry Made On Dr. Johnson, Department Says

Denial of a new investigation of Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, by Government agencies, for alleged radical tendencies because of the meeting of the National Student League in convention in the university chapel during the holidays, was made yesterday by the Interior Department, under jurisdiction of which the university comes.

Delegates to the convention, 237 in all, from 44 colleges and 25 States, were composed of various racial groups, including Chinese, Japanese, Negroes, Jews and Italians.

N.Y. Hotels Ban Flasks on Hip

New Year Revelers Must Buy Liquor on Spot; Big Night Seen.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Revelers who toast 1934 in hotel dining rooms here must buy their liquor where they drink it, for flask-toting will be taboo.

The Hotel Association of New York City has decided it will begin the New Year by barring flasks at all celebrations.

The edict added that prices of drinks will be "moderate and reasonable and shall be the same on New Year's Eve as on normal occasions."

The city will ring in the new and bring back the old when the clock strikes 12 Sunday night.

Famous old ballrooms which have been shrouded in dust since 1919 will glisten once more.

The correct dress will be silk toppers, Inverness capes and the jewels of yesterday's splendor.

The correct toast will be: "To 1934—Happy days."

Reservations have been received in unprecedented quantity. There will be no curfew until 5 a. m. Monday. Liquor will be plentiful, as ships have been unloading cases for the celebration all week.

The celebration really will begin tomorrow night, 24 hours before New Year's Eve. The Hotel Delmonico will open its new bar and grill then.

The Astor has reservations for 8,000 persons, and the Waldorf expects 4,000.

A threatened strike of 50,000 waiters has been averted through intervention of the Regional Labor Board, and the town is all ready for the signal.

Coast Hotel Is Leased.

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—A 25-year lease on the Biltmore Hotel was signed here today by Baron Long, of San Diego, and directors of the Central Investment Co., owners of the property.

German Paper Assails French New Arms Plan

Official Organ Declares Paris Is Hedging on Negotiations.

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP).—The officially inspired Diplomatische Korrespondenz today said French arms proposals "do not seem encouraging for a continuation of disarmament negotiations."

The newspaper referred to a memorandum which the Hamburger Fremdenblatt said France would offer Germany, providing for international control of armaments over two four-year periods.

"The German proposals for a just solution of the disarmament problem are stigmatized as 'a plan for rearming,' and France is declared to be unwilling to negotiate on them," the Korrespondenz asserted.

"Yet despite this categorical attitude which ignores all progress of months and is calculated to tread false trails anew, France apparently does not desire to take the responsibility for breaking off direct negotiations."

Referring to the imminent return to Berlin of the French Ambassador, Andre Francois-Poncet, bringing with him the French counter-proposals to recent and confidential German demands, the Hamburg newspaper said editorially:

"If the French Ambassador does not bring any other information, Germany sees no reason to change her present stand."

(Germany was understood to have demanded an army of 300,000 fully equipped men.)

Four-Year Test Asked.

Under a Paris date line the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, which is usually well informed, gave substantially the same outline of French proposals as was included in a Paris Associated Press dispatch.

Briefly, the suggestions called for a test period of four years in which European armies would be standardized into short-term bodies; a German army of 200,000 with light defense weapons; a French army of 200,000 and a like number of Colonial soldiers; reciprocal control of arms; defensive material such as tanks and airplanes for Germany in a second four-year period, and destruction by other powers of offensive arms such as large tanks and cannon.

DIED.

BEALL—On Friday, December 29, 1933, at her residence, 206 Rhode Island avenue northwest, ALICE S., the beloved wife of the late Joseph W. Beall, and mother of Richard E. Beall. Remains resting at the W. W. Chambers Co. funeral home, 1409 Chapin street northwest, until Monday, January 1, 1934, at 10:15 a. m., thence to St. Barnabas Church, Md., where services will be held at 11 a. m. Relatives and friends invited. Interment church cemetery.

BEDFORD—On Friday, December 29, 1933, at Georgetown University Hospital, WILLIAM GORDON BEDFORD, father of Dorothy Bedford, of 3516 W place northwest. Remains resting at the Clyde J. Nichols Co. funeral home, 4217 Ninth street northwest. Funeral from the Church of the Ascension, Twelfth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, on Monday, January 1, 1934, at 11 a. m. Interment Rock Creek Cemetery.

BURGSTRESSER—Suddenly, on Friday, December 29, 1933, EDGAR M. BURGSTRESSER, beloved father of Bertha Brown, of 1214 Thirtieth street northwest. Remains resting at the above residence until Sunday, December 31, at 11:30 a. m. Interment in Bethlehem, Pa.

COOK—On Friday, December 29, 1933, at his residence, 1418 Irving street northwest, ATWELL MARVIN COOK, aged sixty-five years. Funeral services from Hysong's parlors, 1300 N street northwest on Monday, January 1, 1934, at 2 p. m. Interment Cedar Hill Cemetery. (New York papers, please copy.)

CUSHING—On Thursday, December 28, 1933, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Edward C. Smith, 1235 Newton street northeast, JOHN, beloved husband of the late Ellen Quinn Cushing. Remains will rest at the above address until Monday, January 1, 1934, at 9 a. m. Funeral and interment at Washington, N. J., on Tuesday, January 2. Relatives and friends invited.

Cold Wave Slows Razing of Bridge

Complaints Are Made on Supplying Labor.

With work on the demolition of Aqueduct Bridge hampered by cold weather, 12 carpenters were laid off yesterday, leaving only six carpenters on the job. Thursday, 17 ironworkers were dropped.

Dissatisfaction with delays by the local civil works employment office in filling labor requisitions was voiced by an official on the bridge project, who said numerous complaints by workmen have resulted.

On December 19, he said, a requisition was sent to the office, where applicants register, for six ironworkers. They appeared on the job Thursday, nine days later and too late to be hired. There was no need for them, the official said, as the work for which they were intended had been disposed of in the meantime.

Approximately 200 skilled, semi-skilled and nonskilled workmen are on the pay roll.

V. F. W. Opens Drive for New Veteran Funds

Program for Repeal of Economy Act Drafted at Convention.

Full strength of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was thrown yesterday behind a drive for repeal of the National economy act.

Meeting here, the National legislative committee of the organization aprpoved a five-point program to be presented Congress. Repeal of the economy act was the initial plank.

Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, told the committee that he will present a bill on the day Congress convenes calling for repeal of the act and restoration of veterans' rights "as they existed prior to March 20, 1933."

Program for Veterans.

Included in the program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars are:

Restoration of pensions to Spanish War veterans, as they existed prior to passage of the economy act; restoration of hospital privileges to war veterans; relief of widows and orphans of veterans, and restoration of the disability allowance law and opposition to the needs clause as a "prime requisite in the granting of pensions."

Speakers included Col. Rice W. Means, national legislative chairman; Maj. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans Affairs; Senator Steiwer, Oregon; Representative Wright L. Patman, Texas, and others.

To Support Principle.

Restoration in the laws of the principle of pensions for veterans was declared to be the 1934 keynote by George K. Brobeck, legislative representative of the organization in Washington.

Star Wind Velocity of 144,000 Miles an Hour Discovered in Tremendous Storms by Scientists Powerful Stellar Blows, However, Are Similar to Earth Blows.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—Hurricanes on the stars that blow 144,000 miles per hour, rushing a thousand times faster than the most terrific storm wind ever measured on earth, were reported for the first time today before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

These stellar storms, though far more powerful than earthly winds, are much like them in other respects, for they originate in the "atmospheres" of turbulent gases that surround the stars, as earth winds are born in the earth's atmosphere.

Discovery of the giant storms was announced by Otto Struve and C. T. Elvey, astronomers of Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago, at Williams Bay, Wis.

Measuring From Afar.

Measuring the speed of the star winds qualifies them as the leading long-distance weather observers, for the winds are blowing on stars at least 24 million milion miles from the earth.

Accurate measurement of the winds is possible, however, because of the effects they produce on starlight, which the astronomers have detected with the spectroscope, an instrument used in analyzing light coming from stars.

Discovery of the star winds marks an important advance in astronomy, for heretofore astronomers had assumed that the atmospheres surrounding the stars were quiescent. It accounts for changes in starlight which have puzzled astronomers for years and never before have been satisfactorily explained.

Though the stellar winds blow much faster than earth winds, they contain much less "air." In the atmospheres of the stars there is much less gas to the square yard than in the earth's atmosphere.

Contain Earthly Gases.

The winds on the stars contain much the same kinds of gases as those on earth, such as hydrogen, helium, oxygen, nitrogen and carbon dioxide, and also calcium, sodium, potassium and magnesium in the form of gas.

What caused the star winds was not known, the astronomers said. On earth winds arise from the meeting of warm and cool air, a process known as "convection."

Speeds of the star winds vary greatly, and some stars have little or no wind. On the faint star known to astronomers as "17 Leporis" there is the greatest wind so far measured, 144,000 miles an hour. On another, Epsilon Aurigae, it is 43,200 miles an hour. Still another, Alpha Persei, has only a relatively mild zephyr blowing 14,400 miles per hour.

No Wind on Sun.

On the sun, which ranks as a star, there is practically no wind.

A light shining out in space that is equivalent to 75,000,000 suns, but so distant that it appears merely as one of the stars in the milky way, has been measured by two astronomers of Mount Wilson Observatory, Calif.

This light comes from the central star cloud of the great nebula in Andromeda, a great "island universe" or star system whose light it is estimated takes 500,000 years to reach the earth.

It was measured by Drs. Joel Stebbins and Albert E. Whitford with the aid of a new astronomical instrument, the photo-electric amplifier.

With it they have found that the Andromeda nebula is about twice as large as astronmers previously have been able to measure with the aid of photographs—so large it would take light 80,000 years to cross it instead of 40,000 as thought before.

The star cloud of which the earth is a part is about the same size, they estimate—shaped like a round, flat roll 480 quadrillion miles across (480 plus 15 ciphers).

Great Nebula Is Found Twice as Large as Once Thought.

Ask a Girl How Much She Weighs; She'll Tell, Maybe

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—The lady of "uncertain age" is also the lady of "uncertain weight."

When asked how much they weigh, most women have a tendency to give the figure that represents what they should weigh instead of what they actually weigh, Dr. Mildred B. Mitchell, of New Hampshire State Hospital, told the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

When 105 boarding school girls, averaging 16 years of age, were asked their weights only 19 of them told their actual weights, Dr. Mitchell reported. Two girls gave their weights as nearly 50 pounds less than they really weighed.

Most women also have a tendency to state their weights in whole numbers divisible by five, Dr. Mitchell discovered. Of the 105 boarding school girls only 15 per cent actually weighed amounts divisible by five, but when asked their weights 46 per cent gave such figures.

The same rules held true, it was found, among students in a nursing school, who averaged 20 years of age. When asked their weights, only 10 per cent told them correctly.

Youthful "Gangs" Natural, He Finds

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—"Gangs" among boys and girls in the adolescent period were pictured as characteristic of all peoples, rather than an outgrowth of the industrial era, by speakers before the American Anthropological Association today.

Organizations similar to those of American youth were said by Father John M. Cooper, of Catholic University, Washington, to be general among British Guiana and African tribes. He suggested that "gangs" may be a universal social group.

"Many students have thought the gang to be an outgrowth of the breakdown in family life following the industrial revolution, but it seems that they may be more fundamental than formerly supposed," he said.

"Fog" Fills Trees, Not Merely Sap

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—If you cut a tree open you'll find it's full of fog, or water vapor.

This "fog" in trees is the basis of a new explanation of how sap moves up inside trees, presented today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Prof. George J. Pierce, of Stanford University, Calif.

Sap, or water, does not move in a solid column of liquid inside the tubes in the wood as formerly supposed, but as vapor inside a shell of water lining the insides of the tubes, he said.

Only at times when the tree has a surplus of water are there solid columns of water in the tubes and vessels.

Water molecules constantly are being lost from leaves at the top of the tree, and whenever one molecule is lost the whole water system is readjusted, Prof. Pierce said. Water molecules move much faster and easier in the form of vapor than liquid. So they slip along the wood on the way from roots to leaves.

Test Tube Plant Amazes Scientists

ing discarded," said Dr. White, "all of them had been retained and had grown at rates corresponding to the observed mean values, the total number of branches would today be a mass of tissue equal to about seven and a half times the volume of the earth."

More interesting to the scientists is the reason why this root continues growth. It was cut off at a time when there were no leaves to supply chlorophyll, the green coloring matter which plants use as a chemical to absorb food from sunlight and air. There might have been some chlorophyll stored in the original seed.

"But," said Dr. White, "most of the roots growing today can not possibly contain even as much as one molecule of the material of the original piece. They must be entirely built up of material taken from the artificial nutrient, so that this nutrient has proved to be adequate to supply all the needs of such isolated growth."

Earth Crust Floats, Geologist Believes

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Prof. W. T. Thom, jr., of Princeton University, attending the Geological Society of America convention, today said it is the consensus of students of Montana mountains that the earth's crust floats on mobile rock.

A symposium of the results of studies in the last four years in the Yellowstone-Bear Tooth-Big Horn region in Montana, in which 10 colleges, universities, and research organizations are cooperating, was contained in four papers which he analyzed in an interview.

Prof. Thom said it is the belief of geologists that the earth's crust is 70 miles deep.

Science Sharpens Its Eye for Stars

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—A new kind of "electronic telescope," which will be equivalent to a glass lens 166 feet in diameter was proposed to astronomers at the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

Model parts of such a telescope, showing that it probably is practicable, have been made and were described by Dr. Francois Henroteau, of the Dominion Observatory, Ottawa, Canada.

The telescope would work on the principle of television, and throw on a movie screen images of stars enlarged to a diameter of several feet. The light from a star would focus on a special plate, as at present, but instead of being developed into a small photograph, this plate would be scanned by beams from electronic tubes.

Starlight falling on such a plate would produce electrical energy, which the electronic tubes would pick up, amplify millions of times, and translate into a faithful picture. One part of this principle already has been in use by astronomers giving them details of distant space never "seen" through telescopes.

The recent cut in dimensions of distant nebulae and discovery of absorption of light by clouds of dust in space are one practical result of these tubes.

Fish Has Tail Eye, Scientist Discovers

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—The crayfish has an eye in his tail—at the very end of it. This discovcovery was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by Dr. C Ladd Prosser, of Harvard Medical School. This third eye sees more slowly than the normal eyes.

'Airplane' Baby 'Doing Nicely'

Operation Is Successful, Noted Specialist Sees Improvement.

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—"The baby is doing nicely. She should be ready to go home in two or three weeks."

Thus Dr. Walter E. Dandy, noted surgeon, tonight reported the probable success of the delicate brain operation he performed this morning on 5-month-old Sue Trammell, flown 1,400 miles from Houston, Tex., to Baltimore, in what her parents believed to be a race with death.

"She came out of the ether all right, and is taking her feeding nicely," the surgeon said.

This morning, when Sue went into the operating room, hospital attaches said that the baby's life depended upon the outcome. The "very dangerous" operation might kill her, they said, but without it she certainly would die.

Two hours later attendants wheeled the baby back to her room. Dr. Dandy and his assistant, Dr. Paul A. Kunkel, issued the following statement:

"The operation may be termed successful. The obstruction which caused the hydro-cephalus condition has been removed. The ultimate outcome of the operation, can not, of course, be determined at this time."

Gen. Calles to Retire.

Mexico City, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former president, will retire January 1 as financial secretary in the cabinet of President Abelardo Rodriguez, it was announced officially tonight.

PWA Signs $77,000,000 Loan With Pennsy for Electrification

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Ickes and representatives of the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday signed a contract for a $77,000,000 loan to the carrier from the public works fund, for electrification between Philadelphia and Washington, and for 7,000 new freight cars and 100 electric locomotives.

The company originally had been granted $84,000,000, but did not require all of the money because of a change in plans.

Signing of the loan contract was delayed by discussions over wage rates. The Pennsylvania agreed to pay unskilled labor not less than $15 a week, and it was agreed that for the electric locomotives built by outside manufacturers, wages and hours of labor would be governed by NRA codes.

Public works officials estimated more than 45,000,000 man-hours of labor would be created by the work, described as the "largest private construction job" in the country.

"This loan creates employment and purchasing power from coast to coast," Secretary Ickes said after the signing. "The Pennsylvania will call thousands of its men back to work.

"Work can begin immediately, for the Pennsylvania has plans and schedules of work prepared and is resuming construction on a job partially complete, which it was compelled to suspend because of economic conditions."

Lily Pons Divorced From August Mesritz

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Paris edition of the Herald Tribune says the divorce of Lily Pons, Metropolitan Opera star, from August Mesritz, has been revealed in a French tribunal.

The French singer herself admitted it a few days ago. "Yes," she said, "it is all finished, but we are very good friends. I have lunch with him when I am in Paris." She was married to Mesritz, a Dutch businessman, in Cannes in 1923.

Funeral Services For George Baum

Funeral services will be held today at 11 o'clock for George L. W. Baum, who died Thursday after a brief illness.

The rites will be conducted at Joseph H. Eirch's Sons funeral home, and burial will be in Congressional Cemetery. Mr. Baum, who was 72, had lived here all his life. He was with the Postoffice Department for 46 years, and drove the first automobile truck ever used here. He retired from the department three years ago.

Mr. Baum is survived by his widow, Mrs. Minerva E. Baum, and five children, G. Lawrence, John C., Robert H., Caleb C., and Cecilia M. Baum, all of Washington.

Family Idle, Girl Dies Excited by Finding Job

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 29 (AP).—Virginia Names, 18, passed an examination this morning preparatory to entering the first job she ever ever had. This, with the fact that all other members of her family are unemployed, is believed to have excited the girl so that she collapsed while on her way to her new work.

She died two hours later.

City Rum Bill Sure to Meet House Battle

ment dispensary system and Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, member of the Senate District Committee, said that plan had been urged on him, but he was not committed to it.

The proposal to pass a liquor control bill for the District of Columbia through the House on the second day of the session is sure to meet with vigorous opposition," Representative Smith said. "As this probably is the only opportunity Congress will have to record its views on the proper method of liquor control, I believe that hearings and proper time for consideration and debate will be demanded.

Outlines Two Systems.

"There are two very distinct lines of thought on the question of how to best control the liquor problem since repeal. They are first: The system of private sale and private profit, which, I understand, is proposed in the bill that has been approved. The second is a dispensary system or sale by Government agencies eliminating all elements of private profit from the retail sale of whisky.

"The first proposal is subject to the serious and inherent objection to the sale of whisky by the drink to be consumed on the premises where sold.

"I am confident that a large number of the members of Congress, myself included, will wish to record their opposition to this method of dispensing liquor and will wish for the further opportunity of voting for some form of dispensary system, such as the well conceived plan recently recommended by the Liquor Control Commission of Virginia. I hope the opportunity will be accorded the membership to vote for such an alternative plan in place of the proposed bill, which latter, I fear, will be subject to perversions and evasions that will lead to many of the evils inherent in the old system that brought about the adoption of the eighteenth amendment."

Enactment of a satisfactory liquor law will prove "one of the first and biggest problems confronting the friends of the District in Congress," Senator Capper siad.

Seeks Residents' Views.

"I am anxious to see the legislation offered by the Commissioners and I believe the people of Washington should have ample opportunity to give Congress their views on how this grave question should be met. I think that any such legislation should be given careful study and that residential, school and church areas should be fully protected against the sale of liquor in their vicinities.

"I have had advanced the idea that no licenses to sell liquor should be granted, but that all sales should be made through dispensaries. I am not committed at this time to any particular form of control for the District. It is quite evident that the repeal of National prohibition certainly has not ended the liquor problem. I am only interested in seeing that the District shall have the best possible law on the subject, protecting as fully as possible all family and church interests."

The bill in its final form, and particularly the tax provisions, carried approval of the Treasury Department, and, it is understood, the President. For that reason, the Commissioners believe that its chances for early enactment are good despite expressions of disapproval as to certain provisions on Capitol Hill.

"I expect to see a return to the 5-cent glass of beer following removal of the beer tax," Commissioner George E. Allen said.

$750,000 Yearly Levy.

The District government can expect an income of $750,000 a year from liquor sales and license fees, according to Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, or almost $500,000 more than is now being derived from beer.

The license scale as included in the bill also is substantially lower, as it relates to the retail trade, than were original proposals. Washington dealers, it is believed, will be able to sell liquor and wines as cheap or cheaper than dealers in any State if Congress adopts recommendations of the commissioners.

The 50 cent tax is less than half of the $1.10 tax charged in Maryland, and Washingtonians will have the added advantage of keen competition that is absent in the Montgomery County dispensary system.

A final provision adopted by the District heads stated that the city tax would be withdrawn if Congress decides to share the Federal tax with the States and the District.

The license scale is as follows: Distilleries or rectifying plants, $2,000; winery, $500; distilleries of alcohol used for nonbeverage purposes, $1,000; breweries, $2,500; wholesalers for liquor and wines, $1,500; beer wholesalers, $750.

Retailers' off-sale liquor licenses, $750; off-sale beer, $75; restaurants, $500; hotels, $1,000; clubs, $250; marine vessels, $50 a month or $500 a year; railway dining cars, $5 a month or $50 a year; tavern, for sale of beer, $150.

Fees for Pharmacies.

Pharmacies for sale by prescription, $25; temporary permits for banquets, &c., $5 a day; solicitors, $2 a year; transfer fees, $25.

The licenses will run from February 1 of each year. Commissioner Allen said yesterday that plans now under discussion would eliminate necessity of issuing temporary licenses and yet would not slow the machinery of legalizing liquor in Washington.

A tax of $1.10 a gallon was proposed for straight alcohol sales, thus placing a penalty on the prohibition home industry of making gin.

That the District bill carries indorsement of not only the Treasury, but the President, was apparent yesterday after Commissioner Allen conferred against with Acting Secretary Morgenthau of the Treasury before the tax scale was announced.

Upon announcing the tax, Allen issued a formal statement, as follows:

"These taxes represent the present opinion of the Treasury Department and the District Commissioners, and are believed to be in agreement with the President's ideas."

Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the board, stated he understood the President had approved the tax schedule.

Official Suspended In Virginia CCC

Charge Involving Purchase of Supplies Probed.

A. E. Demaray, associate director of National Parks, said yesterday Don C. Fisher, superintendent of the Civilian Conservation Camps in the Richmond Battlefields Park, had been suspended pending investigation of a charge he was guilty of irregularities in making purchases for the camp, the Associated Press reported.

Demaray said a preliminary investigation indicated Fisher was at fault only in the matter of procedure. A final decision in the case, he said, would be made next week.

Fisher's permanent position with the National Parks office is assistant chief ranger of the Colonial National Monument in Virginia. He was loaned to the CCC to direct work of 200 men in the park area. Demaray said reports of Fisher's work at Richmond had been highly laudatory.

Four Seized In Gun Battle Are Indicted

Larceny Charges Accuse Quartet Captured by Detective.

Four men, arrested in a room at the Arlington Hotel after a pistol battle with Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, were indicted yesterday by the District grand jury on a charge of housebreaking and larceny. They are Charles Earl Neal, Leslie F. Williams, John Marshall Tabler and Lawrence Edward McNally.

Brass was commended by the District Commissioners for his bravery in capturing the quartet single-handed. He braved pistol fire from within the room and retaliated with several shots from his weapon before the men surrendered.

The indictment charges the men with taking $20 and a pistol from the apartment of Tom Moore, in whose room they were seized.

A second indictment charged Neal and Williams with robbing Herbert Glassman, automobile dealer, of $1,600 and a $465 stickpin at the Raleigh Hotel last August. Glassman was enticed to the room on the pretext he was wanted to discuss an automobile deal. He was seized and bound with adhesive tape.

Neal is mentioned in a third indictment as having obtained $10.75 from Mrs. Anna Mitchell during a holdup in her home, 912 Sixth street northwest, last June. Neal and two others forced their way into the Mitchell home, it is alleged, and took the money from a purse. The others have not been identified.

Chesapeake Ice Disables Steamer

Ship Grounded and Cutter Sent to Take Crew.

Baltimore, Dec. 29 (AP).—With a hole ripped in its port bow and in danger of more damage from ice floes, the Ericsson Line steamer, Louise, was grounded in 9 feet of water tonight a quarter of a mile off Pooles Island in Chesapeake Bay.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Apache left Baltimore to stand by the stricken vessel and take off its captain and crew of 17 men if necessary. Other craft were obtained to unload its cargo.

Water was 4 feet deep in the engine room and there was danger that blocks of ice, coming down the bay, would ram more holes in the side of the steamer.

Johnson Hits Detached Aim Of Scientists

NRA Is a "Day-to-Day" Tussle, Lowell Told in Letter.

A fervent wish that "you and other distinguished men of science and letters would get down into the sawdust with me and govern this thing in the day-to-day tussle of actual experience, instead of standing aside and conjecturing results on purely academic consideration," was expressed yesterday by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in a letter to Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, regretting the latter's refusal to serve on the motion picture industry code authority.

The Recovery Administrator, after making his letter public, said he had made several efforts to have the Harvard University president emeritus represent the Government, but that the matter now is closed.

Gen. Johnson's letter follows:

"Dear Dr. Lowell:

"Replying to yours of December 18.

"You say that your refusal is based first on your statement that the block booking clause is monopolistic.

"All that my remarks on the limits of my authority to stop block booking and blind buying meant was that I can not repeal the copyright laws on which these practices are based, and which, under the Constitution, were intended to create a monopoly for writers and authors.

"But we did get a voluntary concession of a 10 per cent cancellation clause. The whole procedure is experimental. I was able to negotiate this concession, which I had the power to impose. I could not, more, because I was unable to negotiate more. The question as to whether it will do the trick or not will not be answered by conjecture but by test—all I asked of you was that you conduct the test. I thought you were the best man to do it because you are well known to have a poignant interest in the result.

"You object also because the Government representative has no vote. It is not important that the Government representative has no vote. He would have in every case a veto. This law is not intended to put the responsibility for industrial management on Government, but to give Government an absolute veto over what industry does. I would not have it otherwise and neither, I think (on more mature reflection) would you.

"I am sorry you feel as you do, but I wish that you and other distinguished men of science and letters would get down into the sawdust with me and govern this thing in the day-to-day tussle of actual experience, instead of standing aside and conjecturing results on purely academic consideration."

Jury Charges 2 More Police

Pair Indicted Fell Into Marked Bill Trap, Officials Testify.

Two motorcycle policemen were indicted by the grand jury yesterday on extortion charges. Private John R. LeFoe and Henry L. Woods, Traffic Bureau, are the accused men.

Charges were preferred several weeks ago by Wayne B. King, 72 Girard street northwest. King told police officials that LeFoe and Woods had arrested him on a traffic charge and asked $10 to free him.

Police Sergts. J. D. Harrington and William J. Cunningham declared they saw LeFoe, in the presence of Wood, accept two marked $5 bills in a rendezvous arranged with King. LeFoe and Woods were suspended immediately.

The LeFoe-Woods case was the second of alleged extortion by District policemen within six months.

Doran Attacks Laws Forcing Whisky Labels

Warns Local Authorities Against Move to Aid Consumer.

James M. Doran, supervisor of the Distillers Code Authority, yesterday warned local officials throughout the country that unless they ceased their "destructive attempts" to force label regulations on distillers, "the legal distilled spirits industry will be compelled to shut down."

At the same time it was announced by Joseph H. Choate, Federal Alcohol Administrator, that Great Britain, Portugal, Soviet Russia and Argentina have made overtures for a large share of the American liquor market.

The Associated Press said representatives of the four nations talked with the interdepartmental control committee, but Portugal was the only power which was given positive assurance of an increased liquor quota.

Roosevelt Signs Wine Code.

Meanwhile, a code for the domestic wine industry was signed by President Roosevelt.

Approval was given the wine code after it had been initialed by Secretary Wallace following a series of conferences between representatives of the industry and the President's committee on the control of alcohol.

Portugal's initial quota of 60,000 gallons has been exhausted and an additional quota of 60,000 gallons was granted by the interdepartmental committee. Great Britain's initial quota of 607,000 gallons also is exhausted. Boris Skvirsky, the Russian Charge d' Affaires, sought permits for the admission of approximately 100,000 gallons of vodka and wine in addition to the 15,000 gallons already shipped from Russia. The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, made a similar representation.

Mr. Doran's warning was aimed at those officials who have intervened in the interests of the consumer.

"Many years of inquiry by commissions, executive and legislative, in the United States and abroad, have been spent in determining the question, 'what is whisky?'" he said. "There are other kinds of good wholesome whiskeys than so-called straight bottled in bond of many years' maturity, the supply of which is exceedingly limited in this country at present. Ill-considered and hasty attempts being made by various local authorities at this time to forthwith determine what is whisky and how it should be labeled, can result in nothing beyond turning the entire market over to the bootleggers and to foreign manufacturers, defeating the whole purposes sought to be attained in the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

The code supervisor, who was formerly United States Commissioner of Industrial Alcohol, declared that the bootleg industry is still strong and is in every market with imitation brands and labels. He also said most whisky of foreign origin is not of the "bottled in bond variety," but is a blend of straight whisky and neutral spirits.

Says Laws Can't Work Miracle.

"Before prohibition," he declared, the distillers had in storage stocks of matured whisky running between 250,000,000 and 300,000,000 gallons, or four or five times the annual withdrawals. These stocks must again be built up over a period of time, and no amount of ill-considered local regulation can perform this miracle within 30 days. Existing distilling capacities, together with new units that will operate within 30 days will bring about a highly competitive condition in the industry within a short time."

The legal distillers, according to Mr. Doran, are working to meet as soon as possible the demand for a reasonably priced and wholesome blended whisky. He pointed out that the industry has placed before the Federal Alcohol Control Administration "proposals relating to labels and classifications which, it is believed, will be given very careful consideration and result in Federal regulations within a short time."

Christmas Tree Earns "Keep" in New England

Enfield, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—In this thrifty Yankee town even the Christmas trees must "earn their keep." One tree started its career at the Grange party. Then it moved on to the Congregational Church, where it served at two gatherings. Yesterday it moved along to the Quabbin Club quarters for another celebration, and tonight its drooping branches held presents for the Eastern Star party.

"We know that the continued existence on heavy exports in excess of imports by a creditor nation is bound to lead to disaster. We know today that the great unemployment is in the so-called heavy industries, and that this could be remedied if with in a profound new excitement swept the country like the railroad boom of the early eighties, or the automobile boom of the twenties.

"This boom could take the form of totally new railroad equipment, or the popularization of new and better airplanes, or the making fashionable of winter homes and winter industries for everyone in the South, and a duplicate summer set in the North.

"We know we must have a monetary system which will bring about a better balance between debtor and creditor and between productive power and consumptive power.

"These things can be measured, and social machines can be built to deal with them, but before success can be expected, there must run through the rank and file of the people a feeling that amounts to a profound determination to deal with social problems."

Silver Advocates Get Ready for New Session

Underwood & Underwood.

Borah Assails "Dictatorship" For Oil Trade

Senator Asserts It Will Create Trust, Ruin Independents.

charged, is a "decoy" for the large oil companies. He said he has a large file of letters and telegrams from independent companies protesting the agreement. The Idahoan said an inquiry by him revealed that all but one of the contributors to the Franklin organization were "major oil companies."

In his letter to Mr. Ickes, Senator Borah maintained that since June 1, last, gasoline prices alone, exclusive of other refined products, have increased at the rate of $486,000,000 annually, while the costs superinduced by the code are only $125,000,000 a year. He said the "guaranteed marketing margin of 6 cents a gallon on gasoline under the agreement would add another $250,000,000 annually to the consumers' burden.

"This guarantee seems to be unfair to the public and only serves to increase the profits of the big companies, who, according, to the figures available, are now making very large profits," the Senator wrote. "The effect of this guaranteed margin also will eliminate from the marketing of gasoline the low-cost distributors who have heretofore been able to pass on their savings to the consumer to the mutual advantage of both parties."

The marketing agreement further puts in the hands of a small group "representing the big interests, the large companies, the power to control, or influence, the trend of prices at their will without regard to the public interest," Senator Borah continued.

Cites Past Experience.

"It may be argued that this power will not be abused, but such argument would be in the face of all the experience of the past where power and profits are combined, and also at war with human nature," he asserted, adding: "If we are not convinced by the history of the large oil companies of this country that such power would be abused, there would be no way to convince us, except through actual experience and after the public had suffered extortion."

Senator Borah maintained that section 4 of the marketing agreement "gives this small group of private interests absolute and dictatorial powers of punishment over those who do not conform to their policies."

"This seems to me," he asserted, "a perfectly indefensible provision. It gives powers which ought not to be lodged anywhere, but certainly not with those who are interested in private gain."

He said he believed the observation was warranted that the agreements combined "have the effect of establishing a complete system of price-fixing in the hands of the oil industry itself, controlled by the major companies without the intervention of any public agency."

Warns of Blow to Public.

Pointing out that the public has no voice in the operation of the agreements and that no measure of Government supervision is provided, Senator Borah contended that "the prices are to be fixed by those interested in the industry" with competitive factors eliminated or definitely controlled as far as possible. The agreements, he held, take away the constitutional rights of consumers and low-cost marketers.

"This constitutes a fundamental objection to the agreements," he added. "If we are to have price-fixing, let it be Governmental price-fixing."

The pool production agreement, he argued, would enable the large companies to restrict the sale of gasoline to the amount they can handle at a profit after next July 1. He said the power to buy a "surplus" over the determined amount on any date could be used "to ruin consecutively all independent marketers throughout the country by applying the pool's purchasing at any point where independent competition is strong, thus drying up the latter's supply of gasoline."

Cites Chance of Coercion.

Referring to the stabilization committees provided in the agreements, Senator Borah contended these would be controlled by the large companies which, in turn "may control the marketing activities of all competitors who are signers of the agreement in any locality."

These committees, he pointed out, have the power to veto any signer's desire to meet competition, as well as the "arbitrary discretionary power to coerce and boycott distributors, jobbers, wholesalers, or retail dealers by means of suspension of supplies."

How Banks Plan to Collect

New York Banks Plan to Charge on "Piecework" Basis for Most Services; Baltimore Depositors to Pay for Checks, Even "N.S.F."

Service charges against their customers were announced by New York and Baltimore banks yesterday, but Gen. Hugh S. Johnson repudiated an NRA headquarters' announcement that he had approved the set-up. Johnson's action automatically holds up the schedule of charges which are outlined here.

The Baltimore schedule includes, among other service charges, a rate of $1 against a customer's account for each check refused because of insufficient funds and a charge of 3 cents on each check in excess of ten a month drawn against accounts averaging less than $200. This is in addition to the Government tax of 2 cents on each check drawn. A charge of 3 cents will be levied also in Baltimore against debit items in excess of a stipulated number.

In addition, the Baltimore code provides that deposits of business concerns, deposits of public moneys and court and fiduciary deposits can not be considered savings deposits. The Baltimore code also provide that the following will be the maximum rates of interest on savings accounts: 3 per cent on the first $10,000, 2 per cent on the next $10,000 and 1 per cent on the remaining balance in the account.

The New York code provides for a fee in Manhattan of $2 a month on checking accounts of $500 or less, minus a credit allowance of 5 cents a month for each $25 of balance kept, and in addition a charge of 2½ cents for each check drawn or deposited over a quota of two items per $25 balance. The code for the Bronx, Kings, Queens and Richmond Counties makes the same provisions, except the minimum is fixed at $200.

The code provides that for cashing a check drawn on a bank other than the one to which it is presented a charge of 10 cents shall be made for each check of less than $100 and 25 cents for each check over $100, except where the maker of the check is a depositor of the bank.

The New York code, in addition, eliminates interest on Christmas club or vacation club accounts. It provides a charge of 50 cents against any thrift depositor who closes his account within three months of opening it. Hundreds of other charges are listed, including "piecework" fees in foreign departments, fees for trust services, for life insurance trusts, for handling public funds and for the safekeeping of securities.

Darrow Urges Study of Crime

Tells Prosecutors to Scan Cause in Each Case.

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Clarence Darrow, celebrated defense lawyer, faced 50 Illinois County prosecutors tonight and pleaded with them to revise their views on crime.

"No one is willing to give his time to work out a scientific solution to the causes of crime," Darrow said, "but the time will come when things will be made over and it will not be by lawyers and judges but by scholars, who have studied the deep-seated causes that lie behind."

Darrow attributed a great amount of the crime during the last four years to poverty, want and distress "caused by the rich hogs who milk the poor until they have nothing."

flecting pool thickened to more than 3 inches yesterday and was crowded with skaters. Park police set up lights during the night and hundreds frolicked on the glazed pool until midnight.

Police continued to work shifts, spending four hours on the street and four hours in the warmth of station houses.

Speeding up distribution of Federal surplus coal, L. A. Snead, fuel adviser of the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, announced last night that approximately 5,000 District families were mailed vouchers for coal, available today.

Postal authorities assured relief officials that notices would all be delivered today, despite half-holiday hours.

One hundred and twenty-five coal dealers have promised cooperation in making quick deliveries. Allotment of a half-ton and one ton will be made.

Snead and Leroy A. Halbert, District relief director, said yesterday that investigation had disclosed several hundreds of families without coal. Applications for relief are being made through Halbert's office at John Marshall place and C street northwest.

Motorists Hard Hit.

Reports from the Shenandoah Valley indicated that section had experienced near-zero temperatures early yesterday and was still in the grip of the chill wave.

Motorists here were hard struck by the cold weather. American Automobile Association officials reported calls at the rate of 150 an hour. Garages also were swamped with calls.

Northeastern United States and Canada were enveloped in bitterly cold temperatures that dropped to the 40s and 50s below in upland New York and across the North. A weather observer telephone from atop Mount Washington, highest point in New England, that the mercury there was 46 below, with the wind blowing at 90 to 115 miles an hour.

Johnson Kills Banking Codes, Fires Deputy

out the country, in pursuance of provisions of the bankers' code of fair competition, have not yet been approved by the administrator and are not effective until they are so approved.

"Each local or State association, under the code, may submit such rules, but in every case the proposed rules will be subjected by the administrator to careful scrutiny in the public interest.

"The statement that any such standard rules have been approved by the administrator is absolutely unauthorized. They have not even been submitted to the administrator."

Deadline Extended.

Simultaneously, Johnson sent telegrams to banking authorities informing them that the time for filing proposed fair trade practices agreements with the NRA was being extended to February 1.

Johnson's denial that standard fair practice rules for banks had been approved was in direct contradiction to the press release from NRA stating that Johnson had announced approval of such rules.

"The proposed rules," the announcement added, "are offered merely to guide local banking or clearing house associations in the development of the uniform local regulations which are contemplated in the bankers code of fair competition which becomes effective on January 1, 1934. Under the code, banking operations may not be conducted at a loss nor unfairly to small institutions."

The rules, which Gen. Johnson denies he approved, provide, among other things, that:

1. The hours of banking in various territories and communities will be as nearly uniform as possible.

2. The maximum rate of interest paid on time accounts will be governed by the regulations of the Federal Reserve Board.

3. The schedule of banking charges for services rendered its customers will be fair, alike both to the bank and to the customer, with the latter compensating the bank for such services only as he requires.

Black Confused, Too.

Evidently under the misapprehension that Johnson had approved the standard uniform rules, E. R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Banks, issued a statement commenting on the rules.

"I am glad," he said, "that due publicity is being given to real attitude of both the banks and the NRA in connection with proposed uniform fair trade practices under the bankers' code.

"The banks voluntarily entered into that code agreement. The NRA approved its agreements and purposes. All parties had in mind and included in the code the desire to aid in the matter of employment, wages and services, all as contemplated in the purposes of NRA.

"The rules of banking based on that code required certain service charges in the interest of sound banking. These service charges were not new in the banking world and were necessary for the success of the banks and the successful operation of the code agreement of those banks."

Suicide, Says Johnson.

When the proposed New York and Baltimore service charges were called to Gen. Johnson's attention at a press conference yesterday he said:

"Of course, if the banks want to commit suicide I don't know who will worry about stopping them. My interest would be the public interest. I am not going to attempt to tell the banks what they should do."

It is believed the Washington code follows in a general way those proposed for New York and Baltimore.

H. H. McKee, president of the Washington Clearing House Association, said the public here will not be seriously affected for the reason that many of the banks have had such charges in effect for years.

He said the proposed code provides a scientific method of analysis of accounts which is practically the same as that which has been in force in many well-managed banks for years and will be uniform in all banks under the code. He added that the code provides that accounts must not be carried by banks at a loss, and that those accounts in which the balances already are adequate to meet the services required will receive no charge. Mr. McKee declined to state what balances would be considered adequate.

Other accounts, he announced, will be analyzed, and customers will be asked to carry a balance adequate to meet the service requirement, and only in such cases as those in which the accounts are inadequate for the service required will there be a direct service charge. In the main, it was said, the factors which are used to arrive at the analysis are practically the same as have been in use in most of the banks for many years.

There was no announcement as to whether minimum interest rates for savings accounts would be fixed by the proposed code.

RFC Men Must Work Despite Holiday Today

All employes of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will work today in disregard of an executive order declaring the day a holiday.

Officials explained the holiday could not be observed on account of preferred stock applications from banks throughout the country, which must be passed on promptly. Only a few RFC workers will be required to work tomorrow or Monday.

Britten Praises Roosevelt's Program for Navy Building

One Stroke of Pen Called Best Move in 14 Years by House Leader.

The following story is one of a series of pre-Congress stories written for the Associated Press by men who will be on the firing line. It is by a former chairman of the House Naval Committee.

By Fred A. Britten

(Ranking Republican Member of the House Naval Committee.)

When President Roosevelt alloted $238,000,000 of NRA money last June for the construction of 4 light cruisers, 20 destroyers, 4 submarines, 2 aircraft carriers and 2 gunboats, he did more by the mere stroke of his pen toward the acquirement of a well-balanced fleet than has been done by all previous Administrations in 14 years.

Those 32 ships added to the 22 already under construction will make it simple and very economical for the Government to carry on an orderly program of new ship construction beginning with 1935, which by 1939 would give us the strength we are obligated to carry under the nominal cost of $96,000,000 a year.

Will Introduce Bill.

Under a bill which I will introduce in the forthcoming Congress, there will be authorized in 1935 14 destroyers, 6 submarines and 3 cruisers; in 1936, 14 destroyers, 6 submarines, 1 cruiser and 1 airplane carrier; in 1937, 13 destroyers, 6 submarines, 1 cruiser and 1 replacement battleship; in 1938, 12 destroyers, 6 submarines, 1 cruiser and 1 replacement battleship; in 1939, 12 destroyers, 5 submarines, 1 cruiser and 1 replacement battleship, making a total in five years of 104 ships which, when completed, will give the United States a navy second to none in the world.

States Naval Objectives.

The announced naval policy of the Roosevelt Administration is to maintain the Navy in sufficient strength to support the National policies and commerce, and to guard the continental and overseas possions of the United States and to organize the Navy for operations in either or both oceans so that expansion only will be necessary in the event of war; and to protect American lives and property wherever they may be.

I consider the building up of the National defense as important as any public works construction in the country. I will press my bill for early passage.

Students Hear Senator Fess; Picket Store

Senator Long Relieves Day's Seriousness by Wisecracks.

Ranging from Huey Long and the tangles of parliamentary law to the questions of world peace and campus politics, the city's convening students yesterday neared the end of their several sessions.

After a morning at American University spent in discussion of fraternity and undergraduate life, the National Student Federation returned to the Mayflower to listen to Senator Simeon D. Fess (Republican), Ohio, tell them that the United States must retain a naval parity with its leading rivals. He praised the Kellogg Pact of Paris in reviewing efforts to obtain a permanent peace.

He gave his conception of ideal international relations as a status in which all nations were allowed to carry out their own plans as long as they did not interfere with others and violate international law.

Senator Long Breaks Tension.

A few moments after hearing the Ohio Senator, student delegates crowded around Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana, in the hotel lobby as he wisecracked with them. He told them Louisiana was such a "great State" that outsiders were trying to push the natives out.

In leaving, he commented, with a grin, "Come and see me some time; but be sure you come in fours!"

Following this lighter diversion, the students plunged into parliamentary law. Piling amendment upon amendment until a hopeless tangle resulted in laughter, the group finally tabled a motion to back junior NRA clubs because the students felt they were not sufficiently "credentialed" to speak for their respective student bodies.

Pickets Dispersed.

Two score picketers from the League for Industrial Democracy were dispersed by a squad of police from the Second Precinct late yesterday after they had picketed a Seventh street store.

Later six of the picketers appeared at Police Headquarters and complained to Lieut. Horace Lineburg that banner and placards had been wrenched from them and that nightsticks had been drawn. Lineburg took the matter under investigation.

After the picketing the delegates joined with the National Conference on Students in Politics at the Chamber of Commerce to listen to more serious speeches.

A suggestion to the N. S. F. from William J. Rowan, chairman of the franchise committee of the local division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, that the franchise question be put on the group's agenda was tentatively accepted by John Lang, president of the N. S. F. He said he would turn the matter over to the proper committee.

This morning the N. S. F. will have a question and answer period on international affairs between Representative Charles West, Ohio, and Arthur S. Fleming, executive director of the United States Society.

At a luncheon at 11:30 Speaker Henry T. Rainey will be the guest and his talk will be broadcast over the Columbia system. More sessions and a grand ball will follow in the evening.

The conference will close Sunday morning.

But Berlin believed Mr. Roosevelt indicated that the arms question was purely a European affair and that his thoughts "show present-day America is far from the ill-famed Geneva spirit."

Statesmen in Geneva called the Roosevelt declaration—"the United States is cooperating more openly in the fuller utilization of the League of Nations machinery than ever before"—as the most encouraging remark made in the Americas during the development of the league.

In the southern neighbors of the United States, great interest was expressed particularly regarding two of the President's statements:

"The definite policy of the United States from now on is one opposed to armed intervention" and that "a better state of feeling among the neighbor nations of North and Central and South America exists today than at any time within a generation."

Cuban Leader "Gratified."

High circles in the Cuban government expressed complete satisfaction with the policy. Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army, said the President's words were "gratifying."

One London newspaper called the speech "admirable" and several others devoted much space to a report of the address.

Government officials in Chile studied the remarks, they said, "with considerable pleasure."

The Santo Domingo newspaper, La Opinion, commented favorably but said "many times the people are as guilty as the leaders."

discussed in the conference, but no decision has yet been reached.

Such a board would serve to carry out antitrust provisions already in the NIRA, which provides that codes "shall not promote monopolies or eliminate or oppress small enterprises." Its duties would be those of adjusting fair practices and would not necessarily mean modification of codes, it is understood.

Presumably, such a complaint board could be set up through the relatively simple procedure of an Executive order. Such a maze of questions are presented, however, including relative production of industries and other problems that might be covered by fair practices, that no solution has yet been determined.

While Mr. Roosevelt believes no member of Congress should serve on an administrative agency, he feels that if Congress would keep in closer touch with actual operation of government, it would benefit both. This could be done by Congressional committees, which would inspect, but not interfere with, various agencies of government.

The President is understood to feel the present system under which Congress periodically conducts investigations of specific branches of the Administration is of little value, either in preventing bad government or in gathering information. The development of such committee links between the Administration and Congress, however, he [illegible] would avoid scandals by pre[illegible] malfeasance in office and also work for frankness and public [illegible]

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt yesterday continued work on next year's budget with Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget. He has not yet started writing his budget message, it is understood, although several hours every day since Christmas have been spent wrestling with figures.

"Hard Boiled" Youth Smiles in Death Chair

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—Frank Vacchiano, 22, son of a well-to-do Dayton (Ohio) family, died with a smile tonight in the electric chair for the murder of a Toledo hotel clerk last spring.

Enraged because the clerk ejected him from the hotel, Vacchiano returned the following night and shot the clerk. Vacchiano was suspected of other killings, including that of his father. He prided himself on being "hard boiled."

Cronin Rejects Bail for Prison

3-Month Term Alternative After Irish Trial.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 29 (AP).—Commandant E. J. Cronin, opposition leader, announced tonight he would not give a peace bond to escape three months' imprisonment for membership in an unlawful association.

Earlier today Cronin was acquitted by a military tribunal of a charge of sedition, but was convicted of being a member of the Young Ireland Association and the National Guard, or Army Comrades Association, which the court held were "analagous."

The court stipulated a sentence of three months in prison would not be enforced if Cronin would supply bail of £50 (about $255) to keep the peace for two years.

Unhealthy Anthems.

According to Dr. Leo Kallen, of New York University, school children may be handicapped for life through singing such songs as "The Star-Spangled Banner," under inexpert direction. The song, Dr. Kallen said, has such a range that even the voice of an adult is taxed, to the truth of which all of us can testify.

The professor, however, is concerned primarily with the physical effect upon children of too much singing of the anthem. Perhaps the social effect of over-indulgence in patriotic music is no less important. "Deutschland Ueber Alles" is a grand melody, very simple to troll out in a stirring chorus. But for the good of Germany—back in 1914—it was perhaps just a little too easy to sing. Even at the expense of the vocal chords there is something to be said for the anthem which fails utterly to encourage goose-stepping and a contempt for all barbarians not fortunate enough to be citizens of one's own country.

Improving The Tugwell Bill.

Recent hearings on the so-called Tugwell food and drugs bill brought forth spirited opposition from a number of sources. As a result Senator Copeland, with the aid of the Department of Agriculture, is revising the measure to eliminate its objectionable features. It is understood that in its revised form the bill will throw more responsibility for the correction of present abuses upon the food and drug industries themselves.

As the bill was first drawn it would have given extensive powers to the Secretary of Agriculture. Food and drug manufacturers feared that they might be subjected to arbitrary regulations. The present attitude of the sponsors of the measure suggests that they are not interested in the form of the bill, nor in regimentation of the industries concerned, but only in protecting the public health by the most effective methods. If the extreme provisions are modified and the food and drug industries are asked to share the responsibility of keeping adulterated products off the market, opposition to the bill will be mitigated.

Few impartial observers question the need for revision of the present food and drugs act. It has been in effect for 27 years. Since its enactment many new foods and drugs have come into use and the cosmetics industry, which is not subject to the present law, has grown to huge proportions. Selling methods have changed so that labeling regulations are no longer sufficient to protect the public against false curative claims for quack medicines. Administrative loopholes in the present law have handicapped the Department of Agriculture in its fight against adulterated foods and drugs.

Since the sponsors of this measure are willing to amend its extreme provisions, and since high-principled manufacturers of foods and drugs appear to welcome correction of real abuses under the present law, there should be no great difficulty in securing the enactment of a reasonable and practical statute for protection of the public health.

American Opera.

Santa Claus undoubtedly brought to the opera goers of Chicago and New York a nice present when, on the night after Christmas, the Metropolitan, after a nine-month off-season, and the Chicago Opera, closed for two years, swung open their doors to brilliant audiences.

The reopening was highly comforting to all music lovers in this country. For some time it was doubted whether the Metropolitan's curtain would ever rise again. Unlike most opera houses abroad, the 50-year-old institution had been amply self-supporting from 1910 to 1929. But it had been running so far behind financially that its ability ever to overcome the depression was questioned. The difficulty was attributed not only to the depression but also to widespread disaffection toward operatic art in general. That an emergency fund of $300,000 could be raised by appeal to the public shows that there are Americans who regard good music as important.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza's choice of the inaugural play for the Metropolitan was highly gratifying. For the first time the season was opened with an American opera, "Peter Ibbetson," by Deems Taylor. Gatti explained that "the time was ripe to accord an American opera this distinction." Thus Mr. Taylor becomes the first American to share honors so far granted only to such great foreign composers as Verdi, Puccini or Wagner. On New Year's matinee, another American production, Gruenberg's "Emperor Jones" will be given. And later in the season Hanson's "Merry Mount" will be disclosed to the public. These three operas will set a record for American music in a single operatic season.

With such finished artists as Grace Moore, Queena Mario, Lawrence Tibbett, Richard Crooks and many others, nobody has ever questioned our vocal possibilities. But we also have composers of talent. While no sane person wishes to see music nationalized, it is but fair that native productions should be given due recognition. We must be grateful to the Metropolitan Opera of New York for having done so.

The Doctrine of Negation.

One of the great achievements of Woodrow Wilson, said President Roosevelt in his speech here Thursday night, was that his wartime predecessor "accelerated comprehension on the part of the people in every country." Fine words, these, and true words. The more the pity that President Roosevelt himself should have fallen so far short, in this address, of showing that sense of charity toward all which another illustrious predecessor in the White House urged.

To intimate, as the President was pleased to do, that "the political leaders" of countries other than our own are starkly reactionary and a chief stumbling block to the preservation of world peace is comprehensive in self-satisfaction, but scarcely comprehending in the sense that Woodrow Wilson used the word. Certainly it is permissible, and perhaps justifiable, for us to inform the rest of the world that its governments are deficient in virtues of leadership as measured by our standards. But a comprehension which takes in only the failings of others is not the sort of soil in which the fruits of friendship grow.

And Mr. Roosevelt showed himself similarly lacking in sympathy with, and understanding of, Mr. Wilson's philosophy when he drew from a fanciful picture of foreign political leaders the conclusion that intergovernmental cooperation in the political field is undesirable for this country. The conclusion itself may or may not be sound. But it is far from the Wilsonian tradition of making a brave attempt, at least, to build with the materials available. The League of Nations may only be, as Mr. Roosevelt slightingly calls it, "a prop in the world peace structure." Yet it has been, and remains, a far more substantial prop than any the present Administration has erected.

For the Roosevelt doctrine in international relations, as so far evinced, is predominantly of a negative nature. There have been assurances that when and if we get our own house in order we shall be willing to participate more actively in international reconstruction. But so far these are assurances only, as tenuous and unconvincing as the President's projected non-aggression pact, which seems little, if at all, in advance of the Kellogg Pact.

Even in the one substantial part of Mr. Roosevelt's address at the Wilson Memorial dinner—his reorientation of the Monroe Doctrine—the same negative, and therefore non-Wilsonian, note is evident. Flat-footed opposition to armed intervention in Latin America is admirable. Equally admirable is the thesis that when intervention is inevitable it should be handled as "the joint concern of a whole continent in which we are all neighbors." But when one reads on to see with what machinery the President would implement such action one finds only the remark that "a chain of events has led, of late, away from, rather than toward, the ultimate objectives of Woodrow Wilson!"

In that chain the policies of President Roosevelt are a substantial link.

Unemployment Insurance.

Senator Wagner is quoted as saying that he intends to urge the enactment of a national unemployment insurance measure as a "very essential part of this worthwhile movement toward the proper distribution of wealth." The observation is perplexing, to say the least.

Unemployment insurance systems are not established with the intention of bringing about a new apportionment of wealth. As the term indicates, they are set up to make provision for men who are out of work, willing to work, but unable to find work. If the insurance reserves are based upon contributions made by both employers and employes, possibly supplemented by fixed public grants, no shifting of resources is involved. The industry is merely charged with the support of its unemployed—a charge that otherwise would have to be borne by the community. As a result, unemployment insurance, when it is properly conceived, helps to maintain the social and economic status quo of employers and employes instead of operating to disturb existing relationships.

To imply, as Senator Wagner is said to do, that unemployment insurance provides a means for effecting a "proper distribution of wealth," shows a complete misconception of its purpose. Insurance against unemployment, if worthy of the name, will no more affect the distribution of wealth than does insurance against fire, automobile accidents, death or other universal hazards. Such misconceptions tend only to antagonize many people who otherwise might easily be won to support an actuarially sound system of unemployment insurance.

Railroad Needs.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is evidently uncertain as to the amount of governmental aid which will be necessary for the railroads during 1934. Railroad maturities for the coming year are about $400,000,000, exclusive of short-term notes. In his capacity as chairman of the R. F. C., Jesse Jones predicts that some Federal assistance in refinancing will have to be extended. But he guards his anticipations so carefully that surmise is the only word applicable to the estimate of $200,000,000 as the maximum of anticipated advances to the railroads next year.

Mr. Jones does well to be cautious in his estimates, even at a time when figures of hundreds of millions fly lightly from the lips of Government officials. In the first place none can at present foretell the extent to which the carriers may be able to take care of their own refunding needs if general business and financial conditions continue to improve. Railroad after railroad is now reporting marked increases in gross income over the comparable figures for last year. Increased business, coupled with revival of the securities market, would go far to cutting down the need for Federal assistance, perhaps to the desirable goal of zero.

Another factor which discounts hasty prediction as to the extent of railroad needs is the fact that transportation policy may soon be in process of reshaping. For months Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, has been studying the problem from the viewpoint of the varied and often conflicting needs of rail, highway, air, waterway and pipeline transport. It is probable that his report to the forthcoming Congress will contain recommendations of a far-reaching character. That report will be a factor of importance in any scientific estimate of future railroad needs.

Making Way For The PWA.

With commendable caution, considering all the circumstances, Secretary Ickes has now completed the feat of allocating for expenditure the entire $3,300,000,000 public works fund. The program has been completed in less than six months, with an average daily outgo of more than $18,000,000. Never before in peace time has there been such a great extension of Federal credit for public works, or any other single purpose, in so short a period.

Approximately three-quarters of this fund has been allotted to Federal projects, although this category includes $400,000,000 for roads, $100,000,000 for the Federal Housing Corporation and $400,000,000 for "civil works," all of which are more or less of a local nature. When the final allotments have been approved by the President it is expected that the total for non-Federal projects will exceed $800,000,000.

As this vast sum is spent for wages and materials it will necessarily have a stimulating effect upon industry. But it would be a serious mistake to assume that all of the projects which the Government is financing through the PWA will provide a net increase in employment. A considerable part of this fund is being used for routine Federal activities that otherwise would have been discontinued for want of funds in the ordinary budget. Moreover, the non-Federal grants and loans serve chiefly to replace public works appropriations made normally by the States and municipalities.

During the three-year period from 1928 to 1930 the States spent an average of $1,290,000,000 annually on public works. Even during 1931 State expenditures for this purpose amounted to $1,127,212,000. In 1932 Congress authorized loans to the States for self-liquidating projects, and public works expenditures by the States fell to $627,719,000. Since the Government launched its current program of financing public works, appropriations for this purpose by the States have undergone another sharp decline. From January to August, according to the magazine "State Government," the annual rate of expenditure fell to $292,612,000.

The decline in State expenditures for public works since 1931 and the aggregate non-Federal allotments by the PWA are almost equal. Of course, there may be a strong element of coincidence in this showing, but the fact that the States tend to withdraw from job-creating activities as the Federal Government assumes that responsibility is well established—and highly significant.

Time for Action.

Washington's urgent need for a modern airport is emphasized once more by the announcement that the Federation Aeronautique Internationale will hold its 1934 conference here next October. This world association of aeronautic clubs will bring to Washington representatives of 34 nations. Some of the most distinguished aviators and promoters of aviation in the world are expected to attend. But if they come by air they may have to land on a field that is a disgrace to the National Capital.

Plans for a model airport in Washington are pending before the Public Works Administration. The use of P. W. A. funds for this improvement appears to be the only method through which early action can be expected. In view of the urgent need for more adequate facilities, and the scheduled meeting here of Federation Internationale a decision in the matter should be made without further delay. It would put a severe strain upon the reputation of American aviation if the aeronautic leaders of the world should be brought here under present conditions.

Pilots, engineers and promoters in other countries doubtless have read that Uncle Sam intends to spend $500,000 in the development of an inexpensive airplane for private use. Maybe they have also heard that the Government is spending a large sum on the improvement of airports in towns and hamlets throughout the country. What a shock it would be for them to descend upon the Capital City and find its airport bisected by a public highway!

A Correction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the President's speech last night at the Woodrow Wilson Foundation dinner, which I heard over the radio, the President feelingly referred to a memorandum handed to him by my old office associate, Thomas Brahany.

In the account of the dinner appearing in your paper this morning, it is erroneously stated that the framed memorandum had been given the President by myself. The act of Mr. Brahany in presenting the memorandum to the President showed such thoughtfulness on his part that it would be unfair for me to allow this act of kindness to the President to be attributed to me when as a matter of fact the credit belongs to my warm friend, Tom Brahany.

Won't you, therefore, make the correction and greatly oblige me?

J. P. TUMULTY.

He Would Feed the Mind as Well as the Body.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sort of education required is that which satisfies the equation of the mind.

The human mind has an appetite and gets hungry just like the physical body, and in order for anyone to work at maximum efficiency the mental appetite has to be satisfied. Illustration: If you gave an arbitrary order like, "John, wrap up this package," he would do so because he is employed by you. His mental appetite would not be satisfied; hence, he could not become interested in his work. But if you had said, "John, wrap this package so as to keep it from getting soiled," you would have given a tangible reason for the performance of the duty required. Therefore, let all instructions be of such a character as to give a tangible reason for the performance of the duty required. Then you will be on the direct road to scientific education.

W. GASTON BULLOCH.

In Defense of Modern Youth.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Following tardily upon a general assault upon public education by the United States Chamber of Commerce the local board of trade opens with an attack upon secondary schools for producing "sophistication" in youth. Their speaker might have told the gentlemen that in Deuteronomy 29-25, and in Judges 2-12 they could find similar instances of younger generations forgetting the gods of their fathers, more than 2,000 years ago. In Luke XVI: 1-8, they might have read how the Great Teacher outlined the very situation of their meeting.

Unless these gentlemen have forgotten their own youth, or have placed their children in private schools "far from the maddening crowd," they may recall some differences between their own adolescent point of view and that of their parents. And unless they are blind to magazine covers on any newsstand, or the glaring movies for which they provide spending money, they may find more potent influences for "sophistication" in channels of trade than are possible at the schoolhouse.

During the 39 years I have been privileged to meet oncoming generations of youth, I have found no "sophistication" beyond that due to the ever-changing complexion of the generations. "In youth," as Emerson says, "they would build a bridge to the moon, but at middle age they decide to get materials for a woodshed." Today, of course, the change is more rapid and pronounced because of influences flowing from the ease with which products of invention have become available to them through the material success of their fathers, in trade, or of their mothers, in refusing to grow old.

It might be well to remember that youth of today may be infected by the war hysteria of their parents. At a similar period after the war, it was religious revivals; after the Civil War, it was schooling to enter trades, and after the Spanish-American War it was a mad stampede to high school and college.

The collapse of the older economic system in its possibilities for distribution in keeping with certain business virtues, has created for many the problem of "No outlook," but I find among them idealism as lofty, purpose as keen and achievement as satisfactory today as ever. "Civilization is still a race between education and catastrophe."

A Veteran Loses His Home—and Hope.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the 12th of this month my home was sold at a foreclosure sale, in spite of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, in spite of appeals to members of Congress with influence, appeals which were never answered, and in spite of letters to the President, which were answered, but which bore no weight with the holder of a second trust of $1,700, who would not accept the Government bonds. I am a Government employe and lost my home through the pay cut. All my equity, all I spent for improvements, and all my labor to beautify a little home for my family—we must leave it all to someone who will reap the benefit of my labor. A veteran of two wars, I am too old to make another start. When they took my home my courage went with it. M. J. W.

An Appeal for Clothing for the Needy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are kindly people who intend to give worn garments to the Salvation Army or Gospel Mission but keep these garments until they are worn threadbare, when they become of little use in the matter of warmth. Such people deprive themselves of the pleasure of wearing new clothes. They rob their charity of its value and they diminish the prospect of trade recovery. Frequently new garments turn out uncomfortable in fit or weight. Why not give them away and try again? Such garments may just fit a needy person. Think it over. CHARITY.

Mr. Robey's Column.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While it may be true that Ralph West Robey does not have enough space in his two half-columns to explain in detail in a conversational style the various phases of each of his topics, yet it is true that he has enough to present in a concise manner all the various viewpoints of the conflicting interests.

In the past few weeks, too many meaningless sentences containing irrelevant matter have been included, too many undignified phrases of a purely emotional nature have been inserted, and too much repetition and over-emphasis of trivial arguments, unsubstantial suppositions and ridiculous rumors have all taken up the precious space which should have been devoted to concrete facts of a pertinent nature and to weighty arguments leading to a thorough treatment of the subject.

This past situation has resulted in many questions being left unanswered because of this incompleteness of content and the conception of the discussion is usually confused because of insinuations which are intimated but which are left unsaid. A general feeling of dissatisfaction permeates one who after paying three cents for the paper spends five minutes reading it only to find he has purchased unprogressive, unbalanced and amateurish reading matter.

It is suggested that you have another one of your financial experts well versed in economics and allied subjects devote some of his time each day to explaining away the countless problems which are coming up before the public in a never-ending series and clearing the befuddled atmosphere somewhat. Your competitor, The Herald, has two first-class financial columnists, Forbes and Rukeyser, while the paper you publish has only one.

1. President Roosevelt.
2. Henry Ford.
3. Hon Herbert Hoover.
4. John D. Rockefeller, jr.
5. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.
6. Hon. Elihu Root.
7. J. Pierpont Morgan.
8. Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick.
9. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.
10. Arthur Brisbane.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen.

My Dear Louise: Members of your sex willingly suffer much in the cause of beauty, but I assume that blindness is a greater price than vanity will knowingly pay.

In Washington there is a Bureau of Standards that judges the merit of American products. Keen-minded young men who labor there do their utmost to protect American consumers.

Under present laws they are not able to do enough, and a bill will be introduced in the next session of Congress to afford additional protection.

In the meantime a word of warning may save you from lifelong suffering.

There are manufacturers, more brute than man, who fatten on the ignorance and weakness of the simple. They care nothing about the suffering they cause in the process of making a dollar.

The better magazines try to reject all advertising of quack nostrums and poisonous cosmetics. But they are fooled at times, and the magazine's reputation is not an unfailing guarantee of a product's merit.

Other magazines offer no guarantee at all, but only a warning. If the magazine is obviously published to please the morons—the romantically silly and the stupidly vain—it follows as a matter of course that the advertisements it prints are designed to catch the same kind of people.

By avoiding cosmetics advertised in such magazines, you can minimize the risk of poison; but the market is flooded with beauty aids that are dangerous, and it isn't safe to buy anything unless you know how it is made.

Within the last few weeks a number of girls have been blinded by concoctions supposed to beautify their eyelashes. Warning has been given through the newspapers, and the City of New York has forbidden the manufacture and sale of brow and lash dyes that are poisonous.

But it is probable that many another girl, eager to be beautiful, will lose her sight before these poisons are withdrawn from the market.

Don't experiment, my dear. Perhaps nature didn't do a perfect job for you, but poison won't improve it. Love, DAD.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

NOTWITHSTANDING that Mr. Roosevelt has a good understanding of people, I'll bet there are times when he wonders just what manner of man is Senator Norris. You give him one thing and he wants another. Apparently he doesn't know what it is to be satisfied.

BARGERON.

One would think that the Senator's cup of joy would be brimming over as we approach the new year; certainly no one has got more out of the New Deal than he. One of the first things Mr. Roosevelt did when he came into office was to give the Senator his long-sought Muscle Shoals project, a little matter of some $50,000,000 at the lowest. In the light of later gifts the value of this one doesn't seem so much; but if was all the Senator asked for, that and nothing else.

* * * *

And those of us who saw the Senator that day Mr. Rosevelt took him down to Muscle Shoals, took him up to a high place where he might get a view of his monument for miles and miles around, were convinced that after all the long years of struggling, happiness had come to him at last. Mr. Roosevelt would have been pardoned for heaving a sigh of relief, too, at having satisfied the Senator as he had never been satisfied in his life.

It turns out, though, to have been a satisfaction that didn't last. The Senator now wants something else and something that Mr. Roosevelt should hate very much to give to him.

What he wants now—and it goes to show that you can't tell how a man's fancy will turn—he wants Jim Farley's job.

* * * *

Oh, I don't mean he wants it for himself. What he wants is that Jim give up either the Postmaster Generalship or the chairmanship of the Democratic National committee. We Americans, in developing our quaint ways and expressions, have come to say that a man wants another's job when he only wants the other fellow to give it up. It is just one of our short cuts of speech.

It isn't that the Senator feels that Jim is overworked, either. He isn't concerned about Jim's health in the slightest. He just doesn't want Jim to have both of those jobs, that's all.

* * * *

Now, don't you suppose this must make the President think about the Senator, to wonder if there is no way of satisfying him. With Muscle Shoals tucked under his arm, and when the professors get through with it it will be neatly beribboned, why isn't he willing to let Mr. Roosevelt keep Jim, or let Jim keep the two jobs, as the case may be?

Why, the Senator is really acting like the youngster at the party who can't enjoy his present for watching to see what the other fellows get, or like the pup that runs indecisively from one bone to another.

Here he is contemplating his rich prize with one eye and keeping the other fixed upon the other boys. It must be discouraging to those who had sought to please the Senator. It must be, indeed.

* * * *

The danger lies, of course, in the possible reaction upon Mr. Roosevelt. Suppose it should come to make Mr. Roosevelt cynical, instead of the cheery, hearty soul that he is.

Suppose he should come to the conclusion that people are unreasonable, ungrateful, that they don't appreciate anything you do. Experiences have made cynics of many men, you know. If Mr. Roosevelt should become soured on the human race, so to speak, it would be serious.

He might cut out all of the bounties. He might say that inasmuch as the more he gives us the more we seek he will quit giving us anything. That would be just too bad.

Parliamentary Law.

When I was a boy in the Public High School at Hartford, Conn., I thought I was eventually going to be a lawyer and statesman. I therefore used to visit several times a week the sessions of the Legislature; and I became thoroughly familiar with the aspect and qualities of the leading men—Speaker John M. Hall, Edward D. Robbins, Alexander Troup, A. Heaton Robertson, Lawyer Johnson of Enfield, E. Spicer Cleveland, &c. And I learned parliamentary law thoroughly without a book, merely by seeing it work in practice. I have seen many presiding officers since that time, but I have never seen a better one anywhere than John M. Hall. I knew the laws of debate so well that I could have taken the speaker's chair at any time; and in my mind I corrected the rulings of several gentlemen who made a mess of the job when they were substituted.

I then organized the Hartford Public High School Debating Club, which after more than 50 years, is still flourishing.

Now innumerable men and women are called on to preside at meetings of various kinds, public and private; and I think every one should know something of parliamentary law. In those days there were two standard books—Cushing's "Manual" and Robert's "Rules of Order." The latter survived the former. And now a new and very convenient book has appeared—"Parliamentary Procedure at a Glance," by O. Garfield Jones, of Toledo. This is brief and well arranged, and a knowledge of it will save many persons from possible embarrassment.

Senator Long Will Keep Out Of Kemp Row

Louisianan to Support President's Policies "If They're Good."

(Associated Press.)

Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), Louisiana, said yesterday he did notintend to take and part in the contest over the seating of Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, as Representative from the Sixth Louisiana District, and that he would support Administration measures in Congress which he believed were for the good of the people.

"Mrs. Kemp was legally elected," he said on his arrival from Louisiana, "but I am not taking any hand at all in this contest. If Congress wants to recognize outlaw and shotgun elections, that's its business.

"Neither Mr. Kemp nor Mrs. Kemp ever supported me. This Sanders crowd has for a long time been trying to break into the National political light.

He'll Help President.

"If the President has got anything good, I'll help him put it through. The fact that I haven't been given any patronage doesn't matter to me."

Mrs. Kemp recently was elected to Congress to succeed her late husband. At a subsequent election J. Y. Sanders, jr., was named to the post.

"I notice the President has been speaking again about redistribution of wealth, although he does not offer a plan," the Senator said. "We so heartily agree on redistribution that I'd be a fool not to take advantage of his help to get it put through.

Questions NRA Constitutionality.

"I voted for most of the President's bills in the last session, but I don't think the NRA is constitutional. The President is trying to help the country, but I think he will come more and more to his first belief that wealth must be distributed."

Senator Long said he believed his ticket in the New Orleans city election would win.

His jovial mood was broken when he was asked if he would fight confirmation of appointments in Louisiana.

"I'll fight any appointments that are personally objectionable to me, and they have made plenty," he said.

Veterans' Physicians' Pay Must Be Reduced

Physicians treating patients for the Veterans' Administration must be paid 15 per cent less for services now than they received before passage of the economy act, Comptroller General J. R. McCarl ruled yesterday.

In a letter requesting McCarl to pass on the issue, Veterans' Administrator Hines complained, "the placing in effect of your decisions has hampered the work of this administration to such an extent as to raise grave fears that the medical services which this administration is required by law to perform may not be expeditiously nor efficiently accomplished."

Garner Returns to Open Senate

Wide World Photos.

Vice President Garner returns to Washington for the session opening next week, and Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, says he is glad to see him. Left to right, Halsey, the Vice President and Mrs. Garner. Garner has been in Texas since last summer.

Ruddy-Faced Garner Back; Slips In Quietly

Formality Lacking as He Pays Calls; Will See President Today.

Ruddy of face and with the vigor of a man younger than his 64 years, Vice President John N. Garner yesterday returned to the city for the Congressional session, after a summer and fall spent in fishing the streams around his home at Uvalde, Tex.

With him was Mrs. Garner. Their entry into the city was without formality or ceremony. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary to the Senate, greeted the couple at Union Station. After that Mr. Garner started a round of calls. He will confer with President Roosevelt today on the legislative program.

So unostentious were the Vice President's movements that few recognized him. When he went to the Postoffice Department to call on Postmaster General James A. Farley an amusing incident happened. Mr. Farley late in the day held a premature New Year's reception of all those in his department.

Falls Into Line.

A long line of clerks, steongraphers, elevator men and truck drivers led to the Postmaster General's office, where the latter was shaking hands. Mr. Garner, without knowledge of the reception, stepped into line and moved forward a step at a time. None noticed him until he almost got into the office. Then Harold Ambrose, the department's publicity man, spied the Vice President and immediately led him to Mr. Farley.

The Vice President decided to delay a formal press conference until tomorrow. Informally, however, he gave such views as that the length of the session would be determined by the intensity of the heat in Washington next summer.

Silent on Proposals.

He would not comment on specific legislative proposals, but thought that the Roosevelt program would be adopted without trouble. He said he had found the people behind the President. He said he had no recommendations to make to the President, but would give his views if asked for them.

When it was suggested to the Vice President that he was being characterized as the "forgotten man" because of his silence on public questions, Mr. Garner snorted and replied that "some people might read the Constitution to find out the Vice President's duties."

He explained that the sole function of the Vice President was to preside over the Senate and vote when a tie occurred in the voting. He said Mr. Roosevelt had invited him to sit with the Cabinet, and this he did, giving what advice he could on current problems. But he did not regard it as his function to make statements or propose programs.

J. W. Lawrensen To Be Paid Honor

Life-Long Resident Here to Be Buried Today.

Funeral services for James William Lawrensen, 75, a lifelong resident of Washington, will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral parlors today at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Glenwod Cemetery. Mr. Lawrensen died Thursday at the John Dickson Home, 5000 Fourteenth street northwest.

Mr. Lawrensen, educated in Washington schools, was a page in the United States Senate from 1870 to 1874, later serving in the War Department. For 38 years he was in the employ of the George F. Muth & Co. here. He was an usher at St. Paul's Lutheran Church for 30 years. A member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, he was also a member of the Society of Natives.

Surviving are three nieces, Mrs. Eva D. Reddick, Mrs. Bertie M. Bay and Miss Bessie L. Wollard, all of this city, and a nephew, Frank L. Wollard, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Child Refuses to Give Her Name.

They found her crying beside an "L" station shortly after midnight. She had just gotten off a train and was confused. At the station she refused to talk other than to say:

"My mother told me to get out and stay out."

Senators Seek Silver Coinage On 16-1 Ratio

Bloc Claims Strength to Attain Definite Money Program.

sal—the same which will be introduced next Wednesday—was defeated 33 to 43.

In fact the silver group has gained several adherents, until now Senator Wheeler claims 44 votes for his measure, just five short of an absolute majority in the Senate.

Both Senator Wheeler and Speaker Rainey in predicting success for legislation providing for remonetization of silver, pointed out that should President Roosevelt actively oppose them they will be defeated. Apparently they do not ask the President's open support—which the silver bloc would like to have—but only that he refrain from active hostility.

One of those at the meeting—was instrumental in arranging it—who voted against the Wheeler measure in April was Senator Borah. In voting against the Wheeler proposal last spring the Idahoan explained he did so in order to give President Roosevelt a free hand to negotiate an international agreement for remonetization of silver at the London conference.

Leans to World Agreement.

Senator Borah explained he still believes the "safe and sane way" to bring about remonetization of silver is through international agreement, but that he has lost all hope that such a course is possible. Therefore he would now have the United States to "go it alone." He thought action by this country would force other nations to follow suit.

"We are, in my opinion, to the point," he added, "where the world must seriously consider utilizing silver as a metallic base or issuing paper currency."

Denying the silver bloc favored "unrestricted inflation," Senator Wheeler maintained the best way to prevent such an end is to remonetize silver, which, he argued, would increase world commodity prices, "materially help our foreign trade with silver using and silver producing countries and prevent the Orient from dumping manufactured products in this country."

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, who was delegated with Senator Wheeler to notify the President of the sentiment of the conference, likewise argued that bimetalism would prevent "printing-press money."

The conference was attended by 18 Senators—14 Democrats, 3 Progressive Republicans and the Farm-Labor member, Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota. In addition Senator Wheeler said he held proxies from eight other Democratic Senators. In addition the Montanan named 11 Democrats and 7 Republicans, as sympathetic with his cause.

Careful of Intent.

Although the leaders of the conference carefully emphasized that their program was to be interpreted as not criticizing by supplementing the Administration's program, it was noticeable that Senator Key Pittman (Democrat)), Nevada, who has worked with the President on his silver plans, was absent. He was counted, however, in the list of those sympathetic with the Wheeler proposal.

Meanwhile the Administration left unchanged the RFC price for newly-mined gold at $34.06 an ounce, a figure which, due to the week-end holiday, will carry over into the New Year. At the same time efforts were made to minimize the importance of Thursday's order ordering the surrender of all gold to the Treasury, except rare coins.

The order, it was explained at the White House, was technical and would affect only about $5,000,000 of gold held in small quantities. At the Treasury, however, it was said the order was "a year-end mopping up" and was directed at "the big fellows" to shake them loose from about $600,000,000 in gold and gold certificates still in circulation.

In some quarters the belief prevailed that the Thursday gold order was a step toward seizure by the Treasury of the gold stocks of the Federal Reserve banks, which would be preliminary to specific action devaluating the gold dollar. By cutting the gold content of the dollar in half, the Treasury would stand to gain close to $4,000,000,000 if it gains possession of the Reserve System holdings.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, has prepared a bill authorizing the Treasury to seize the Federal Reserve holdings. Not only will it be fought by the reserve banks, but also by such opponents of the gold purchase policy as Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brown, of Malba: "Do unto each other as you would be done by."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Arn, of the Bronx: "After a scrap and a good night's rest, it's all over."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clinton, of Queens: "Have perfect faith and trust in each other and in your God."

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cropsey, of Brooklyn: "Work hard and live honestly."

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Farish, of Flushing: "Be good to one another."

Then add these two mailed by couples who could not attend the banquet:

Mr. and Mrs. H. Melville de Ronde, of Richmond Hill: "Good nature takes care of a lot of trouble."

Mr. and Mrs. Bolton Hall, of Manhattan: "Mind your own business. People who are married 50 years are not in need of a dinner, but a monument."

The Once-Over

By H. I. Phillips.

WELCOME TO THE NEW YEAR.

A welcome to you, Thirty-four—
Come in, sit down—and shut that door!
Now give your most attentive ear
To what we hope from you this year;
"Three Little Pigs" to sausages ground up,
And no more singing "The Last Roundup;"
(They're both appealing, pleasant stuff
But just the same we've had enough.)
If you get time correct my slice—
This in my golf game will suffice;
Decrease those signs, "No Turns on Red,"
And no more Mdivanis wed.

II.

From vaudeville please keep A. MacPherson
And, too, that "Big Boy" Hutton parson;
Let all inflation movements fizzle
And give the works to those who chisel;
In this New Deal remember faces
And let me have some kings or aces;
Don't let the Brain Trust get too brainy
And don't make August cold and rainy.
Ask Huey Long to fight, for we know
A puncher at Sands Point Casino;
We like his fights near sand-swept beaches
Much better than we like his speeches.

III.

Keep Babe Ruth's "dogs" good one more summer,
Without him life would seem much dumber;
Bring Roosevelt and Smith together
So they'll agree upon the weather;
Please end the slump, and certainly
Your name will live in history;
(And while you're ending slumps, be game
And end that slump at Notre Dame.)
Do what you can to guard the dollar
So it will buy at least a collar,
A sugar bun, a pie, a hat.

IV.

Turn Europe honest if you can
And make it play the honest man;
Inform the French their "rep" would mount
If they'd pay something on account;
Make life in China not so rough
(One war a year there is enough);
End all that trouble in Havana
So we can go there with our Anna;
(We haven't quite the constitution
For touring through a revolution.)
Give Roosevelt his vim and vigor,
And give our girls the Mae West figure.

V.

Make Gen'ral Johnson's speeches shorter
And cool them with a little water;
Cut down, oh please, on unemployment,
And that'll be enough enjoyment.
When Congress meets this January,
Please watch it and be very wary
Lest it go mad and nerts and crazy
And make the future worse than hazy.
Guard that Blue Eagle and we beg, sir,
Don't let it go and lay an egg, sir!

L'ENVOI.

And help us get both health and money,
So we can feel like Eugene Tunney!

THE SOLUTION.

Prof. Tugwell, of the Brain Trust, has gone to Yale as a research professor. Now if Dr. Moley only can be persuaded to coach the Eli football team . . .

A Minnesota doctor says he has discovered a cure for common colds at last. And just when the old-fashioned custom of taking hot whisky was getting popular again.

Just Folks.

By Edgar A. Guest.

The Passing Year.

Soon must the old year die. Already Upon its legs it grows a bit unsteady
Its face turns paler and 'tis very clear
Not longer will it be among us here.

With each December death the old year smothers
And bears it to the past with all the others,
And whether it brought joy to earth or woe,
Was sorrow laden or was good to know,
Like all its fellows it is doomed to go.

This was a year of struggle and of trial.
Of heartaches, loss and care and self-denial,
Yet we may learn before our journey end
That it is best harsh judgment to suspend.
Who treats us worst may be our truest friend.

We'll cheer the new, but there'll be little sighing
To mark the passing of the year now dying,
But some day looking backward we may find,

7 Couples, Each Wedded 50 Years, Tell Their Philosophy.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Rules for a long and happy married life were offered to families today by eight couples, all but one married at least 50 years.

The rules were promulgated at a banquet at which they were guests. The suggestions will be forwarded to City Clerk Michael J. Cruise "in the hope they might be of some use to him in his official capacity."

The rules and their authors are:

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hanel, of Flushing: "Don't be jealous of each other."

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rockefeller, of Brooklyn: "Do right and live right."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Berger, of Manhattan: "Where one goes, the other goes; what's good enough for one is good enough for the other."

Hearings Ordered On Miners' Charge

Wagner Calls Dozen Firms to Meet Accusations.

Failure of a large group of steel companies to give the United Mine Workers complete and unqualified recognition at their Pennsylvania mines brought an order from the National Labor Board yesterday for a hearing, according to the Associated Press.

Senator Wagner, chairman of the board, summoned by telegram a dozen steel companies to appear at the hearing set for January 4. The action came at the request of John L. Lewis, president of the union.

Slayer of Son-in-Law Executed.

Milledgeville, Ga., Dec. 29 (AP). James F. Barbee, of Hawkinsville, was executed at 10:21 a. m. today for the murder of Delmar Cannon, of Macon, his son-in-law. Barbee went to his death saying he was "well satisfied," because it was something "I had to do."

Fahey in Doubt About Principal In Home Loans

Can Pledge Interest Only to Speed Exchange for Mortgages.

(Associated Press.)

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, yesterday expressed doubt of the desirability of guaranteeing the principal as well as interest on the corporation's bonds as a means of expediting their exchange for mortgages.

In response to questions at his press conference, Mr. Fahey said Representative Vinson of Georgia had discussed with him such legislation, aimed at encouraging lending institutions to take the corporation's securities.

The Government now guarantees only the interest on the bonds, which are selling at about 85 in the market.

Mr. Fahey said there was no cause for concern as regards the present price and that lenders "as they have come to know more and more about the situation have come into line with less reluctance to exchanging mortgages for bonds."

He added that many refusals to accept the bonds had been warranted, and that lending institutions often had declined to liquidate mortgages for bonds when borrowers were able to pay the charges.

Loans amounting to approximately $90,000,000 have been closed by the corporation to date. Some $20,000,000 have not yet been changed into bonds due to the delay of holders of interim certificates in transferring them. Mr. Fahey said only a small amount of the bonds have reached the open market.

Steward Hits Federal "Job Politics" Plan

U. S. Workers Head Urges Permanent Set-up for Jobholders.

Employment of persons with political backing instead of merit system workers by new Federal agencies was criticized yesterday by Luther C. Steward, National Federation of Federal Employes president, in a Philadelphia talk.

Speaking before the American Political Science Association, Steward said a majority of appointments to new Federal agencies were either purely political in nature or made without adequate tests.

"Wehther their background has been political, business or scholastic," he said, "the failure on the part of administrators who are newcomers to the Federal field to recognize that the Federal service has its own technique and to lump under the expression 'red tape' all of the mass of laws, regulations and decisions that control or shape Federal action, has cost and will continue to cost the taxpayers of this country incalculable sums of money.

"Wise indeed have been those recently appointed administrative officials who have secured and kept close at hand assistants trained and experienced in the Federal service."

Steward contended political appointments should be limited to policy-making positions. He urged development of a permanent Federal staff through competitive tests, "safeguarded from political manipulation and dischimination, with enough financial incentive to retain a substantial proportion of high grade men and women who will look upon the Federal service as a life career."

Firemen Win Fight With $1,500 Blaze

One Hurt Battling Flames on Pennsylvania Ave.

Handicapped by the bitter cold, firemen battled with icy water for more than an hour last night to control a $1,500 fire in the antique shop of Simon Krupsaw, 813 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Private Thomas Mathews, 40, No. 3 Truck, was painfully cut about the hands and legs by falling glass.

Originating on the third floor of the antique establishment, the blaze gained considerable headway before firemen arrived. It was confined to the third floor.

Survivor of Poison Plot to Have Home

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—Wistful, 4-year-old Frank Colley, who survived what an Arkansas prosecutor described as the wholesale poisoning of his family, is going to have a home by order of the juvenile court here, which will entertain requests for his adoption.

The child's mother, father and two brothers are dead. Mark Shank, Akron attorney, is under sentence of death in Arkansas for having administered poison to them.

Attorneys Ask to Resign

Two assistant U. S. District Attorneys submitted resignations yesterday following the appointment of Leslie Garnett as new U. S. Attorney for Washington. They are William H. Collins, jr., left, and John J. Sirica. Collins has been in charge of criminal prosecutions for several years, while Sirica is a veteran prosecutor.

Two Aids Quit After Garnett Gets Legal Post

Collins, Sirica, Assistants Under Rover, Were Rated High.

Announcement by the President of Leslie C. Garnett's appointment as United States attorney for the District was followed yesterday by resignation of William H. Collins and John J. Sirica, assistant district attorneys for several years. The forecast of Mr. Garnett's appointment was made exclusively in yesterday's issue of The Washington Post.

The prosecutors, considered highly capable on the staff of Leo A. Rover, explained they intend to engage in private practice of law.

Mr. Collins, who was advanced for consideration as district attorney, was appointed assistant in 1924, following his graduation from Georgetown University Law School. He has prosecuted some of the most celebrated criminal cases in recent years. Among them are the Mary Baker murder, for which Herbert Campbell was tried and acquitted; the Milo J. Kennedy murder case, the Wembley case, in which a woman and her small daughter were drowned, and the Busch murder case.

Busch was the proprietor of a sightseeing business. He was slain and robbed by two men who attacked him as he entered his home.

Sirica, also a graduate of Georgetown, gained prominence recently when he prosecuted the charge of arson against Edward J. Parlton and H. Albert Smith, convicted of setting fire to a George Washington University fraternity house. The Franks arson case, and the slaying of Mannie Solomen, taxi driver, for which three colored men were sentenced to electrocution, were among his prosecutions.

Expensive

Gas Thief Seized in Chase Pays $1.67 Per Gallon.

Fred Coolidge, of Wellsboro, Pa., paid $16.70 for a 10-gallon purchase of gasoline in Fairfax, Va., yesterday.

Driving into the filling station of Murray Wells, he got the gasoline and tendered a check. Wells refused to cash it but said he would accompany Coolidge to the bank.

Coolidge turned and sped toward Washington in his car. Wells shouted the alarm and Coolidge was overhauled by Sheriff Eppa Kirby 10 miles from Fairfax.

Before Trial Justice Paul E. Brown, Coolidge was found guilty of petty larceny. His fine was $10, costs $5 and payment for the gasoline was $1.70.

Chinese Air Raids Peril Foreigners

Consuls Ask Protection of Nanking.

Shanghai, (Saturday), Dec. 30 (U.P.). Consuls fo several governments at Foochow, capital of the rebel province of Fukien, today cabled a plea to the Nanking government for a guarantee of safety for the lives and property of foreigners at Foochow.

Nationalist air raiders recently bombed Foochow, killing more than 50 Chinese. No reports of deaths or injuries to foreigners has been received here.

2 Sentenced in Kidnaping.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Judge Joseph E. Corrigan of General Sessions Court today imposed maximum sentences of 25 to 50 years on Michael Galotta, 25, and Leo Messina, 24, both of Brooklyn, for the kidnaping of Miss Betty Chum, a Chinese girl, who was held for ransom of $5,000 last July. Miss Chum escaped from her abductors.

Wagner Keeps Post Pending New Chairman

Resignation From Labor Board Confirmed by Roosevelt.

Senator Robert F. Wagner's resignation from the chairmanship of the National Labor Board, as forecast yesterday in The Post, was confirmed at President Roosevelt's press conference later in the afternoon.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed the New York Democrat, who has given most of his time to the Labor Board's settlement of strikes all over the Nation, feels he must quit at the opening of Congress to continue his legislative efforts.

At the some time it was explained Senator Wagner was entirely content to serve until the selection of a successor. Mr. Roosevelt is now considering the successor.

This problem was viewed a large one in view of Senator Wagner's effectiveness in bringing to terms opposing factions under the NRA. Some figure who would command National respect by both labor and capital was the problem confronting the President.

Senator Wagner's pending resignation, as reported in The Post, brought denials even from officials of the Labor Board itself. All details of yesterday's report, however, were substantiated later in the day.

The Senator does not feel he could do justice to both positions. As chairman of the board he has been instrumental in setting up 17 regional boards and returning thousands of employes to work. As Senator he is a staunch Administration supporter with much legislation to press.

Youth Confesses Killing Girl Mute

Coast Detectives Seize Michigan Slayer.

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—Captured at the end of a murder search that led from Michigan to California, William McMann, 20, electrician, admitted to detectives here today that he killed Margaret Peevey, 20, deaf mute, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I loved her, but she played me a dirty trick," detectives quoted the youth as saying in explanation for the slaying of the girl last week.

Chicago Mayor Opposes Women Sitting at Bars

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Mayor Edward J. Kelly today asserted that the sight of women sitting down and drinking at bars was "obnoxious," and hence he is going to recommend an amendment to the city ordinance to prevent it.

Chicago law requires you to sit to drink. The ordinance requires that stools be placed in front of all bars.

T. J. Vandoren Dies at Home In Hyattsville

Rites to Be Held Monday; Death Followed Long Illness.

Theodore John Vandoren, sr., 70, died shortly before noon yesterday at his home, 24 Ralston avenue, Hyattsville. Death was not unexpected, following a long illness.

Mr. Vandoren, a native of Syracuse, N. Y., came to Washington in his early youth. He studied for the priesthood two years at St. Charles' Seminary, Baltimore. Later he was in the custom tailoring business for many years in Washington, his health forcing him to retire 15 years ago. The family has been living in Hyattsville for 40 years.

Surviving are his widow, the former Miss Alice Krager, of Baltimore, and six children. They are Bernard J., of Dayton, Ohio; Lucian Hall, attorney, and Theodore John, jr., both of Washington; William Thompson, of Silver Spring; Mrs. Ivor B. Watts, of Newark, N. J., and Miss Eleanor Vandoren, of Hyattsville. A brother, Louis A. Vandoren, of near La Plata, Md., and a sister, Mrs. Blanche Benson, of Washington, also survive.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock at St. Jerome's Catholic Church, Hyattsville. There will be requiem mass with the Rev. Andrew J. Carey, pastor, officiating. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Gen. King to Be Buried At West Point Today

Maj. Gen. Edward L. King, commanding general of the Fourth Corps Area, who died Wednesday will be buried at 2:30 p. m. today at West Point.

Gen. King's death at Fort McPherson, Ga., was attributed to a heart attack. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nancy Vose Sumner King, of Harrisburg, Pa., and a daughter, Mrs. Charles Lee Andrews, of Flushing, N. Y.

Retires From Naval Observatory

Underwood & Underwood.

Carolina Slayer Sent to Asylum

Getsinger, Killer of 2, Had Tried Suicide in Cell.

Anderson, S. C., Dec. 29 (AP). Johnny M. Getsinger, 34-year-old farmer who Wednesday killed two neighbors he said had threatened him, attempted suicide in jail here today and a short while later was committed to the State Hospital for Insane.

The prisoner suffered two deep scalp wounds when he struck his head against the edge of his steel cell door.

Getsinger has been incoherent most of the time since his incarceration, after he surrendered Wednesday with the information that he had shot to death Robert Hayes, 60, and Lawrence Purdy, 55. He said the pair attempted to enter his home after he had warned them away.

46 Below at Mount Washington.

Col. Donnelly, Veteran of Two Wars, Expires

Retired Officer of D. C. Entered Department in 1892.

Lieut. Col. Richard John Donnelly, 68, retired, died Thursday at his home 10 Tenth street northeast. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars.

A graduate of St. John's College and Georgetown University, he entered the service of the War Department in 1892 as a civilian employe and served the Government until his retirement last June.

In May, 1898, he was mustered into service as a first lieutenant with the First Regiment, D. C. Infantry. He served both as chief quartermaster at Chickamauga, First Division, Third Army Corps, and as brigade commissary at Tampa.

In 1917 he was commissioned captain, Quartermaster Officers Reserve Corps, and assigned to Charleston, S. C. After being made a major in 1917 he was transferred to France.

Commissioned a major in the adjutant general's Officers Reserve Corps in September, 1919, he was made lieutenant colonel in that corps in November, 1922. He held the latter commission until its expiration in November, 1932.

Col. Donnelly is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth C. Donnelly, and a daughter, Mary Donnelly, of Washington. He was a member of the Order of the United Spanish War Veterans, the Washington Council of the Knights of Columbus and the Military Order of Foreign Wars.

Funeral services will be conducted at his residence Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. Requiem mass will be held at 10 a. m. at St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

JANUARY USED TO BE CALLED WOLFMONTH BY THE ANGLO-SAXONS... IT WAS THE MONTH THE WOLF CAME TO THE DOOR...
THIS CRADLE- Owned by Mrs. Florence Graves, Ontario, Cal... HAS BEEN USED BY 59 BABIES....
CAPT. JOHN CRAIGE HAS BEEN A SOLDIER- SAILOR- MARINE- PRIZE-FIGHTER- AUTHOR AND OLYMPIC STAR...
THE ELEPHANT CANNOT JUMP... ITS 4 FEET NEVER LEAVE THE GROUND AT THE SAME TIME...
NEA Service Syndicate, Inc., N. Y. 12-30-33

In the manner of modern speaking, the wolf is at the door more often than once a year—some say he is always at the door. But the old Anglo-Saxons were troubled in that way (actually) only during one season of the year. In the dead of winter, hunger often drove wolves in packs or alone right into villages. Hungry wolves are dangerous animals, and it sometimes happened that townspeople were attacked.

These visits by the wolves came mostly during Wolfmonth, which is January to us. Wolfmonth was so named, in fact, because it was then that the wolf made its most frequent appearance.

In their superstitious manner, the Anglo-Saxons sought to rid themselves of the danger by outwitting the wolves—they dropped the name Wolfmonth and substituted for it January (a term which other people were already using) just so the wolves would not know when to come to the door. It didn't work.

John H. Craige, at present a captain in the United States Marine Corps, once served with the Serbs as a soldier in one of the Balkan wars. Later aboard a ship on the Mediterranean he served as a sailor. Back in the United States he joined the Marine Corps. At odd moments he also had time to gain some fame as a prize-fighter, author, Olympic athlete and gold miner.

Radio Waves and Ripples

ALEXANDER ANTONOVITCH TROYANOVSKY, first Soviet Ambassador to the United States, will find C. B. S. microphones stalking him as the liner Washington reaches Quarantine in New York a week from today.

A fellow passenger will be Harvard's William C. Bullitt, newly appointed American Ambassador to Moscow. Laying aside their gentle conversation en route, the two envoys will say something distinct for the radio audiences.

Troyanovsky speaks "fluent English," according to The Post's Russian expert. Anyway he knows that "elaborate nonaggressional features add to the weight of evidence."

Whitecaps.

WRC—International Society for Crippled Children, speakers, Judge Carl B. Hyatt of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, and Dr. John Talbott, the Public Health Service, 12:45 a. m.; Norman Thomas, speaking on "Outlook for 1934," 1 p. m.; "Mignon," Metropolitan Opera, starring Lucrezia Bori, 2 p. m.; "What the Public Libraries Do for Community Welfare," 7:15 p. m.; Edwin Balmer, editor of the Red Book, interviewed, 8 p. m.; Oley Speaks and Gene Buck in Kipling program, 9 p. m.

WMAL—"Mignon," Metropolitan Opera, 2 p. m.; "Economies in the New Deal," speaker Edward F. McGrady, assistant NRA administrator, 8 p. m.; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Wagner's "Tannhauser" and "Die Walkure," with Paul Althouse, tenor; Fred Patten, basso, and Elsa Alsen, soprano, 8:30 p. m.

WJSV—Speaker Henry T. Rainey, address before National Student Conference, 12:30 p. m.; Dr. Douglas Copeland, "Australia's Recovery Act," 8 p. m.; Col. Stoopnagle prognosticates, 9:15 p. m.; Byrd Expedition program, 10 p. m.; Cotton Club Orchestra, 12 midnight.

WOL—"Life at the Crossroads Store," 6:30 p. m.; Meyer Davis and his orchestra in a program of dance music, 11 p. m.

One of the most popular works in the lighter repertoire of Grand opera, Thomas' "Mignon," will be heard this afternoon at 2 over NBC-CBS network's first regular broadcast of the Metropolitan Opera season.

Lucrezia Bori, bird-like little Chanteuse, appearing in the title role, says, "You will not only hear me sing but also some of my distinguished colleages, the exquisite Lily Pons, Tito Schipa, one of the finest of our lyric tenors; Gladys Swarthout, that most talented American contralto; Leon Rothier, the great French basso, and others. Louis Hasselmans will be the conductor.

"You who are listening, even if you cannot see the stage, will get great pleasure from the music.

"Don't fail to hear the brilliant overture and in the first act not only is the lovely 'Connais-tu le Pays?' when Mignon tells of her childhood memories of a beautiful sunny land, but there is a fine air for Mr. Schipa, an appealing one for Mr. Rothier as well as attractive choruses and concerted music.

"The Polonaise 'I Am Titiana,' which Mme. Pons sings so marvelously, comes toward the end of the second act. In fact, all of the music has charm and I promise you a most delightful afternoon."

LUCREZIA BORI, who sings the title role today in "Mignon," broadcast from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York over N. B. C.-C. B. S. networks.

All of which is very characteristic of little Miss Bori. You who have seen her fairyland-like movements know she is immediately beloved by all who hear and see her.

One of America's best known contemporary composers is Oley Speaks. Perhaps more than any other person he has popularized the poems of Rudyard Kipling, whose sixty-eighth birthday is being celebrated this week.

Speaks and Gene Buck, entrepreneur of modern music and president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, will take part in a program tonight at 9 over WRC featuring works of the composer.

Seven Oley Speaks numbers known throughout the world will be sung, including the Speaks-Kipling barrack room ballads, "On the Road to Mandalay" and "Fuzzy Wuzzy," rendered by Mario Cozzi, operatic barytone. Fred Hufsmith, tenor, will be heard in two of the composer's songs, "Perfect Prayer" and "Star Rise."

A special feature of the program will be the appearance of Margaret Speaks, niece of the composer, herself an artist of note. She will sing three of her uncle's most popular works, "Sylvia," "April Rain" and "Morning."

William Lundell, N. B. C. interviewer, will relate incidents connected with the writing of Speaks' songs, and Buck will give some facts about their surprising popularity.

OLEY SPEAKS, composer of "Sylvia," "The Road to Mandalay" and "Morning," interviewed today over N. B. C. network at 9 p. m. by Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

The colonel is up to it again. After gazing at crystals and other stuff, he is ready to surprise a waiting world with his exclusive knowledge of what will transpire in the year just drawing to a close.

The Stoopnagle prognostications will devoutly stumble on the air during his program with Budd, Jacques Renard's Orchesta and Vera Van over a C. B. S. chain tonight at 9:15.

Budd will appear as an accessory before the fact. Renard's men, with Vera Van's "blue velvet" voice, will offer bright melodies to complete the program.

Norman Thomas, perennial candidate for President on the Socialist ticket, will be in Washington today to speak under auspices of the League for Industrial Democracy.

He will be joined by Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, and Lawrence Dennis, author. All will speak on the general subject of "The Program for America in 1934" over WRC at 1 p. m.

Ripples.

Eleven hundred chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy are agog, awaiting "The Three Swords of Gen. Lee" broadcast over WJSV January 19 at 9:30 p. m., observing the birthday of the Southern leader.

The program reenacting the incidents where the general was offered three commands . . . the Northern Army, the Army of Virginia and the command of the Confederate armies . . . comes heavily indorsed. The Sons of Confederate Veterans and the Southern Society of New York will add their approbation.

Col. U. S. Grant, 3rd, Senator Byrd, of Virginia, and officers of the Daughters and the Sons of men in gray will speak in introducing the program. The U. S. Army Band will furnish incidental music.

Dr. Douglas Copeland, chairman of the committee of experts on the Australian Recovery Act, will speak tonight at 8 over WJSV on the "Economic Policy of Recovery for Australia."

Henry T. Rainey, colorful Speaker of the House, delivers an address on "The Student's Place in the NRA," over a CBS network at 12:30 p. m. today.

Speaking before the luncheon session of the convention of the National Student Federation at the Mayflower Hotel, Speaker Rainey will discuss the student's place in national and international affairs. The congress is held each year to give the country's students an opportunity to exchange ideas on such campus problems as government, publications, fraternities, &c.

Among messages sent to the Byrd Expedition in the Antarctic on New Year's Eve over WRC at 11, will be the personal greeting of President Roosevelt.

Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, will add his greeting. The program, one of a series "From and To" the expedition, will be broadcast over short wave Station W2XAF at Schenectady and hence through WRC.

State CWA Chairman In Connecticut Ousted

Dismissal of Chairman Newton C. Brainerd of the Connecticut Civil Works Administration for "declining to carry out instructions," was announced yesterday by CWA Administrator Hopkins.

The dismissal was for alleged failure to meet requirements as to Federal printing and employment of skilled workers, says the United Press.

Watch-Night Services to Mark Coming of New Year in Many Churches of Capital

Candlelight Programs Will Be Featured

Pageant, Illustrated Talk, Special Music Among Numbers Listed.

The coming of the New Year will be celebrated in many of the Washington churches with Watch-Night services.

At Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church the service will start at 11 o'clock, and in the interval between the close of the regular 8 o'clock service and this special service, tea will be served in the church parlors.

For young people of the Presbyterian churches a Candlelight New Year's Eve service will be held at Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

At Central Presbyterian Church the Watch service will start at 11 p. m.

There will be a Candlelight Watch Night service at the Fifth Baptist Church.

At the Second Baptist the service starts at 9 p. m.

"Begining With God" is the subject of the sermon, Dr. Henry W. Snyder will preach at the Watch service at St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

The service at Douglas Memorial Methodist begins at 8 p. m. with a pageant, "God Speaking to Us Through Opportunity" given by the Epworth League. At 9:30 light refreshments are to be served by the Philathea Class. The devotional service starts at 10:45 p. m.

The customary evening service will be omitted at Grace Lutheran Church. At the watch service, from 11 p. m. to midnight, the Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski will preach on "What the New Year Brings."

"Looking Out, In and Up" is to be the subject of Dr. Vernon N. Ridgely at the watch service in Calvary Methodist Church. The program starts at 10:45 p. m. and closes with a candlelight service.

At the Metropolitan Baptist Church there will be a continuous program from 7:45 p. m., when the ordinance of baptism will be administered, until the New Year is welcomed. At the 8 p. m. service the pastor, Dr. John Compton Bail, will preach on "Looking Four Ways." There will be music during the evening and a social period from 10:40 to 11:10.

At the Chevy Chase Baptist Church the service starts at 9 p. m. A feature of the program is an illustrated lecture, "The Fight for Character in Japanese Cities." A candlelight communion service closes the evening's worship.

United Lutheran Church to Hear Dr. Gould Wickey.

Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the board of education of the United Lutheran Church, will be guest preacher at the Church of the Reformation at 11 a. m. tomorrow. His theme is "The Everlasting Hand." Church and Sunday school services are held in the Avenue Grand Theater, Pennsylvania avenue and Seventh street southeast, pending completion of the new church on East Capitol street.

The Luther League will meet at 7:45 p. m. at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. Yaeger, 700 East Capitol street.

Swami Gnaneswarananda Lectures on Hindu Music.

The Vedanta Society, 1712 N street northwest, offers a special program tomorrow at 8 p. m. The guest speaker, Swami Gnaneswarananda of India, who is the leader of the Vedanta Society of Chicago, and a master in vocal and instrumental music, will talk on "Hindu Music, Its Technique and Spiritual Significance." His lecture will be illustrated with pictures of Hindu musical instruments, musical moods, divine musicians, spiritual group music and ecstatic dance, music and rhythm of the spheres.

Dr. Stockdale Preaches At Both Services.

Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, minister of the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, will preach at both services tomorrow. His 11 a. m. subject will be "The Evangelical Spirit." He will preach on "Good-by, Old Year," at 8 p. m.

The vested choir of 60 voices under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl will be heard both morning and evening. The Christmas music will be repeated, with Paul DeLong Gable at the organ. A song service will follow the evening service in the east parlor.

The Young People's Society will meet at 6:30 p. m. in the east parlor. The subject of Paul Sedgwick, leader, is "The New Year." The Calvin Coolidge men's class will meet at 10 a. m.

Christian Science Churches Announce Their Services.

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Micah 5:2: "Thou, Bethlehem, Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel: whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." (Matthew 16:13-17).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text-Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Yearning to be understood, the Master repeated, 'But whom say ye that I am?' This renewed inquiry meant: Who or what is it that is able to do the work, so mysterious to the popular mind? With his usual impetuosity, Simon replied for his brethern, and his reply set forth a great fact: 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God!' That is: The Messiah is what thou hast declared—Christ, the spirit of God, of Truth, Life and Love, which heals mentally." (Page 137).

Latter Day Saints Hear Commissioner Lafount.

Federal Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount will occupy the pulpit tomorrow at 7 p. m. at the new Latter Day Saints' Church, Columbia road and Sixteenth street northwest. His subject is "The Power of Faith."

Full Gospel Tabernacle Announces Its Services.

The New Year's Day convocation will be held at the Full Gospel Tabernacle, North Capitol and K streets, from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The pastor, the Rev. Harry L. Collier will preach the New Year's sermon at 3 p. m. The order of service follows: 11 a. m., prayer; 2 p. m., Holy Communion; 3 p. m., sermon; 5 p. m., fellowship hour; 8 p. m., musical service-testimony and sang.

Sunday services are: 9:30 a. m., Sunday school; 11 a. m., sermon, "Divine Love;" 7:30 p. m., sermon, "A Transfigured Bride;" 11, watch night service.

Pageant to Be Presented At All Souls' (Unitarian).

"The Light Bearers," a pageant service, written for All Souls' Church (Unitarian), will be presented at the service welcoming the New Year, beginning at 11:30 p. m. tomorrow. At the 11 a. m. service, the minister, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will preach on "The Parting of the Ways."

The church school meets at 9:45 a. m. At 5 p. m., Lewis Corning Atwater, organist, will be assisted in a program of Christmas music by Flora McGill Keefer. At 5:30, Prof. Will Hutchins, of American University, will review Ralph Roeder's "The Man of the Renaissance." Supper will be served by a special committee from 6 to 7 o'clock. The feature at the motion picture hour, 7:30, is "The Conquerors." A special presentation of this picture will precede the pageant service welcoming the New Year at 9:30.

Herbert C. Parsons, of Boston, president of the National Unitarian Laymen's League, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Washington Chapter Thursday evening. Friday evening, "Ich Will Nicht Wissen Wer Du Bist," a German language film, produced by makers of "Zwei Herzen im Drei-Viertel Takt," will be presented in Pierce Hall. This is the fourth in a series of such presentations.

P. S. Foster Plaque Unveiling At National Baptist Church.

The plaque honoring the memory of Percy S. Foster, song leader and composer, who died in 1932, will be unveiled and dedicated at the National Baptist Church, Sixteenth street and Columbia road northwest, on Friday evening, January 12.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York, president of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, will deliver the address. The presiding officer will be Hermon C. Metcalf. Other friends of Mr. Foster will participate in the program.

Arrangements are in charge of Miss Monette Hallam, general chairman, and Merritt L. Smith, secretary of the Percy S. Foster Memorial Committee. The following organizations of which Mr. Foster was a member are cooperating in the meeting: Washington Federation of Churches, Christian Endeavor Unions of the District of Columbia, of Maryland and of Baltimore; Columbia Baptist Association, Baptist Young People's Union, Women's Baptist Missionary Society Y. M. C. A., District of Columbia Sunday School Association, Sunday School Superintendents' Union, Organized Bible Class Association, Oldest Inhabitants' Association of the District of Columbia, Washington Federation of Music Clubs, Washington Board of Trade and the D. C. Chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Rev. A. J. Wilder to Preach At St. Andrew's Church.

The Rev. A. J. Wilder will preach at the 11 a. m. service at St. Andrews Episcopal Church, his topic being "What Have We Done With the Old Year, and What Has It Done With Us?" There will be special music by the choir. The church school and the Bible class meet at 9:30 a. m.

On New Year's Day there will be Holy Communion at 11 a. m. and the usual celebration of Holy Communion will take place Thursday at 11 a. m.

Bishop Freeman to Speak At New Year's Eve Service.

A service for the people of the National Capital in commemoration of New Year's Eve will be held tomorrow at 4 o'clock in the Great Choir of Washington Cathedral with an address by Bishop James E. Freeman. The preacher at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 10:30 a. m. will be Canon Anson Phelps Stokes.

The Cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Edgar Priest will sing at the afternoon service, the numbers including "Come, Let Us Anew, Our Journey Pursue," a traditional Yorkshire carol. The composer is unknown. The late Charles Priest sent this carol in manuscript form many years ago to his son, the Cathedral organist, who has arranged it for the choir. It has been used for years by the caroling bands in Yorkshire and by persons in that part of England when they serenade one another outside their homes on New Year's Eve.

On Sunday afternoon, January 7, the Cathedral choir will present John E. West's cantata, "The Story of Bethlehem." Beginning with the first Sunday in January, the principal morning service at the Cathedral will begin at 11 instead of 10:30 and consist of a shortened form of morning prayer, Holy Communion and sermon.

Bishop Freeman will review "The Outlook for Religion in 1934" over the coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System from 12:45 to 1 p. m., New Year's Day, speaking from the studio here of Station WJSV.

"Changing and the Changeless" Is Theme of Dr. F. W. Perkins.

"Changing and the Changeless" is the theme of the New Year's sermon by the Rev. Dr. F. W. Perkins at the Universalist National Memorial Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. Communion service will follow the sermon. The church school will meet at 10:15, except the adult class, which follows the church service.

At a meeting of the Optimist Club, Tuesday, at 8:15 p. m. in the parish house, Arthur C. Monahan, of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, will speak on "The Indians and the New Deal." This afternoon at 2:30 a holiday party for the children of the cradle roll will be in charge of the superintendent of the department, Miss Hortense Keables.

"Faith in Man, a Theme for the New Year," is the subject of Dr. John Van Schaick, guest minister at the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. Dr. Van Schaick, editor of the Christian Leader and a former minister of the Universalist National Memorial Church, is preaching for the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy during his convalescence.

Church school is at 9:30 a. m. The senior department will hear Dean D. Butler Pratt in the closing talk of the study of "Race Relations and the Christian Ideal."

The Young People's groups will meet together at 6 p. m. for the fellowship hour and a college program.

Following the church night supper Thursday at 8:15, Prof. Irving F. Wood, Ph. D., will begin a series of five studies in "The Ideas of the Bible About Life on Hebrew Adventures in the Philosophy of Life." This week's topic is "The Simplest Philosophy—It Pays to Be Good," based on the Book of Proverbs. A question and discussion period will follow the address.

Dr. McCartney's Topic Is "The Untrodden Path."

"The Untrodden Path" will be the subject of the sermon delivered by Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 11 a. m.

The All Comers Men's Bible Class will be addressed in the morning by Dr. Clinton N. Howard, of Rochester, N. Y., his topic being "How God Calls Men."

The meetings of the Covenant Fellowship and the Westminster groups will not be held tonight, as the members will attend the union candle light service at Georgetown Presbyterian Church.

New Year's Day there will be a reception from 4 until 5:30 p. m., in the chapel of the church, at which the officers of the church, the Society of the Covenant and the Men's Society are to be hosts.

The Business Woman's Council will be addressed Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the lecture room of the church by Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes on "Africa and Its Problems."

Dr. Sizoo in His Sermons Will Review Year's Events.

Tomorrow morning at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo will have for his subject, "All Our Days." The sermon is in observance of the ending of the year 1933.

At the 8 o'clock evening service Dr. Sizoo will preach on "The Religious Significance of the Events of 1933." Because New Year's Eve falls on Sunday the annual watch night service at 11 o'clock will be omitted.

Dr. Vurpillot Will Preach At French Service Tomorrow.

At the French service at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 4 p. m. Dr. Florian Vurpillot will preach on the subject, "La Presence de Jesus," from the text "Reste Avec Nous."

Dr. James H. Taylor Selects "Looking Forward" as Topic.

At Central Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning Dr. James H. Taylor will preach on "Looking Forward." The evening service at 11 o'clock will be a New Year's Eve event. At this service Dr. Taylor will be assisted by the Rev. Wade H. Allison, of Leaksville, N. C. N. C.

The Christian Endeavor will meet at 7 p. m., when a distribution of the offerings for the past few months will be made to benevolent causes of the church, including home and foreign missions.

Communion Services At Rock Creek Church.

Services tomorrow at Rock Creek Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Church road and Webster street, will include celebration of holy communion at 8:30 a. m. and morning prayer at 11 a. m., with a sermon by the rector, Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan.

On Monday there will be celebration of holy communion at 10:30 a. m. On Saturday, the Epiphany, there will also be celebration of holy communion at 10:30 a. m. On Tuesday, at 10:30 a. m., Dr. Bohanan will officiate at a holy communion service in the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, of which he is chaplain.

The usual services will be held tomorrow in Holy Comforter Chapel, Rock Creek Parish, 5714 Georgia avenue. On Monday and Saturday, holy days, there will be celebrations of Holy Communion in the chapel at 10 a. m.

Masses on New Year's At St. Mary's Church.

At St. Mary's Church, Fifth street, between G and H streets northwest, of which the Rev. Charles J. Trinkaus is pastor, there will be masses on New Year Day at 6, 7, 8, 9 and 11:30 a. m. Benediction will be given after the 9 o'clock mass. The last mass will be the midday mass at 12:10 p. m.

Schools Prepare To Feed Needy

Hot Meals to Be Served Starting Tuesday.

Plans for the serving of hot lunches to needy children in 47 schools, when they reopen Tuesday were practically completed yesterday, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent and chairman of the lunch committee announced.

Supervising principals conferred with principals of the buildings throughout the day to make certain that equipment for serving the food is in satisfactory condition. The food will be prepared in a down town cafeteria.

Harry M. Gardner, of the emergency relief division, yesterday was named by Leroy A. Halbert, relief director, as contact man with school officials in charge of the distribution of free lunches to underprivileged children.

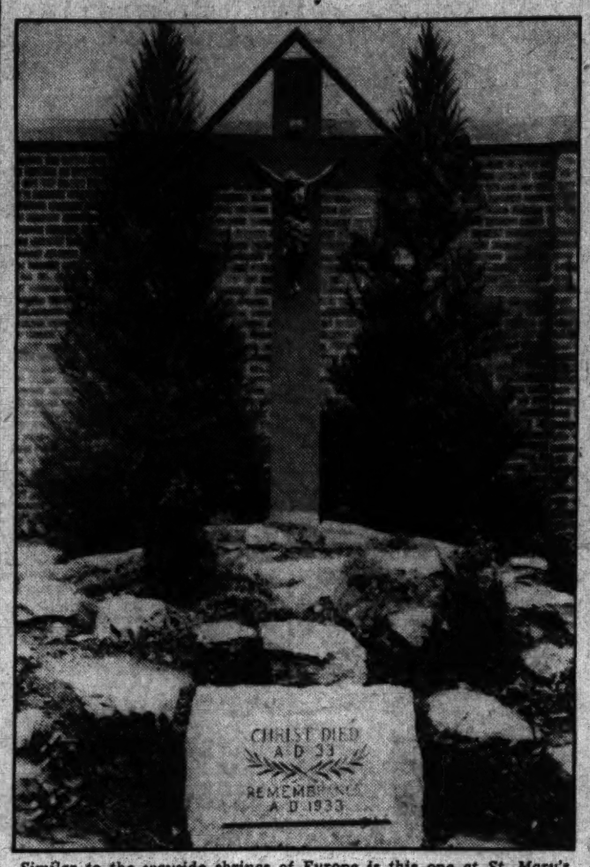
Panama Rail, Canal Study Will Be Made

A study of administrative operations and interrelationships between the Panama Canal and the Panama Railroad Company, both operated by the War Department, has been ordered by the Secretary of War.

"In view of the present day trend toward Government-owned corporations," the Secretary said yesterday, "principal emphasis will be placed upon a study of the Panama Railroad Co."

The survey will be made by the University of Chicago, Mr. Dern announced. Prof. Marshall E. Dimock of its department of political science will be in charge. It will be completed some time next summer.

Downtown Wayside Shrine



Similar to the wayside shrines of Europe is this one at St. Mary's Catholic Church, on Fifth street northwest, that recalls to memory the Tragedy of Calvary 19 centuries ago. The cross is of iron about 8 feet in height and surmounted by a roof of hammered metal. The figure of the Crucified Christ is of bronze. The shrine is elevated on a Golgotha of stone and earth, and embedded at the foot of the cross is a stone tablet on which are the words: "Christ Died A. D. 33. Remembrance A.D. 1933."

Paul Challenges Moderns

World, Perplexed by Post-War Moral Issues, Faces the Same Choice Between Christianity and Paganism as the World Faced in Apostle's Time.

By William T. Ellis.

Most of our noisy moderns are not clever enough to perceive that they are up against a great alternative. They can not escape the inexorable "Either, Or." Either they are right in repudiating old modes of thinking, old codes of conduct and old moral laws—in which case they must honestly and definitely chuck onto the scrap-heap the explicit teachings of the Bible—or else they are utterly wrong, and must climb down out of the fog and admit the stern authority of the plain teachings of Holy Writ.

Not even the Bible students who have been living for three months with the experiences and utterances of the Apostle Paul have all perceived the profound implications of the case. Either Paul spoke with authority and was eternally right—in which case the loose thinking and looser conduct that have marked our post-war era is dead wrong—or else he is a mere picturesque personality from the remote past, promulgating queer notions that are no longer valid; and so to be disregarded as a factor in our present times.

Dodge the issue we may not, if we are to retain any shred of intellectual honesty. Paul lived and spoke: the record is of proved authenticity. He claimed to represent Jesus, and to express His mind by Divine command. In that capacity of spokesman, he laid down many explicit doctrines, concerning, for example, personal chastity, personal probity, personal obligations to society, personal thought life and personal holiness. These undebatable teachings were presented as the will of God. There they stand. They must either be accepted and practiced or else cast away altogether.

Christianity Symbolized.

Which seems to me to be the issue above all other issues in this our befuddled day. Shall the world walk Paul's way—God's way—or will it still wander in pagan sensuality, mistiness and unsocial selfishness?

This man Paul, who shares with Moses the distinction of being the most influential human being that ever trod the earth, became the incarnation of an idea. In him, truth took on flesh and bones. Nobody who knows anything about him—and to be ignorant of Paul is to be uneducated, regardless of whether one be an atheist or a saint—can miss the outstanding meaning of his life. He himself put it into words, "For to me, to live is Christ." He was a Christ-obsessed man. He lived and labored only to know and to do and to express the mind of Chirst. For Paul, with his giant intellect and lowly life, was the chief interpreter of the crucified and risen Jesus.

In his many speeches, reports of which have survived, and in his extant letters to his converts and friends, he codified, as it were, the will of God for human conduct. There are none of the normal relations between the children of men which are not particularly dealt with by this master mind, who avowed repeatedly that he spoke with Divine authority. He did not leave his followers in the dark as to how human beings should behave. He set up the Christ standard of life so clearly that nobody could have any doubt about what is right and what is wrong.

Spiritual Aggressor.

That is the man, long dead but still living, as an immeasurable influence in the world, who stands face to face with a modern world, with its bewildered, anarchistic, pagan notions.

Suppose we recall, in a few paragraphs, the outstanding facts in the life of this man, Paul.

He was well born and well trained. Apparently, wealth, as well as culture, was his heritage, instead of becoming a waster, he devoted his youth, with all its powers, to the best thing in sight, which was the Jewish religion, the faith of his fathers.

Paul's example is a clarion call to youth. He got into the game of life. No sitting on the side-lines, in a spectator's role, for him. The defect which countless observers point out in contemporary sport is that it is something to be looked at and to be talked about, rather than to be played. Paul threw himself impetuously and whole-heartedly into the greatest cause he knew, after ripe preparation. How the needs of our day call for the active, self spending devotion of young men and women of quality!

Paul's Emotions Triumph.

While still in his early thirties, bitterly bent on his mission of maintaining Jewish orthodxy and extirpating Christianity, Paul ran into a sensational experience on the Damascus road. There, amidst a vision of light that blinded him, he encountered Jesus his archfoe. Thenceforth he was the captive of Christ, who became his soul's satisfaction, ideal and passion. He lived and labored tremendously, only to proclaim Christ.

It sets one to thinking seriously when he recalls that this scholar-philosopher-logician, Paul, the graduate of the universities of Tarsus and Jerusalem, was not changed by argument, by philosophy, by logic; but by a personal, emotional experience. And his subsequent appeal was to people's experience. He tried to introduce them to Christ.

In the colossal task of changing men's minds about God, the heart must play a larger part than the brain. Men are more accessible through their emotions and their will than through their intellects. Some moderns decry the old-fashioned emotional religion; yet that is just what we need, to take hold of the springs of life and bind them with fervor to the Way of the Cross. Conversion is still the Gospel program for salvation.

There is something deep in the breast of normal manhood which honors the adventurer, the explorer, the pioneer, the hero. By this test the Apostle Paul proved himself a man's man. Disdaining ease and scholarly seclusion, he fared forth to where dangers lurked, where the bugs bite, where murderous foes awaited, where prisons yawned, where storms raged. No task was too difficult for him to attempt, no expedition too dangerous for him to undertake. Whatever else history has inscribed below the figure of Paul of Tarsus, it has not failed to write, "This Was a Man."

Imperial audacity characterized Paul. He did not hesitate to fling himself against the high ramparts of entrenched moral corruption, in Antioch, Ephesus and Corinth; and against the citadel of pagan philosophy in Athens. Nor was his insatiable Christian ambition satisfied until he matched powers with Rome itself, the ruler of the whole world.

Had he failed, he would have been called a futile fanatic, a mere madmen. But he won. As a result of the Gospel Paul preached, Antioch, Ephesus and Corinth became Christian centers; Athens surrendered to "the pale Galilean" and Rome has had its longest fame and greatest power as a center of the religion of Jesus. And in great nations, whose very possibility of existence was unsuspected in his lifetime, Paul's teachings set the standard of Christian civilization. In its NRA the United States has accepted the Pauline principles as the new order of life.

Post-War Needs.

All this has befallen because one high spirit found God for himself. The only explanation for Paul's career is Christ. That same Lord is eager to meet, on modern Damascus roads, other fine souls who are serving the best cause they know.

"Who goes a step toward God, through doubtings dim.
God goes a mile, through blazing light to him."

All of upheaval and revolution and unrest that has marked our postwar world is, in essence, but a quest for the Better Life. Blindly and blunderingly, humanity has been seeking Something More, something worthier of free mortal spirits. Unknown to itself, this quest for personality and peace and the good life has been a reaching out after God—Whom Paul found, and was transformed in the finding.

Roosevelt Children Party Hosts Tonight

President and First Lady to Receive Guests of Mrs. Curtis Dall and Her Two Brothers; Dancing to Follow in East Room of White House.

This evening the White House will be brilliantly lighted and Christmas decorations will be everywhere to welcome the young guests of Mrs. Curtis Dall and her two brothers, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who is home from Harvard, and Mr. John Roosevelt, from Groton, who have been invited to dance in the east room of the White House.

The Marine Band, resplendent in red uniforms, which for long years has been a White House tradition at all social functions, will be in the entrance hall playing softly as the guests assemble, while in the white and gold room a New York orchestra will be waiting to start the evening off with the latest dance music for some three hundred guests.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will receive, and later in the evening Mrs. Dall will act as hostess. Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, accompanied by the latter's sister, Miss Barbara Cushing, will arrive in time for the dance as will many of the other out-of-town guests.

The dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar, will entertain informally at luncheon today at the embassy in honor of the Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands and Baroness van Breugel Douglas. There will be 16 guests.

Miss Leyla Sefa has come to Washington from Skidmore College, where she is a student, to spend the holidays as a guest at the embassy.

The United States Ambassador to Brazil, Mr. Edwin Vernon Morgan, who has been in Boston, is now at the St. Regis Hotel during his stay in New York.

The Charge d'Affaires of Japan and Mme. Taketomi will entertain the entire staff of the Embassy and Japanese residents of Washington at a party on New Year's Day following the ceremony of Saluting their Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Japan. The ceremony will take place at 11:30 a. m. at the Embassy.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern will be the guests of honor at a dinner given by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Benjamin D. Foulois Monday evening, January 22.

Mrs. Farley Will Honor Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, will entertain at luncheon at the Sulgrave Club, January 16, in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Farley will come to Washington the first of next week to join the Postmaster General and their children, Betty, Anne and James, jr., who are now at the Mayflower Hotel with their father.

Mrs. Farley will receive on Wednesday afternoon, when the ladies of the Cabinet will be "at home" formally for the first time this season.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior and the author of "Mesa Land: the Indians of the Southwest," will be the guest of honor at the second Book Talk Tea, to be held in the library of the Wilson Teachers College Friday, when the author-members of the Society of Women Geographers and resident author-scientists will be guests. The tea is one in a series of receptions designated "The Man Behind the Book," given by the library science students.

Maximum Defense.

A good defense at the Bridge table does not wait until the bidding is completed and the play begun. Alert players when holding the weaker cards do not remain passive while the opponents blithely reach their best contract. Sound lead-directing overcalls, lead-directing doubles of game or Slam contracts, and, last but not least, semi-psychic and barrier bids, all combine to make the life of a Declarer an unhappy one when he is up against strong opposition.

In today's hand Mr. Bernard Cone and Mr. Leo Bachrach, of New York City, first succeeded in getting the opponents to the wrong final contract and then by magnificent subsequent defense in the play succeeded in defeating this contract. The hand was played in one of the earlier rounds of the Vanderbilt Cup Tournament.

1—A bluff pure and simple, with ♥ hearts as the escape suit.
2—Undoubtedly South's correct bid, to smoke out the psychic.
3—West has bid East's own escape suit, so East decides to continue the bluff. He knows that South will know that he has made a psychic but he is throwing up a barrier to prevent North and South from exchanging information.
4—Adding height to the barrier.
5—East decides he has gone far enough. The penalty at five hearts might be too great.
6—South is definitely up against it at this point. He has had no opportunity to get information from North, a weak player. Knowing North's opening bids to be sound and knowing East to be bluffing, South decides to contract for a Slam at spades. After all, the suit looks pretty solid.

West's Opening lead was the heart King. Mr. Cone, sitting in the East position, took one look at the Dummy and one look at his own hopeless hand and quite properly decided that the only hope of defeating the contract was for West to take a trump trick. Accordingly, he dropped his Queen of hearts on West's King, definitely commanding his partner to continue the suit. Mr. Bachrach did so, and Declarer was forced to ruff with the three of spades in Dummy.

It is easily seen that this play forced Declarer subsequently to play his Ten of spades on his own Ace, and even though East's Knave dropped, West was eventually able to take a trump trick with his nine-spot. Had t[illegible] not been continued, the [illegible] the Knave of spades woul[illegible] abled Declarer to draw tr[illegible] out difficulty. Mrs. Burnside Is Hostess to Miss Waggaman.

Miss Frances Virginia Waggaman, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Ennalls Waggaman, whose marriage to Lieut. Robert Carson Brownlee 2d will take place today in St. Thomas' Church, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. W. Eben Burnside entertained at luncheon yesterday in her apartment in the Highlands.

The guests included Miss Nedine Marble, of Greenwich, Conn.; Miss Engracia Freyer, of San Francisco; Miss Hildegarde Lyons, of New Orleans; Miss Virginia Pratt, of Kalamazoo, Mich.; Miss Lucy Hutchinson, of New York, and Mrs. Francis Tompkins, Mrs. H. Prescott Gatley, jr., Miss Helen Walker and Miss Elizabeth Brawner.

In the evening Miss Elizabeth Brawner was hostess at a buffet supper party following the rehearsal for the wedding.

Best Dressed Woman Pooh-Poohs Paris!

Irene Castle McLaughlin Tells Ladies to Wear What They Please.

Chicago, Dec. 29 (U.P.). — Irene Castle McLaughlin, often called the best dressed woman in the world, today told her sister Americans to "forget Paris ever existed."

"Be yourself and forget Parisian clothes," said the woman whose charm has made her a notable of two continents. "Find a style that suits you and stick to it. The Parisian dressmakers exist to make money. Naturally they change the styles often. Forget about it."

Mrs. McLaughlin made the statement after Parisian dressmakers selected their list of the ten best dressed women in the world, which included only one American woman.

Graceful and slender as she was 20 years ago when she and her first husband, Vernon Castle, were the idols of the stage, the woman who introduced bobbed hair, short skirts and modern ballroom dancing to America proved an excellent advertisement for her theory. She wore a Persian lamb and mink coat with a jaunty black cloche hat.

Walkers to Visit At Davies' Home

Arrive Today for Call on Bride's Parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker will arrive in Washington this morning to visit Mrs. Walker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, for the week-end. They will attend the dance at the White House this evening. Miss Walker before her recent marriage was Miss Rahel Davies.

Mr. and Mrs. Davies also have with them their daughter, Mrs. Thomas Patton Cheeseborough, of Greenwich, Conn., who will remain in the Capital until the middle of next week.

D. C. Society Fetes Sub-Debs at Ball

Last evening the third annual subdebutante dance was held in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Between 300 and 350 of Washington's debutantes to be were there. At 12:30 supper was served in the Supper Club room, which was decorated with lighted tapers.

The ball was given under the direction of Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner. The chairman of the floor committee was Mr. Douglas Bogart and Mr. Homer Tatum the vice chairman. The patronesses were Mrs. William E. Pearson, Mrs. Lloyd Burns Magruder, Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, Mrs. Clyde Kelly, Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann, Mrs. Thomas L. Good, Mrs. Hayne Ellis, Mrs. John S. Flannery and Mrs. R. Wilmer Bolling.

Here's Home Cooking in a Home Setting

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Places to dine are numerous, but places where we can sit down to real home cooking, and not pay the price of royalty, are few and far between. It takes a bit of wandering around, a bit of searching here and there to find them.

It just so happened yesterday as we were passing one of the grand old residences of Washington, we noticed a small sign signifying that here was a place where such cooking prevailed. Somewhat doubting the sign, but impelled nevertheless by that proverbial genuine curiosity, we ventured within and inquired. Further than that, we sampled. And, believed it or not, for 50 cents we found a dinner which was actually cooked to taste like old Aunt Martha's.

Any evening, between 5 and 8, these perfectly delicious dinners are served. For $13.50 a month it's possible to buy a meal ticket that will see us through all 30 days with a complete change of menu every night.

In this day and time of grand economic schemes, half of us have turned into amateur cooks, who burn biscuits, scorch vegetables, and cook pot roasts till they're crisp and dry. Half our trouble comes through lack of knowledge, and some part of it through the kind of utensils we use. There's a new kind of cooker on the market now which will save us time and fuel, and save the flavor of our meat or vegetables.

We put the cooker on the stove with only enought water to completely cover the bottom. When the steam valve clicks reduce the heat to the lowest possible point, and then wait the usual time for the food to be done. Raise the top, and behold, a delectable meal, as savory and flavory as can be.

A few years ago in the frozen north a scientist mushed with his dog team across the barren wastes. Bitter nights, shrieking blizzards delayed his trek. The food supply grew lower and lower. One day there was nothing left in his hamper. In desperation he hunted through the frozen drifts. He found hanging outside an old abandoned cabin a deer carcass which had frozen very suddenly one of those frigid nights. Breaking his way into the cabin, he built a fire, thawed the meat, and cooked it. The scientist marveled at its fresh taste. When he finally made his way back to civilization he conducted experiments along this line and found that foodstuffs frozen instantly in sub-zero cold preserved all their fresh qualities.

From his experiments grew a new business. Plants are established all over the country. They take the products which are the best in that locality, pack them, freeze them, and distribute them all over the world. Peas are all shelled, spinach is all washed, corn is cut from the cob; cherries pitted and ready for pies; poultry is ready for the frying pan. Everything is scrupulously clean and edible.

And the nicest thing about this new process is that it enables us to have strawberries in January, or even fresh blackberries, plums, cherries and raspberries.

Just any ice cream at all doesn't tempt us this time of year. Some of the novel forms which a local concern is featuring are welcome any time. We acknowledge the greatness of artists who ply their trade on canvas, in marble, or with plaster, and now we take off our hats to the gifted designers who can turn ordinary ice cream squares into fascinating figures of the Three Little Pigs, Mickey Mouse, or what-have-you.

If Junior is going to have a New Year's party let him have a say-so about the refreshments. Let him decide on any design of ice cream he wants. Call the concern, explain what he'd like, and it's his in a jiffy, beautifully molded, exquisitely colored.

These interesting forms may be sent packed in dry ice to last several hours.

We might as well greet the new year gayly by serving our cocktails on one of the new giddy Florentine trays featured by a downtown store. They're lively in color, and livelier in design. Some of them come in bright red, blue and yellow combined. Others are equally striking in green, blue and yellow, with touches of numerous other colors. There are some in bright red against a black background which would liven up the deadest party, and add a bit of punch to the liveliest.

The same store is featuring some small trays for 25 cents which are just the things for serving individual coffees after dinner, or wine and wafers before dinner.

One of the best "after Christmas bargains" in men's supplies is the toilet set recently reduced to 89 cents. It includes a shaving cream, dental cream, cake of excellent soap, bottle of face and hand lotion, and a box of talcum powder. Buying them together in a group of this kind saves many pennies.

America to Lead World In Music, Says Composer

Lincoln, Nebr., Dec. 29 (AP).—Jazz music—if it's good—and the English opera have a stanch defender in Dr. Howard Hanson, Nebraska-born composer and president of a Rochester, N. Y., conservatory.

Dr. John Erskine, noted author and head of another New York music school, added his support to the work of American composers as the two yesterday discussed the problems and achievements of musicians before several hundred persons attending the fifty-first annual convention of the Music Teachers National Association.

"It is stupid to try to give operas in a language people can't understand," Hanson said, adding that English is a better language for composers than either French or German. He predicted that in ten years the United States will lead the world in music.

Cucumber and Pineapple Used In Prize Recipe

They Make a Delicious Ring Mold to Serve With Cold Turkey.

As the holidays are practically over many housewives wonder how they can serve leftover fowl.

Mrs. Chas. C. Kennon, of 3120 Thirty-eighth street northwest, evidently thought of these housewives when she submitted a tasty recipe for a salad of cucumber and pineapple ring mold. This ring when served with a center of leftover turkey or chicken will make a delicious dish. For her forethought Mrs. Kennon has won the weekly prize of $5. Her recipe follows:

Cucumber and Pineapple Ring Mold.

1 package of lime or lemon jello.
Little salt and paprika.
2 tablespoonfuls vinegar.
1 cucumber cut fine.
1 small can crushed pineapple (drained).
½ cup minced celery.
½ of a pimento chopped fine.

Make the jello using the directions on the package, then add the other ingredients in the order mentioned. Rinse your ring mold with cold water and fill. If the ring mold is used serve chicken or turkey salad in the center. If the individual molds are used, then serve around the turkey or chicken. You will find this a fine accompaniment and well worthy trying.

Tested on Every Count, These Cream Soups Score Big Hit

By Ann Barrett

Milk being the main ingredient of cream soups, blonde Jeanette MacDonald praises them for their beautifying effect. (Milk gives vitality and sparkle, she says.) Brunette Kay Francis likes them just because they taste so good. And I find them popular for at least three good reasons more. They're quickly and easily made, economical, and a grand warmer-up that's likely to make the rest of any lunch or dinner taste heaps better.

So I thought you might like to have a basic recipe for vegetable cream soups—which you can vary in many ways. Start with almost any vegetable (potato, onion, spinich, celery, cauliflower, cabbage and so on). Wash it and slice it thin or cut it up fine, and measure 2 cups of it. Put it on the fire with 1 cup water and cook slowly till very soft. Then put it through a fine sieve (together with the water it was cooked in). Next, make a thin white sauce this way: Melt 2 tablespoons butter, work into it 2 tablespoons flour, and gradually stir in 3 cups rich milk. Cook till thickened (stirring constantly.) Then add vegetable puree, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, and let stand over hot water till flavors are blended. Garnish (when serving) with crisp croutons, or a sprinkle of grated cheese, or a fleck of paprika, or a dab of whipped cream, or a sprinkle of minced parsley, or a few bits of vegetables saved out before you put it through the sieve. This recipe serves four.

Variations.

You can make the same soup from left-over vegetables. But in this case use about 1 cup of the vegetables heated up with ½ cup water so it will go through the sieve easier. Or use 1 cup canned vegetables (such as peas or corn) heated up in ½ cup of their own juice. Soups such as potato taste much bettter to most folks if made with a slice or two of onion (cooked with potato). Or a dash of celery salt. A tiny piece of bayleaf gives a nice flavor, too. So does a cup or so of chicken or veal stock (used in place of 1 cup of milk). When you can spare ½ cup of cream, use it in place of ½ cup of the milk—delicious! If you like your soup thicker, use another tablespoon of flour—but remember the soup thickens more anyway, if you keep it waiting.

With these general directions, I'm sure you can work out any regulation cream vegetable soup you wish. So I'm going on now with an extra-delicious onion soup that's made a little differently—the onions being browned first.

Here's how: Cut 1 pound cooking onions into thin slices. Let these cook in 4 tablespoons butter over a very low fire about 10 minutes. (Don't let them burn. They should get just medium-brown.) Then add 3 cups chicken or veal stock. Cover and simmer 30 minutes. Put through sieve. Then blend 3 tablespoons flour into ½ cup cold milk. Add another ½ cup milk, and stir this mixture into the strained soup. Cook till thickened, add ½ cup cream, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and (in each dish when serving) a sprinkle of grated American cheese.

Peanut Butter Soup.

Peanut butter soup, another high favorite, goes like this: First heat 3½ cups milk and ½ bayleaf in top of double boiler. Then work ¾ cup peanut butter as soft as you can with a spoon in a small saucepan. Gradually add some of the hot milk and continue working at peanut butter till it makes a thin paste. Then add to milk in double boiler. Stir and scald till very hot. Then take out bayleaf and add 1-3 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika and 1 teaspoon onion juice. In another pan melt 1½ tablespoons butter, blend in 1½ tablespoons flour, and stir in this thickening. Last add ¼ cup thin cream, heat thoroughly and serve.

Sunshine Wardrobes of "Whites and Brights" Carry Off the Palm at Southern Resorts

Directed by Amos Parrish.

New York, Dec. 29. — So you're going to Sunshine Land! And what fun you'll have shopping for summer clothes in winter. Such an array of them that even if you're not going the temptation to stock up now for next summer is great.

Well-balanced Southern resort wardrobes are full of whites and brights. And they're found in the following things:

Shirtwaist Dresses.

Shirtwaist dresses first . . . a classic for spectator sports and for golfing, too. The most popular style is one-piece with shirt front, either bosom, as sketched, or yoke. But newer styles are this same idea made two-piece, and a one-piece with scarf neck line.

White is right in shirtwaist dresses, brightened by a gay belt, buttons, scarf or mongram. Stripes are right, too, when they're bright on white, while checks and small plaids help vary your supply.

Next are those sleeveless, low-backed dresses known as tennis dresses but used even more for sunning on the beach. With a jacket they can go anywhere the shirtwaist dress goes.

These, too, you'll want in white or in white grounds with bright stripes or prints.

Jacket costumes are a third item well-balanced resort wardrobes have. One-piece dresses with jackets, or suits of skirt, jacket and blouse.

The jackets are made in the comfortable swagger style, the shorter fitted style or a still shorter box style.

Knitted Costumes.

A fourth good choice is a one, two or three piece boucle knit dress or suit. These, of course, are a sports classic, too, and in the new medium pastel shades are smarter than ever.

Plenty of sweaters. That's a fifth "must." You'll wear them golfing and just batting about.

Smart in sets . . . slip-on and cardigan. Smart alone in shirtwaist styles and drawstring slipovers.

Of course you'll need a separate sports coat. Probably a swagger, since that is the choice of most fashionable women. Natural, beige or white are the practical colors to wear with everything.

Bathing Suits.

On the active sports list must go first a bathing suit in a sturdy knit, or jersey or an acetate fabric with a low-cut back for tanning. The halter neck line is an especially becoming style. That's the one sketched.

And depending on how you plan to exert yourself, shorts (for tennis, bicycling and beach wear), slacks (the new overall slacks have a halter top attached), polo shirts, kerchief halters, a beach skirt or beach dress.

There'll be afternoons when you want to dress up so you'll surely have a soft afternoon dress or two, in a pastel crepe or a print.

And for evening there are lovely printed marquisettes or mousselines, printed crepes and satins, warp print taffetas, laces, crisp organdies, fine chiffons.

You'll want a goodly supply of the fashionable covered shoulder type, with ruffled decolletage or puffed sleeves. And a long-sleeved dinner dress or lace would be a fine idea.

Brimmed Hats.

Hats? Brims . . . both for protection and becomingness. Narrow or medium brims with a droop from a shallow crown, swagger brims rolled up in back, and sailor brims.

Then off-the-face brims for a change. Rolled up across the back and on one side. Rolled up at the side front. Rolled up all around.

And a beret or turban or two won't go amiss. Soft little things that can be tucked in trunk corners and coat pockets.

And if you want to get real gay, don't forget the Mexican influence that's getting into hats and add a punched-in-crown sombrero, or a less extreme shape brightened with a hatband painted or yarn-embroidered in a Mexican design. Or even a hat band of snakeskin.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If December 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 to 8 a. m., from 12:30 to 1:10 p. m. and from 4 to 5 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10:30 a. m., from 2:45 to 3:20 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:15 p. m.

People generally will act slowly and with care on this date. They will know exactly what they are about and the chances are that few emergencies will have to be met. Lovers may run into difficulties on this date and it is quite likely that in a sudden outburst of feeling more than one engagement will go on the rocks never to be patched up again.

If you were born on December 30 the chances are that there will be little excitement in your life. You are a naturally quiet individual, you go about minding your own business, and although you accomplish a great deal in more ways than one, your presence is not directly felt. Much of your life will be spent in study and in meditation and you will give your thought to problems of a deep nature. There is quite possibly an urge within you for a life of adventure, but unless you are pushed into such an existence by forces over which you have no control, it will not be developed. You will enjoy travel of a leisurely sort and over a period of years you will more than likely get around a good deal, both in your own country and abroad.

If December 30 is the date of your birth, you are inclined to worry too much about your own problems as well as those of others. You seem never to have enough trouble of your own when things go wrong for you are always running around fussing and fretting over what is likely to happen to others. Yours is not a romantic nature. You do, however, want very much to have a home of your own, and when you discuss your home, one really seems to see the finest side of you, for you have many beautiful thoughts concerning it. You will be happy with your family.

Successful people born on December 30:

Alfred E. Smith, Governor of New York.

Thomas Ryan, composer.

Cornelius E. Fenner, poet.

William R. Alger, congregational clergyman and author.

John W. Geary, soldier and governor.

The Family Marketer

Pork Offers Substitute for Turkeys, Scarce Because of Cold.

The weather freezes up, and the Marketer's feet get numb—the vegetables make no appearance on the market, the turkeys are hesitant about leaving the farms.

"Local turkeys can't come in when it gets so cold," explained the Market man, "Some stores have turkeys from Texas, but in general the prices are going to be high. We'll have a few local ones selling for 30 and 35 cents a pound.

"Stewing chickens will be 20 cents a pound," he told the Marketer. "Those for roasting are 25 cents a pound."

"What would be considered an inexpensive meat for New Year's dinner?" asked the Marketer.

"Well, we'll have fresh hams at 15 cents a pound, and smoked hams at 17 cents. Pork loin is 15 cents. So there you are; you can take your choice!"

The Marketer asks you to take your choice. Since turkeys are exorbitantly high, and since you may have had one a week ago, a nice roast of fresh pork might not be a bad idea.

Cured hams baked in cider that is just beginning to get hard, or in grapejuice, have a delicious flavor. Also the cider drippings can be used as a sauce for vegetables, string beans, brussels sprouts and the like.

Porterhouse steaks are 25 and 30 cents a pound. Round steak is 20 cents and sirloin 25 cents. Veal cutlets are 30 cents, chops are 25 cents a pound.

Here is a recipe for a raisin sauce for baked ham.

Raisin Sauce.

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup water
½ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup sugar
½ cup orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice or vinegar.

Melt the butter in a saucepan or top of double boiler. Stir in the flour, remove from direct heat and pour in the water, then stir slowly but steadily over direct heat until mixture boils. When sauce has boiled add raisins and sugar. Keep hot for 10 to 15 minutes so that the raisins may become plump. Add orange juice and rind and lemon juice just before serving.

Successful sauces come with practice. Unsuccessful ones have one of three faults, too thick, too thin, or lumpy. If too thick add more liquid used in the sauce, and since the flavor is diluted, re-season if necessary. If it is too thin (remembering that sauces thicken with cooling) an egg yolk may be beaten slightly, thinned with a little of the sauce and stirred into the sauce and heated below boiling point for not more than 1 minute. Or, an additional half-tablespoon of flour may be mixed into a paste and stirred into the sauce. If the sauce is lumpy, it can be made smoother with a vigorous beating with an egg beater. If some lumps are obstinate, they can be removed by pouring the sauce through a strainer.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

J. C. writes a letter about himself, of which the girl is as follows: For years he has been subject to fits of depression, during some of which he becomes an insomniac. He awakens profoundly depressed, because so upset over his inability to sleep that he cannot remain in bed. On occasions he gets up and walks for hours and then returns to bed to try to sleep.

Some attacks of depression come on gradually. Some start with a very unhappy dream from which he awakens and finds himself in the depths. He dreads losing his friends, money, and security and facing a hard and lonely future.

One is tempted to consider J. C. an insomniac who becomes so wrought up over his wakefulness that he is obsessed to walk. There are insomniacs who work themselves into a frenzy of restlessness because of inability to sleep, and a few of them cannot resist the obsession to get up and walk.

The treatment for that is training in calm, control, equanimity, and poise. It is a comparatively simple disorder and is overcome with comparative ease by those who have a moderate amount of intelligence and stability in which to build.

However, J. C. appears to have no trouble in sleeping except when he is in the depths. It seems likely that his trouble is more complicated and more difficult of control. Probably he has a cyclic personality and the sleep difficulty is a complication of one part of his cycle.

Persons with cyclic personalities go through periods of ups and downs. When they are in the up part of the cycle they feel very well and act accordingly. Their outlook on life is good. Some of them are pathologically optimistic, but that is quite unusual. When they leave the up period and start down they pass through a period in which they are about normal.

Middle Western Woman a Better Person Than She's Painted, Says Dagmar Leggett

A narrative description, "A PORTRAIT OF OLD GEORGETOWN," by Grace Dunlop Ecker. (Garrett & Massie, Inc., Richmond, $3.)

The very next time I cross over the Q Street Bridge by the iron buffaloes and set foot in Georgetown, I am going to take this book along.

I want to stand in Dumbarton street and look up at the old McKenney house. It is "about the most unchanged in all Georgetown." Henry Foxall (namesake of Foxall Heights) gave it to his only daughter when she became a bride in 1800, and the great-great-grandchildren of Mary Ann Foxall McKenney still live there. But interesting as those facts are, it is a story Mrs. Ecker tells on page 163 which makes me desire this sentimental pilgrimage.

It seems that about 1840 a maiden lady from Philadelphia arrived at the McKenneys' one noon for dinner, intending to return home immediately afterward. She had been telling stories to the children when the time came for her to go, at which little Henrietta McKenney set up such a weeping that Mrs. McKenney asked her visitor to stay a day. The lady from Philadelphia agreed. Her visit lasted several days, then a week, then weeks and weeks. She remained with the McKenneys for 40 years until she died.

Now it is not this example of a bygone liberality of manners which is so curiously appealing, but rather a trait of this lady from Philadelphia which I cannot describe better than in Mrs. Ecker's own words. "She had one fetich, the candles must be extinguished at 10 o'clock. She had her way, even if guests were present—they were put out. (The candles, of course, not the guests.) She went up to bed—they were relit. One night after her death a young son of the house, about 13 or so, was put to sleep in her room. At 10 o'clock the candle just went out. Every night it happened, they hunted for drafts. No draft could be located, the candles just always ceased to burn when the clocks reached 10 o'clock."

Now what I should like to know is whether or not a candle in that room of the old McKenney house will still flicker and die two hours before midnight.

Of just this compound of bringing the past vividly alive, of giving old houses and gardens in Georgetown a personality and a legend to us who pass by in the street, of showing us so clearly that the rich, distinctive flavor of Georgetown is bound up in the lives of those who have lived there, Mrs. Eckre has made her book.

At the northwest corner of Wisconsin avenue and M street once stood the hardware store of Edward Magruder Linthicum, another of the great philanthropists. He it was who founded the Linthicum Institute for the free education of white boys, the first night school in the District. At first it was housed in the Curtis School on P street. The present building on O street, erected in 1890, has an added association and one intimate to many residents here. For the upper story holds a dance floor which was the scene of the gay "Georgetown Assemblies" of the nineties and is still used.

The third philanthropist was George Peabody, who once ran a dry goods store in Georgetown in partnership with Elisha Riggs. Later he moved to Baltimore and then to London, becoming one of the great marchants of the world. The list of his benefactions is a long one—among them the Peabody Library in Georgetown, the Peabody Museum in Salem, the Peabody Institute in Baltimore, and a huge block of model homes for working people in London, this last representing a donation of $2,500,000. For such a service, Queen Victoria offered him a baronetcy, which he declined. It is irrelevantly amusing that he had fought against England as an artilleryman in the War of 1812.

Through all Mrs. Ecker's pages move the ancestors of many people still living in Georgetown—Henry Fleete, who traded for furs with the Indians and lived with them for 12 years after 1634; Ninian Beall, who arrived in 1703, and whose memory of the great Rock of Dumbarton near Glasgow left a name in Georgetown; his son, George Beall, and George Gordon, from whose estates the survey of 1752 established the site of Georgetown (incorporated in 1789); Henry Threlkeld, whose 1,000-acre estate of Burleith left another name; as well as the distinguished families of Peter, Balch, Dunlop, Cox, Laird, Lingan, Dodge, Custis, Forrest and Kennon, to mention only a few.

Mrs. Ecker tells of them all, who they were, what they did, where they lived. It is a fascinating record. She herself was brought up in Georgetown. There lived her parents, grandparents, great-grandfathers, and one great-great-grandfather. In her own memory walk many of the figures she describes, and from tales told her she learned at first hand much of the rest. She has even improved upon so advantageous a position, for her love for old Georgetown has been so keen and her research so thorough that there stand but one or two matters she has been unable to solve.

One comes to feel of the town as did Gen. Braddock, who wrote back to England in 1775: "Never have I attended a more complete banquet, or met better dressed or mannered people than I met on my arrival in Georgetown." Mrs. Ecker's book is the most charming possible introduction and guide. Even the old resident will find, on reading it, that his knowledge is clarified and his love deepened. And as for the comparative stranger, he will never really see and understand Georgetown until he carries the book in his pocket up and down those shaded, storied streets.

Loneliness.

By Katherine Smith.

There are hushed sounds sliding
Across the ears
Of night.

In a lonely tree
One bird
Calls.

It is like the voice
Of an anguished
Earth.

Calling—and calling
Only to be Unanswered.

Capital Singer Gives Up Career To Become Nun

Lovely Florence Yocum Will Sing Farewell Here Next Week.

Golden haired, golden voiced Florence Yocum, Washington girl for whom a brilliant career on the operatic and concert stage has been predicted since she first lifted her voice in public 12 years ago, sings her farewell to the world next Wednesday evening.

Three days later she enters upon her novitiate with the Franciscan Order of Nuns and the realization of a constant intention to devote her life and talents to the selfless service of others.

For three years music lovers throughout the East have listened to Miss Yocum's beautiful voice, broadcast weekly on Sunday evenings from the Church of the Immaculate Conception over the national Catholic Hour. Her concert appearance at the Mayflower Hotel next week, when she will be assisted by Prof. Harry Wheaton Howard—her music mentor since the age of 13—and Ann Arlen, violinist, is in the nature of a departing gift to the religious organization which has been one of her principal interests in recent years.

Sang in Opera.

At the age of 15 Miss Yocum sang with the Washington Opera Company, winning the approval of such distinguished opera stars as Feodor Chaliapin, Mme. Thalia Sabanieva, prima donna with the Metropolitan Opera Company, then singing the role of Marguerite in "Faust," and Ralph Errolle, distinguished American barytone.

Later, Miss Yocum came under the tutelage of Gretchen Hood, noted Washington soprano, who predicted for her pupil "a wonderful future," because of her "fine voice and faculty for hard work."

In the years 1928, 1929 and 1930, she emerged into prominence, first as contender, and, later, as winner for two successive years of the Atwater-Kent annual award to the best radio voice in Washington. The awards took her to New York City, where she was made much of in the music circles because of her lovely voice.

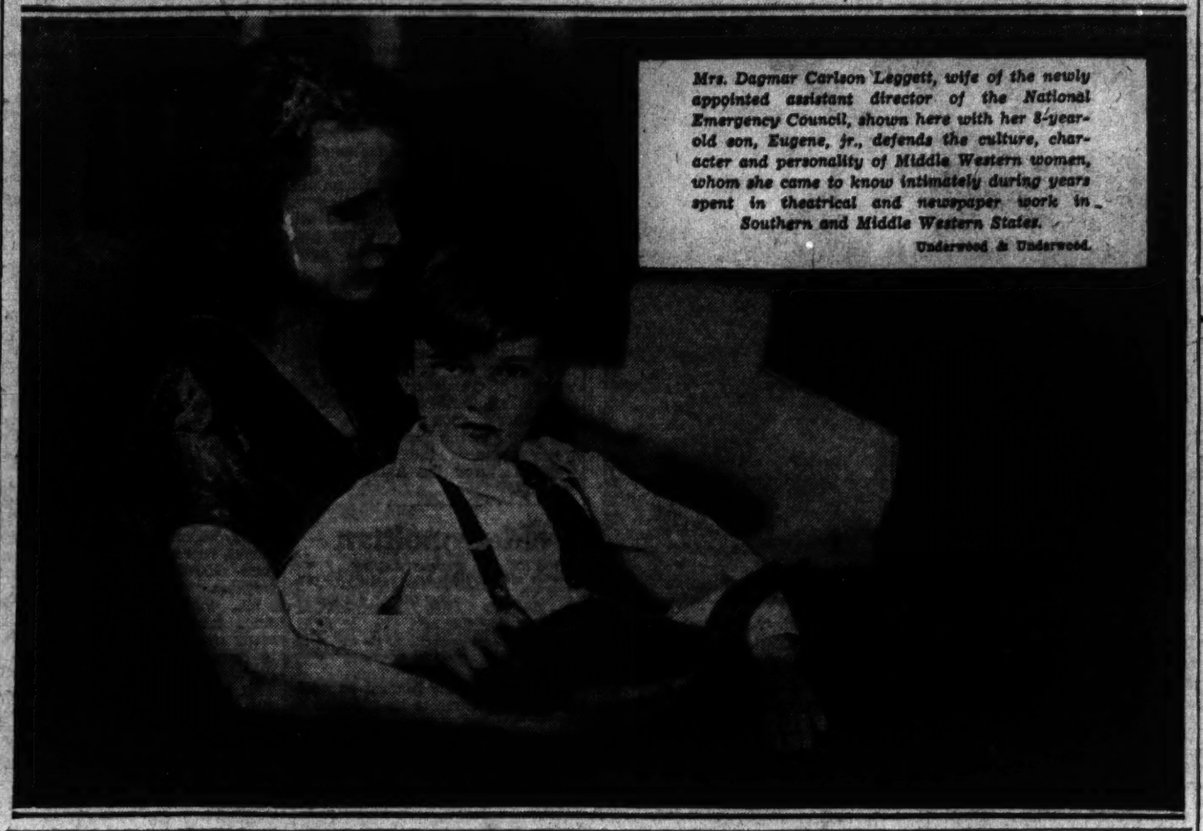
Twice Miss Yocum went abroad, on pilgrimages to holy places and to improve her singing technique by studying under teachers of international note, but as her mastery of voice increased, her disinclination to enter on a public career was intensified.

Had Her Own Plans.

"From the time Florence made her first public appearance at the Washington City Club at the age of 13, singing in a program sponsored by the congregation of St. Martin's Church, she has always met the urging of her family, friends, and teachers for serious consideration of a concert or operatic career with the answer, 'I have plans of my own,'" her mother, Mrs. George Yocum, of 1324 Newton street northeast, told a Post reporter yesterday.

"And all of us have known what those plans were. Since she was a very small girl, she has felt that she wanted some day to enter a convent. Her decision has been a thing of slow growth, maturing steadily as the years passed. I think there is no doubt it is her real vocation, and while it is hard for us to give her up, we feel she knows best what her real happiness and her future work must be."

Turning aside from a promising career as operatic and concert singer, Miss Florence Yocum, young Washington soprano, will enter the Franciscan Order of Nuns next month. She will sing her farewell concert next week, as a departing gift to the religious organization she has sung for over the National Catholic Hour's weekly broadcast during the past three years.



Mrs. Dagmar Carlson Leggett, wife of the newly appointed assistant director of the National Emergency Council, shown here with her 8-year-old son, Eugene, jr., defends the culture, character and personality of Middle Western women, whom she came to know intimately during years spent in theatrical and newspaper work in Southern and Middle Western States.

'Little Women' Styles Copied By Smart Set

Alcott Heroines Provide Ingenuous Gowns for Supper Clubs.

The heroines in Louisa May Alcott's "Little Women" had about as much night life as a member of the Old Ladies Home. But today the styles inspired by "Little Women" are creating excitement in glittering supper clubs and at brilliant parties.

Quaint plaids, in taffetas and crepes, are used for these new formal gowns with tight-fitting basques, long skirts, and, in many instances, long sleeves. Some have frivolous caps over the shoulders or fichu-like collars that extend over the upper arms.

Extremely striking is a ribbed crepe with scarlet and black plaid on a white background. This material is used for a sleeveless gown with high square neck, front and back, and long slim skirt. The bodice reveals the lines of the figure and is draped closely about the natural waistline. A scarf is thrown carelessly about the throat with the ends dangling down the back. The little plaid jacket which accompanies the gown is trim and tailored. Short black suede gloves, wrinkled at the wrist, accompany this quaint ensemble.

Other "Little Women" evening costumes are developed in gay, summery plaids. Coppery tones combined with blackish brown and cafe au lait are very flattering to blondes and redheads. Porcelain blue, Navy, lemon yellow, and ivory make a soft plaid that is excellent for blondes with pale coloring. Brunettes are most distinctive in patterns dominated by yellow, red, or green tones.

Heathens Increasing, Says Methodist Editor

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Higher institutiens of learning, including church schools, were scored last night by D. F. M. Richardson, Salem, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, as responsible for the "godless formalism" symbolizing the "dreadful time" in which "we are living."

"That there is a crisis, none will doubt," the editor declared. He cited the following figures of John R. Book: In 1930 there were 189,000 Protestant ministers at 212,000 churches with 31,000,000 members; conversions were 1 for every 2¼ ministers and every 40 church members.

"I shouldn't think the world will be quickly converted at that rate," Dr. Richardson remarked. He said there are 150,000,000 "more heathens than a decade ago."

Woman Doctor Visiting City Tells of Irish Adventures

Dr. Anna M. Allen Saw Sick People, Sick Turkeys, Cows and Chickens—But the Worst Was the Horse That Died in the Parlor.

By Katherine Smith.

Women doctors in the U. S. A. may run into a "bat in the belfry" now and then. But in Ireland one of them ran into a horse in the parlor.

Dr. Anna M. Allen, a visitor to Washington during the holidays, yesterday told amusingly of her experiences while practicing medicine among the Irish peasant folk.

"I used to call quite often on one peasant family," she said. "They were considered quite aristocratic in the neighborhood because they had a two-room cottage, of which one of the rooms was a parlor.

"I went out one day, and instead of serving tea in the parlor as was their habit, they served it in the kitchen. I thought that I had dropped in their estimation for some reason but later discovered they had their sick horse in there. They had no sheds, and the only place to coddle the horse was in their best room.

And When He Died.

"But that wasn't all. The poor horse got worse and died, and they couldn't take him out of the parlor in a whole condition because he was so big." Miss Allen's voice dropped to an amused whisper. "they had to cut him up and cart him out in pieces.

"Of course, it isn't unusual to make pets of the cows and goats among the country folk. I remember when I was a little girl I used to spend some time at my aunt's country cottage and we used to encourage the cows to come into the kitchen during meals. Sometimes the chickens would perch on the rafters but—that was a little annoying.

"Once we took a sick chicken and put him into the low oven by the kitchen fire. It was nice and warm, and would have been a fine place for him to recuperate if some one had not accidentally closed the oven door.

"The next day we had a funeral, and put a Union Jack over the grave.

"Turkeys have a hard time in Ireland. They say that if a turkey gets his feet wet he will die. The dampness is bad for them so every time it rains the turkeys are taken into the house."

Miss Allen did considerable practicing among the country people.

"When some one gets sick," she said, "they call in the herb woman, or the village seer, and apply snail poultices, and all kinds of weird remedies. Finally they call in a doctor after everyone else has had a shot at the job of bringing the patient 'round. If the patient dies, they blame the doctor, but if he lives, it is the will of God.

Food Under Bed.

"I was in charge of one of the dispensaries at one time, doing anything that came up—surgery, obstetrics, first aid. It was very difficult because there was no equipment. The only instrument they had was an old rusty-tooth forceps.

"The country people have an unfortunate habit of keeping the foodstuffs under the beds. I once traced a typhoid epidemic to jars of milk under a farmer's cot.

"The extreme poverty among the country people is greater than one can imagine. Their food is the most meager. If they can serve an egg, a little tea, and a bit of their coarse bread it is considered a feast.

"Brown eggs are considered quite a delicacy, the browner the better. I didn't know how they could get so brown until I happened to stroll into a kitchen in one cottage and found that they boil the eggs in the teapot with the tea. The eggs get brown enough, but the process makes the tea rather strong."

Miss Allen is by profession a pathologist and is particularly interested in neural pathology.

"I became interested in the subject through psychiatry, but there is so little that is tangible to work on in that branch, so I have started to work on the physiological end of it," she explained.

"I am getting together a collection of brains. I have several of very smart people, professors and the like, and some of feebleminded persons. As far as the sizes and actual tissues are concerned, there seems to be very little difference.

"You can't tell a man's mind by the size of his hat. The largest brain I ever examined was that of an imbecile.

"Whales have bigger brains than men, but that is simply because of the relationship to the rest of the body. Thus, men have larger brains than women—in size, I mean—because men are physically larger than women."

Miss Allen was born in Dublin, and was graduated from the Dublin University School of Medicine, and the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons. She has been practicing in this country for the past six years.

New Slippers Use Mirrors, Bands, Beads

Glittering Playtime Things, They Are the Essence of Frivolity.

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Slippers that go dancing this holiday season are colorful, gay and frivolous.

The sandal patterns are high favorites, and some of them are very brief affairs. Several styles, in fact, consist of nothing more than bands of leather holding the sole in place.

One clever new sandal is studded with tiny mirrors on the T-strap and around the instep. Instead of mirrors the same idea is worked out in colored bits of glass in other variations of the same pattern.

Straps of leather, both narrow and wide, are the medium widely favored by designers of this season's evening slippers and they have achieved some artful and novel effects.

On one pair narrow straps in two alternating colors have their beginning in a circle over the instep. They fan out a whirling comet to make the toe, the strips in one color going to the left and those of the other to the right.

Even where there is little or no open work on the slipper the effect of straps is simulated.

Nearly all the new slippers have open shanks, and there is a new and decided decorative attention paid to the upper heel.

As for the heels themselves they may be high or low. Low heeled evening slippers are a new style.

Doeskin, pastel tinted, has invaded the evening slipper field. Often it is trimmed with gold or silver kidskin. Kidskin itself is a popular medium. Then there are the brocades, and in the fabrics, satin, velvet or crepe, dyed to match the predominating color of the costume, are smart.

D. Rivera Loses Weight Hails Social Revolution

Mexico City, Dec. 29 (AP).—Diego Rivera, the Mexican painter who was a storm center of controversy in the United States, was back home today, elated over two things—the face that he lost 100 pounds while working in Detroit and that "the social revolution in the United States has begun to renew the value of art."

The pudgy muralist, who lives in an extremely modernistic red-blue-and-yellow house in suburban San Angel, said he was satisfied because his "revolutionary" art had brought forth all shades of opinion.

Chinese Girls' Heads Shaved To Banish Synthetic Curls

General Fu-Chu Dislikes Foreign Fashion, So He Squelches It.

Tsinan, China, Dec. 29 (AP).—A firm military man is Gen. Han Fu-chu, a man notably unsusceptible to the blandishments of Shantung women who wear their hair in foreign-fashioned curls.

A large number of Chinese girls and women of modern tendencies, whose freshly-shaved heads today were bald and shining as so many eggs, offered evidence of the general's old-fashioned ideas on the subject.

Han Fu-chu is Governor of Shantung Province, and he rules with an iron hand. The modern fashion of wearing the hair in curls was especially displeasing to him. Chinese hair is traditionally straight, not curly.

Almost any dermatologist will tell you that the hair of a Chinese is not elliptical in shape, like an American's or a European's. It is round, and perfect, and does not curl naturally. Shantung hair is especially faultless in this respect and is in wide demand for hairnets, which are exported at considerable profit.

Imbued with an intense Nationalism, Governor Han Fu-chu decided that women of Shantung should no longer wear their hair in curls, and he forthwith ordered the arrest of feminine curly locks.

The wailing protests of the arrestees were quite in vain. Han's special bodyguard was assigned to the task of teaching femininity a lesson. Armed with sharp razors and following strictly the governor's orders, they shaved off the heads of the prisoners and sent them forth with bald pates.

Sand-Covered Land Farmed Once More

Edison, Colo. (AP).—After two years of living in what resembled a miniature Sahara, Edison farmers are getting a look at their farm buildings again.

Two years ago winds carred sand onto the farm lands, heaping it to the barn eaves in most instances. For two years nothing grew, but this year, aided by stray winds and scrapers, many farmers got down to earth again and raised a few crops.

One farmer managed to plant a corn crop and then, to protect the vegetables, planted a garden in the middle of the corn field. Both grew. Using such devices to halt the shifting sands, other farmers have raised pumpkins, corn, beans and other produce. The sand, however, remains a potential menace.

Prominent Capital Resident Defends Small Town Sisters

Wife of Assistant Director of National Emergency Council Thinks Sinclair Lewis and Other Writers Unfair in Their Criticism.

By Elizabeth Young.

Fiction and rumor haven't done right by the Middle Western woman. If there is such a creature—and geography and legend substantiate the theory—she's been misrepresented and misunderstood.

She's neither mean nor petty nor gossipy nor crude. Who says so speaks in error and without knowledge, in the opinion of Dagmar Carlson Leggett, lovely blonde former newspaperwoman who has known her where she lives.

Dagmar Leggett, descendant of Vikings, subject of portrait painter and sculptor, wife of the newly appointed assistant director of the National Emergency Council, Mr. Eugene Leggett—past president of the National Press Club—was stanchly explicit in her defense of the Middle Western woman.

"The fact that the small town woman in the Middle West is much interested in her neighbor's life is popularly regarded as something very pericious and very wicked; instead it's's something very generous and, really, very noble," Mrs. Leggett spiritedly told a Post reporter yesterday.

Rise Above Handicaps.

"Such women realize each is dependent upon others for much of the interest and diversion which goes to make life livable. Symphonies, theaters, art galleries are out of reach of most of them, but they accept their limitations and rise above them with a humor and tolerance unsurpassed by women who have the world as their playground.

"And if the Middle Western woman's interest in her neighbor does sometimes manifest itself in what we call 'gossip,' it is not an unhealthy symptom. Her attitude for the most part is humane and laudable and generous and kind."

"I feel fiction writers take unfair advantage when they hold up one mean, petty character—who might be indigenous to anywhere—and make her symbolic of a small town, Midwestern woman, as Katherine Brush does in 'Red Headed Woman,' and Sinclair Lewis in many instances.

"Once in a while Lewis does manage to give us a character who is not despicable. He is a gifted portrayer of American life, and his delineation of Leora, the doctor's wife in 'Arrowsmith,' is incomparable. But I never knew anybody in the least like the 'Ann Vickers' of his latest book."

Born in West.

Daughter of a Western physician, Dr. O. F. Carlson, who has practiced medicine in Fort Worth, Tex., for 40 years, Mrs. Leggett was born and reared among the Western women she defends.

She was educated in Texas, finishing her education at the University of Texas, before going abroad for six months' study in England and on the continent. On her return to the United States she spent a year in travel through Southern and Western States, produced home-talent plays.

In 1921, she took up newspaper work, reporting for a Fort Worth newspaper, which she left the following year to go to Montreal, Canada.

"The inherited Viking wanderlust coming out in me, I guess," she said. She arrived with $5, and found another newspaper job within 24 hours.

Later, on a week-end visit to Detroit, Mich., a friend suggested to her the idea of getting a newspaper job in that city. Acting on the suggestion, she promptly did so, and enjoyed the most exciting period in her newspaper career. Also, she met the man who later became her husband.

"That was a lively year," said Mrs. Leggett. "My assignments ran the gamut from crime reporting to trying to straighten out the identity of the first famous 'mixed babies' case, with the 'House of David' scandal thrown in for good measure.

Here With Husband.

After her marriage, Mrs. Leggett went with her husband to Lansing, Mich., where he was assigned to cover State legislation. Again, as reporter for the Capital City News in Lansing, Mrs. Leggett had opportunity to contact the lives of Middle Western women. She gave up newspaper work, following the birth of her son, Eugene, jr., in 1925, and in the same year came with her husband to live in Washington, where he had been assigned correspondent for the Detroit Free Press.

"I'll have to admit that my defense of the Middle Western woman doesn't apply to the Middle West itself, although I feel disloyal for saying so," Mrs. Leggett remarked. "Personally, I love the intimate contact with theaters, concerts, lectures, and art galleries so much that I'm afraid I would always feel starved and thwarted if destined to live in an inland small town.

"And it is because of that feeling that I have such great respect for those women who accept the material at hand and spin out contented, productive, creative lives. There are a surprising number of cultured and interesting women—yes, and men—in the Middle Western States. While it is hard to define so general a term as culture, I mean it in the sense of intelligent appreciation of artistic, intellectual and spiritual values.

Pioneer Spirit.

"There is a pioneering quality of strength and force of character belonging to those people, struggling with the disadvantage of little cultural opportunity.

"I think Ed Howe, now 81, whose books have never been very popular, presents these people more accurately and more sympathetically than any one who has ever written about them. Have you read his 'Story of a Country Town,' or his series, 'Plain People?' There is a true and familiar ring to them for us who know and love and understand the Middle Western family.

"As for Sinclair Lewis, I wonder if he would ever have been heard of if he hadn't lived in the Middle West and fed his genius on the inspiration of the lives of these people he impales with his pen."

America Needs Youth to Lead It, Says Editor

But Viola Ilma, Magazine Founder, Finds College Folk Lack Vision.

There is more strength in the wealth of youth than in the bankruptcy of old age.

That is the basic philosophy of Miss Viola Ilma, dynamic attractive 23-year-old leader of the American Youth Movement, and editor of Modern Youth, the magazine which is called the voice of the younger generation. The slogan of this magazine is "no author can be over thirty."

Miss Ilma quite by accident arrived in Washington at the time when four different student groups are holding conferences here. She is attending each conference in order to get the ideas of various groups.

"The interest of the students in National and international affairs is important," she stated yesterday, "because it shows that American youth is awakening.

Students Lack Stamina.

"But a youth movement in America must not depend upon students. They never get anywhere while they cling to their student-like grudges and fight among themselves.

"They are bound by college walls. They lack the intelligence to see that all youth is as lost and frustrated as they are. The noncollegiate youth has a stamina, and a comprehension of reality which the student lacks. In order to accomplish anything, all classes of American young men and women must band together.

"In European countries all leaders look to youth. This is not true in America because American young people are not organized. Their lack of organization explains their lack of influence in government.

Miss Ilma believes that one of the first steps toward the education of American youth to a sense of its own responsibility is the establishing of a central bureau in Washington.

"Into this bureau young people from all over the country can bring their ideas and can form a constructive policy.

Five Point Plan.

"As editor of Modern Youth I have read over two thousand manuscripts from young people all over the country. From these I have formed a five-point plan, which I believe is the philosophy of intelligent youth today.

"First of all we look to President Roosevelt. We belive that he is serving the truth, and is working for the interests of the people, not of any particular party. We believe in peace, in the education of boys and girls for the world of reality, and in a social solution for the problem of vagrant young people."

Miss Ilma has traveled arond the world three times. During her travels she has attended economic conferences in all countries.

"I am against such terms as 'radical and 'conservative,'" she said. "I think they have lost their meaning. Much good could be accomplished by changing these terms to 'constructive' and 'destructive.'

"I am against youthful rioters who tear down and offer nothing to take the place of what they have destroyed. They should have a definite goal."

Miss Viola Ilma, editor of Modern Youth, thinks America's hope lies in its young people and their fresh outlook on the world. But she is not so sure about the college student. University walls hem him in mentally, says she, insisting the noncollege boy or girl has a more vital point of view. And she wants Washington to be the center of an American youth movement.

New Year's Bills, Opening Yesterday, Are Appraised by The Post's Reviewers

A Musical Hit Wholly Unique At RKO-Keith's

"Flying Down to Rio" Has Novel Appeal; Other Programs Score.

"FLYING DOWN TO RIO." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen story by Cyril Hume, H. W. Hanemann and Erwin Gelsey, from a play by Anne Caldwell based on an original story by Lou Brock, starring Dolores Del Rio, with Gene Raymond, Raul Roulien, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Blanche Friderici and Walter Walker. Music by Vincent Youmans; dances by Dave Gould. Directed by Thornton Freeland. Previewed Tuesday midnight.

By Nelson B. Bell.

There is a color, a glamour and a quality of sprightly originality about this musical extravaganza that none of the season's earlier productions falling in the same category has possessed.

"Flying Down to Rio" may be said to be the apotheosis of the unconventional. It does not in any respect conform to the supposedly rigid requirements of successful romancing to music on the screen.

Its song numbers last too long, its story lacks sufficient substance, its essay at the serious business of intercontinental aviation is wholly flippant and its purpose is obviously one of no great cultural importance.

Yet it is one of the outstanding entertainment values of the year—a picture that "gets you" by the very daring of its innovations, the gayety of its incident and the judicious exploitation of a cast that has been admirably chosen for the services that are exacted of it.

Story of Rival Loves.

The basis of the story has something to do with the rival love affairs of a brilliant young American dancer and a Brazilian Lothario of conspicuous vocal attainments and a rare willingness to meet honesty of motive and integrity of character a little more than half way. This thread of narrative, it should be said, is frequently lost sight of in the more important business of "putting on a show." This, "Flying Down to Rio" assuredly does.

This picture offers the single instance that occurs to mind in which a celluloid spectacle has had the courage to devote the footages to song numbers that their intrinsic merit has warranted. As compared with other musical features, this unique contribution to the midwinter's gayety goes in for songs in a majestic and an opulent manner. There is nothing within memory quite comparable to the "Carioca" number that really comprises the piece de resistance of the film.

It is done with a versatile command of all the resources of modern stagecraft, a variety of tempos and terpsichorean treatments and an insinuating fidelity to Latin-American tradition that stamp it as one of the most completely effective efforts yet made in the direction of genuine cinematographic musical achievement.

Cast Excellently Chosen.

Involved in all this striking attainment of a truly exotic effect, of course, are the impressively diversified talents of Ginger Rogers, Dolores Del Rio—who should be mentioned first as the picture's ostensible star—Fred Astaire, Gene Raymond, Raul Roulien, a bona-fide South American, who, in combination with the Mexican Senorita Del Rio, lends the film an authentic Latin-American flavor; Blanche Friderici, Walter Walker and numerous others whose adaptability to tasks not within the usual range of their activities stamps them as artists of more than ordinary capability.

The most sensational—and least believable—scenes in the picture are those which comprise the film's climacteric moments when a bevy of beautiful young women are called upon to execute all manner of exciting exercises on the wings of seemingly soaring airplanes. There are thrills here that the screen never has attempted before.

Miss Del Rio's Best.

Miss Del Rio never before has been cast in the stellar role of quite such an opulent fantasy as this. Gene Raymond has been seen to better advantage than as the bogus aviator who comes off victorious in his affair of the heart, but Raul Roulien, his closest rival never has had the vocal opportunity that he finds in his present assignment.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are revelations in their agile demonstrations of what can be done with dance measures a little alien to American custom and tastes.

The auxiliary attractions include the new "Three Little Pigs," in its Gallic version, and a new issue of the RKO-Pathe News. But the important thing is "Flying Down to Rio." You will be everlastingly sorry if you miss it—provided, of course, that you have a place in your appreciation for utterly flippant and inconsequential musical diversion, as who has not?

Palace

"DINNER AT EIGHT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, adapted to the screen by Frances Marion and Herman J. Mankiewicz, featuring Marie Dressler, Lionel and John Barrymore, Billie Burke, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, Lee Tracy, Karen Morley, Phillips Holmes, the late Louise Closser Hale, Jean Hersholt, Edmund Lowe and May Robson. Directed by George Cukor.

The fruitfulness of catastrophe as a source of effective melodrama, involving the services of a prodigious number of screen players of utmost preeminence has probably never been better exemplified than in this varicolored recital of the disasters that befell a small group of urbanites invited to a smart dinner party on a certain ominous Friday.

Ostensibly to meet a party of visiting nobility from Britain's proud peerage, a noted doctor, a business pirate, a tottering shipping magnate, a broken-down actor, a retired and indigent actress and numerous others from various strata of the social structure, attempt to assemble at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Jordan for "dinner at eight."

On this particular evening, so prolific in disaster for all concerned, however, everything goes awry, the guests of honor depart unceremoniously for Florida, and suicide, physical collapse, social bickerings and all manner of other calamities intervene to defeat the genial purposes of the host and hostess.

Not Realistic Drama.

There can be no reconciling the occurrences depicted in this fabulous and handsomely contrived screen play with the requirements of realistic drama. All those things just would not happen to so limited a group of people in so short a space of time. Nevertheless, in the faithful transcription of the Edna Ferber-George Kaufman play, the adaptors have managed to compose a drama that is continuously and absorbingly interesting, opulently embellished and played with a tremendous zest.

It is not possible to select a star of the picture, because practically every member of the cast of 14 principals, at one time or another, assumes stellar prerogatives and dominates scenes that are of vital importance to the rounded recital of a perverse fate's exorbitant toll.

So much has been written of "Dinner at Eight," since its presentation locally and nationally as one of the season's more notable "road show" attractions, that little remains now to be added to the sum total of the panegyrics it has inspired.

Brilliant Principals.

Marie Dressler, as Carlotta Vance, the ex-actress; John Barrymore, as Larry Renault, screen star who is "through" and doesn't know it; Jean Harlow, as Kitty Packard, the guttersnipe wife of Dan Packard, the commercial brigand; Billie Burke, as Mrs. Jordan, and Lionel Barrymore, as her sorely afflicted husband, all have opportunity, now and again, to lay claim to the film's foremost acting honors.

Hardly less can be said of Madge Evans, Karen Morley, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe, Elizabeth Patterson, May Robson, Phoebe Foster, Grant Mitchell and all of the others included in a roster of stars that might be mistaken for a "Who's Who" of Hollywood.

Not the least admirable traits of "Dinner at Eight" are the direction of George Cukor and the photography by William Daniels, both of which deserve all of the encomiums that have been showered upon them.

A Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Around the Calendar;" an M-G-M cartoon comedy, "Stratosphere," and a new issue of the Metrotone News augment a feature which should not be neglected at the Palace's regular scale of popular prices. It was a bargain at the considerably tilted tariffs of the road show tour.

Loew's Fox

"THE WOMEN IN HIS LIFE." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by F. Hubert Herbert, featuring Otto Kruger, Una Merkel, Ben Lyon and Isabel Jewell, with Roscoe Karns, C. Henry Gordon, Irene Franklin and Raymond Hatton. Directed by George B. Seitz. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

This is gala, holiday season fare at Loew's Fox this week, with those perennial and popular favorites, Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit, returning to the stage, Harry Rose stepping from Broadway to F street and a surprisingly good screen offering bearing the lurid title of "Women in His Life."

The title is misleading, we were delighted to discover. Women in the life of Famous-Criminal-Lawyer Barringer, admirably played by Otto Kruger, are incidental. He is a man who peers into crowds looking for a ghost and who treasures a miniature of a woman.

He is very much of a cynic. Very hard, very casual and possessing an arrant dilettantism that makes him irrestistible to women, he knows his courts, knows his juries, knows his public, knows his women * * * a very knowing man, this Barringer. And when he finally discovers that the woman who has possessed his heart, soul and memory throughout the years has been removed from life in as violent a manner as she had lived that life, he knows enough to unravel the tangled skeins of his existence and save the man accused of her murder from the electric chair.

One of Worthy Pictures.

"Women in His Life" is by no means a perfect picture (when they begin making perfect pictures there will be no need of reviewers and most of them will drop dead from the shock, anyway), but it is one of the really entertaining pictures of the current cinema season. It is fraught with melodrama, suspense, action, comedy-relief, the good old courtroom and death chamber scenes, so dear to the heart of the studios, and a few well-seasoned epigrams that "get by" because they are delivered in Mr. Kruger's intimate manner.

If you are not familiar with Mr Kruger, we advise you to see "Women in His Life." He is one of our really better actors and possesses an indefinable "it-ness" that will probably swell the M-G-M fan-mail considerably.

The supporting cast varies in its degrees of excellence. Una Merkel is always Una Merkle, one of our favorite comediennes. Roscoe Karns is splendidly amusing and natural as the faithful Lester; Ben Lyon has the unsympathetic role of didactic, smug young lawyer, and Isabel Jewell has her first really good part since her bit in "Blessed Event" and plays with a sincerity that will probably bring her bigger and better roles. Miss Jewell (Lee Tracy's fiancee, in case you are interested) is Cathie, a nightclub girl who carries the torch for Barringer.

Duet Is a Hit.

One of the high lights of the film is an inebriated duet sung by Roscoe Karns and Irene Franklin, who plays the part of a lady who has just "bumped off" an unwanted husband.

A Fox Movietone News completes the screen offerings, and makes way for a generous stage show, tunefully preceded by Phil Lampkin's overture of "Outstanding Song Hits of 1933." Mr. Lampkin gives "Farewell to Arms" as a very lovely trumpet solo, and features the inevitable "Last Roundup," appropriately accompanied by taps, as the piece de resistance—and may it rest in peace in 1934!

"California Revels," featuring Costello and Lee, Geraldine, three Byrne Sisters, and Margie Greene, present some fast steps, a remarkable exhibition of contortionism, and some rhythmic tap dancing that will delight followers of the terpsichorean art.

Harry Rose, whose sophisticated effervescence is always a delight to those who get a yearning for Times Square, is as good, if not better, than ever. Mr. Rose, whose finger is found in lots of song hits and vaudeville skits, introduces a melodic soliloquy called "Broadway's Lullaby" as a finale. Mr. Rose's voice, incidentally, is much better than he would have you suspect.

Joe and Pete Michon offer an acrobatic bit of foolery that pleased the customers no end and proved that slapstick is still an enduring part of man's sense of the humorous.

Headliners Come Through.

Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit couldn't quite get the "feel" of their audience at this first performance. They were a little stiff; a little self-conscious. Obviously they missed the microphones that have made them such beloved entertainers on the air. But when they finally introduced their "Memory" selections, things warmed up and we had before us the Julia Sanderson of musical comedy days and the Frank Crumit of numerous phonograph records and stage hits. Miss Sanderson is slim and exquisite and Mr. Crumit is devotedly untiring in his efforts to give her the spotlight. We wish there were more of these charming veterans of the time when musical shows were regally musical shows.

"THE HOUSE ON 56TH STREET." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Joseph Santley, featuring Ray Francis, with Gene Raymond, John Halliday, Ricardo Cortez, Margaret Lindsay and Frank McHugh. Directed by Robert Florey. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Yowza, m' hearties, ye old maestro and all the lads are back again, struttin' for us guys and us gals in better form than ever And that, folks, is something; for when one says that radio's leading band is better, you've gotta be sure of yourself. And, for incontrovertible evidence, we offer the response of yesterday's capacity audiences. How they took it!

Following the opening "You're Gonna Lose Your Gal," the lads went into "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf," just as a matter of course. Then out pops wee Jackie Heller, who made his way to the mike, and queried "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?"

And then the medley of requests, so arranged and presented as to give about all the lads a chance for their several specialties. The opener was "It's the Talk of the Town," sung by Manny Prager, followed by "Puddin'head Jones," sung by Billy Wilgus; then the Old Maestro himself, doing the best ever done by "Lazy Bones," singing it so it really meant something. And to close, Frank Prince did "The Last Round Up," and sang it so well that even Mr. Bernie was unable to start the show again until "Everything I Have Is Yours" was rendered as an encore.

Touch of Farce.

"Let Us Sing As the Birdies Sing" was the band's unmitigated excursion into sheer farce, with Purvis Pullen running in some excellent imitations of birds. Billie Severn tapped his way to enthusiastic approval to the tune of "Sweet Sue," with which, and the Bernie signature, the bill came to a close.

Generous to an extreme, Bernie's lads played and played, each added number further ensconsing them in the hearts of Washingtonians. A program of magnificent proportions, yet at the same time much too short to approach audience satiation.

With this headlining act the rest of the week's roster of attractions—and they are many and highly to be commended—loses its warranted attraction and shrinks almost into obscurity.

"The House on 56th Street" presents Kay Francis as a show girl of 1905 who marries into the 400. She becomes involved in the death of a former inamorata (John Halliday), and is sentenced to 20 years in prison. During the passage of time, the husband (Gene Raymond) is killed in the war. On release from prison, Kay ties up with Ricardo Cortez and becomes New York's famed first woman blackjack dealer. Kay's daughter (Margaret Lindsay), ultimately shoots Ricardo, and the gangster boss (William "Stage" Boyd) contrives to make it appear an erasure, and the story closes with Kay and Boyd starting out on a new venture in Kay's old home, the house on 56th street.

It is a praiseworthy offering that permits a maximum of emoting on Miss Francis' part, with equally "fat" roles for the other principlas, in locales of contrasting character.

The other acts of the stage show, charmingly introduced by Audrey Sieber, and played before the new silver curtain and drapes, were the DeLong Sisters, a trio of gymnasts whose offering is of interest principally because of the gender of the performers, and Eddie White, whose songs and stories went over in a big way.

In addition to the martial overture by the boys in the pit, led by C. Frederick Clark, the screen attractions included a tabloid operetta, "Kissing Time," with George Frohman and Don Zelaya; the Merrie Melody, "Sittin' on a Backyard Fence," and a release of the Universal News.

Columbia

"THE CHIEF." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Arthur Caesar and Robert E. Hopkins, starring Ed Wynn, with Dorothy Mackaill, "Chic" Sale, William Boyd, Effie Ellsler and C. Henry Gordon. Directed by Charles F. Reisner. Reviewed Friday morning by W. A. Whitney.

"The Chief," erstwhile yclept the "Perfect Fool," also alias Ed Wynn, returns to the local screen after an absence of some couple of years, this time in an opera that is different and bears the name of the star's radio character.

'Tis a Wynn show from start to finish—fast, furious, funny, and, what is even more important, wholesome. The story does not matter much, and, with Ed Wynn clowning throughout the footage, little else is necessary. Yet what dramatic fabric there is is made of Henry Summers' appointment as honorary fire chief and his subsequent excursion into politics, where he finds himself the buffer between opposing factions.

How he wins the election, gets the girl, rescues his mother from kidnapers and squelches the crooked politicians is left to you to find out. He does these things, and many more, but in the doing there is concocted a farce of lightning speed and excruciating hilarity.

As already stater, it is Ed Wynn's picture and his work needs no further encomium here. Suffice it to say, that it is one of his funniest vehicles. Adding not a little comedy of his own inimitable kind, Charles ("Chic") Sale has a prominent part. The girl interest is contributed by Dorothy Mackaill, who here in a setting of the "good old days"—the horse and buggy era—is more charming than ever before she has been.

The opposing political factions are led by William ("Stage") Boyd and C. Henry Gordon, both of whom are sufficiently hard and terrifying to make Mr. Wynn's comedy all the more striking. George Givot and Nat Pendleton, good men both, complete the cast.

Mr. Wynn is not the only actor this week returning to the screen. Tom Patricola comes back in "The Good Bad Man," with Charles Judels, in a Mexican musical short that has plenty of songs but not enough of Tom's dancing. "Wild Elephinks" offers Popeye, the Sailor, in another cartoon adventure. Most interesting of the Paramount Sound News' shots is the chariot race, which featured the Agua Caliente opening.

Metropolitan

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND." Paramount picturization of the Lewis Carroll classics, "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass," adapted to the screen by Herman J. Mankiewicz and William Cameron Menzies, featuring Charlotte Henry, with a supporting cast consisting of a majority of all the stars in Hollywood. Directed by Norman McLeod.

Fulfilling to the highest expectations of its sponsors its function as an especially appealing Yuletide spectacle of quaint charm and picturesque photographic splendor, Paramount's camera and microphone version of Lewis Carroll's classic, "Alice in Wonderland," continues to enthrall juvenile holiday crowds as the principal feature of the Christmas bill at Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater.

So faithful to the original drawings of Sir John Tenniel are the costumes and make-ups of the bizarre characters involved in the seven episodes from "Alice," and the equal number from "Through the Looking Glass," assembled in this film to make its story, that it seems to have been almost a futile gesture to cast so many screen notables in the stellar roles as this picture is able to boast. A majority of them are totally unidentifiable. The excellence of their work, however, is reflected in the effectiveness with which the pivotal scenes have been visualized.

Superlative Photography.

The most impressive merit of this Paramount picturization of an enduring and a beloved work rests, as has been emphasized here numerously before, in the inspired quality of the photographic effects that make the miraculous adventures of Alice among strange people seem surprisingly real.

Offsetting this outstanding virtue, however, is the absence of much of the most pungent of the Carroll text and a subordination of the story's humor, satire and sound philosophy to its exclusively pictorial aspects. This is an impairment of the major superiority of the written narrative probably in the adult mind only. The children see in "Alice" only a startlingly lovely and realistic coming to life of incidents and people with whom they have long been perhaps only vaguely acquainted.

Extraordinary Cast.

The season of the year and the temper of the public being what they are, "Alice in Wonderland," with Charlotte Henry, Gary Cooper, Edna May Oliver, Alec B. Francis, Jack Oakie, W. C. Fields, Louise Fazenda, Ford Sterling, Ned Sparks and hosts more cast in the cherished roles of greatest prominence, must be written down as one of the film plays to be seen, even if not the ideal embodiment of the Carroll story.

It is briefly but effectively augmented by short-reel subjects.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For)

LOYALTY of all Federal employes is praised by Postmaster General James A. Farley in a letter to the National Legislative Council of Federal Emloyes Organizations, through its chairman, John J. Barrett.

BAKER.

"From the past performances of postal and all Federal employes," Mr. Farley wrote, "I know I can always depend upon them for loyalty and support of our Government at all times, and it is needless for me to say that this spirit is most sincerely appreciated by both our President and myself.

The National Legislative Council is composed of a group of five postal organizations and the National Federation of Federal Employes, representing a total of more than 150,000 organized Federal workers.

Mr. Farley further said that since taking office he has found many evidences of extreme loyalty to duty in every branch of the Postal service.

"It is my earnest hope that conditions will so improve throughout our country that in the not distant future, happiness and contentment will again reign in every American home," he declared.

DEVELOPMENT of a permanent Federal staff, Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, yesterday told the American Association for Labor Legislation, should be an ultimate objective. He urges that admission to this permanent staff be through competitive test and safeguarded from political manipulation.

"The inertia and indifference of the great mass of otherwise intelligent persons in regard to the public service must be overcome," Mr. Steward declared. "Their active interest must be stimulated. Whatever part the Government may have in National economic recovery will be almost wholly dependent on the way the plans are carried out by the men and women having to do with the Administration."

The address was delivered at the session in Philadelphia.

Hopkins Enters War on Trade In "Influence"

Reports Lobbying Cases and Says Lawyers Aren't Wanted.

Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, yesterday joined the war on those who seek to trade alleged influence with the Government for cash.

His warning was directed against lawyers who represent concerns submitting bids on food products to the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation.

Hopkins said an investigation is being made to learn to what extent certain lawyers have participated in dealing with the corporation.

A complaint had been made that two attorneys had offered their services to firms which had planned to offer bids for surplus foods, Hopkins said.

"We have no need for lawyers around here," he said. "I can not understand why any business man would pay a lawyer to help with a bid. Lawyers aren't needed around this office for any purpose whatsoever."

In issuing his warning, Hopkins adds his voice to those of Secretary Ickes, Acting Secretary Morgenthau and John H. Fahey, president of the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

The Department of Justice and the Postoffice Department are now investigating alleged selling of influence. Reports of such activity were turned in by both Fahey and Ickes. Morgenthau recently warned against persons with alleged "influence" in connection with income tax cases.

Auto License Deadline Put Off to Jan. 6

Word Comes as Record Crowd Descends on Traffic Office.

Old Tags, However, Are Banned in States Nearby.

Overflowing the building and forming a line more than a block long, a record crowd descended on the Traffic Building yesterday in a last-minute effort to get 1934 auto tags, only to learn that the time had been extended.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer estimated that 9,000 tags had been given out when the office closed at 9:30 p. m. The figure is 400 in excess of last year's one-day record.

Late yesterday afternoon the District Commissioners decided to extend the "dead tag" line from midnight December 31 to midnight January 6. No official order from the Commissioners was given out, but they instructed police not to make any arrests for use of 1933 tags until January 7. It was announced also that District 1933 tags would not be permitted in neighboring States.

The crowd waited in the cold patiently. When word leaked out that the deadline had been extended, some left.

The office, at Pennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place, will be closed today to allow overworked employes a holiday with other Government workers.

It was estimated more than 11,000 tags remain uncalled for.

Virginia Sales Larger.

J. V. Turner, of Falls Church, handling Virginia tags for Arlington County, reports that in the past few days he has sold more than 100 tags to Arlington County residents who have been operating on District of Columbia tags.

Vigilance in the District in checking addresses and the fact that tag forms were not forwarded when automobile owners had moved were given as the reason.

Virginia tags will go on sale March 15 with April 15 as the dead line.

Henry O. Hart Check Charge Is Dismissed

A charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, placed against Henry O. Hart following a dispute over a $100 check, was dropped by the District grand jury yesterday.

Hart formerly confidential accountant for G. Bryan Pitts, one time head of the F. H. Smith Co., gave the check to a motor company which complained that it had been dishonored.

Action Allays Shake-Up Fear

Promotion From Ranks Makes Lyddane Tax Collector's Deputy.

The first regular executive appointment by the District Commissioners came with the promotion of a man in the ranks yesterday, thus allaying the fear of a general shake-up in departmental executives by replacement with outsiders.

Stephen B. Lyddane, cashier in the tax collector's office, who has been in District service for 25 years, was appointed deputy tax collector to fill a vacancy caused by the death of William D. Clark, jr.

Other promotions also were approved. Frederick W. Baumann was named cashier; Wade H. Pembroke, assistant cashier; Charles M. Sabins, bailiff, and John D. Padgett, clerk and messenger.

The Commissioners named Charles B. McCrew, chief inspector of construction in the municipal architect's office, as acting municipal architect, pending appointment of a municipal architect.

The designation was made necessary by the departure yesterday of Harold W. Baker, who resigned as director of construction to become city manager of Rochester, N. Y.

Man Admits "Murder" But Victim Still Lives

Victor Paul Gauthey, who said he was a World War veteran, walked into police headquarters here yesterday to surrender for the murder of a woman in Nashville, Tenn. Police found that the woman was still alive and sent Gauthey to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation.

Gauthey escaped from a Nashville hospital several days ago, police said they learned. The woman could not give any reason why the man should claim he killed her.

Bicyclist, 15, Hurt, When Struck by Auto

A 15-year old bicyclist was injured when struck by an automobile at Trinidad avenue and Neal street northeast. The injured youth, Roland Curtin, 640 Tenth street northeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital. His injuries were said to be a possible fractured skull and leg lacerations.

The automobile which struck the lad was driven by Olin Dyer, of Silver Spring, Md., police said. No charges were placed against Dyer.

D. C. Raiders Seize Whisky In Drug Store

Tax Not Paid on $1 a Pint Rum, Is First Post-Repeal Charge.

Raiding a drug store here on liquor charges for the first time since repeal, police and an Internal Revenue agent yesterday seized a quantity of whisky and wine and arrested a druggist on a charge of selling without prescription.

They assert the tax on the liquor had not been paid.

The raid was made on a store operated at 1232 Fifth street northeast by the Market Drug Co., Inc. Elliott Fineman, 25, was arrested and accused of illegal sale and possession. He was later released after posting bond of $500 on each of two charges.

Police confiscated 68 pints of whisky and 12 quarts of wine. It had not been bottled under Government supervision, they said. The store is licensed to sell bonded liquor on a physician's prescription. A quantity of bonded whisky was found, kept separate from the liquor seized. It was not confiscated.

Police said they had received many complaints of illegal sale of liquor at the store. The price of the whisky when sold without a prescription was $1 a pint, they alleged. The wine, California sherry, was sold for $1.50 per quart, police added.

The raid was made by R. E. Blick, George C. Deyoe, James Royal and O. J. See. Internal Revenue Agent H. Larry Doyle accompanied the raiders. A subpostoffice was operated in the store.

Dr. Abraham Simon will address the Washington Hebrew Congregation this morning at 10:30 on "A Happy Old Age." He spoke last night on "Year In and Year Out."

Playground Near Finish, 30-Year Job

Happy Hollow Completion to Follow 3 Decades of Endeavor.

A playground 30 years in the making will be completed in Washington by spring, Miss Sibyl Baker, director of the District playground department, revealed yesterday.

The playground is at Eighteenth street and Kalorama road northwest and is known as Happy Hollow.

"It is a sad commentary on our Nation's Capital to think that we have waited this long for a really completed playground," Miss Baker said. "And if it were not for the Civil Works Administration we would not have it now. In normal times, there would have been numerous committee hearings and endless red tape."

A bright new recreation house has just been completed at the Happy Hollow Playground, and work has now begun on a wading pool. This is the first of nine new wading pools to be built at various playgrounds by the CWA.

The others are at Bloomingdale, near the McMillan Reservoir; the Raymond School, Tenth street and Spring road northwest; Hamilton School, Hamilton street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northwest; the Lincoln, Sixth and L streets southeast; Takoma Park, Fourth and Whittier streets northwest; Rose Park, on the edge of the new Potomac Park Creek Parkway on O street in Georgetown; New York Avenue Playground at First street and New York avenue northwest; Twin Oaks, at Fourteenth and Taylor streets northwest.

The Lincoln, Bloomingdale and Twin Oaks playgrounds will receive new recreation houses similar to the one at Happy Hollow. Four new tennis courts and four horseshoe pitching courts will be built at Bloomindale. They will be properly illuminated for playing at night.

Gas Dealers Tentatively Agree On Standard Prices for District

A standard retail price for gasoline in this area has been tentatively set and the new prices will probably go into effect early next week, Nathan R. Margold, solicitor of the Interior Department and member of the Petroleum Administration Board, said last night.

The price proposed is 17 cents per gallon for branded gasoline sold by a major company. Unbranded gas retailed by a major company would cost 16 cents per gallon, while unbranded gas sold by independents would be 15½ cents, according to the agreement.

Companies in this area have informally agreed to these prices, Mr. Margold said. Officials of the companies operating here said formal approval might be given today.

Negotiations resulting in the tentative agreement were started by the Petroleum Administration Board, which called the oil men together after one of the major companies complained it could not continue to comply with the oil code at present prices, Margold said.

Agreement has not been reached on several other matters of dispute between the companies. One is the way in which independent dealers will be forced to maintain the agreed prices. They buy gas wholesale from the major companies and sell it under brand name, but their prices can not be fixed by the company. The tentative agreement will stop the price movements which have been prevalent here, it is hoped.

U. S. to Issue Ford Subpena In Fraud Case

The District grand jury yesterday indicted David M. Roll, 47, of the Shoreham Hotel, on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses, and forgery and uttering.

Following announcement of the indictment, Government prosecutors made plans to subpena Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, to insure his presence here when Roll is brought to trial.

The charge against Roll is that he exhibited a spurious contract, bearing Henry Ford's name, which authorized Roll to act as agent of Ford in negotiating for the leasing of Muscle Shoals. The contract was for $88,000,000 and Roll was to have been paid $250,000 for his services.

Former United States Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, was named as one of those from whom Roll obtained money. The Oklahoman gave $7,050, according to the indictment, although he is said to have lost approximately $75,000.

Former State Senator John L. Hatfield, of West Virginia, gave Roll $75, the indictment alleges. Prosecution witnesses said they gave Roll various sums of money for an interest in the Ford contract, which has been denounced by the latter as not genuine.

Investigators, in searching Roll's apartment at the Shoreham, discovered a letter purporting to be signed by the late Ambassador Dwight Morrow. This has been pronounced a forgery. Orders from the White House brought about the investigation by the Department of Justice which led to Roll's arrest.

Step in Dark Kills Youth

Plunges Three Stories to Instant Death in Open Elevator Shaft.

A messenger boy plunged three flights to instant death last night when he stepped into an open elevator shaft on the darkened third floor of a book bindery at 1005 E street northwest.

He was Fred Davis, 18, of 939 M street northwest. An employe of the Lightning Messenger Service, 908 L street northwest, he was sent to Georgetown University Medical School yesterday to run an errand.

At the school Davis and a fellow messenger, Clyde Wilson, 19, were given several bundles of books to be bound at the A. Lichtl Bookbinding Co., 1005 E street.

Arriving, the boys were directed to the third floor. Davis led the way, and groping through the dark, stepped into the open shaft.

Grand Jury Voids Blackmail Charge

Refuses to File Indictment in Williamson Case.

Williamson was arrested after detectives overheard a conversation between him and Elmer W. Holland, jr., patent attorney, in which the former allegedly sought $125 from Holland.

The attorney's son was recently acquitted of fatally shooting Lelia Morrison, in an I street hotel, last summer, while she was with Williamson. A shot accidentally discharged from a pistol the younger Williamson was carrying penetrated the door to Miss Morrison's room and struck her.

Car Window Smashers Given Terms in Jail

Two men, whom police charged with breaking windows of five parked automobiles during a Thanksgiving morning joyride, pleaded guilty to five cases of destroying private property in Police Court yesterday and were each sentenced to 60 days in jail by Judge Schuldt.

The men, who had pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial, are Samuel H. Carroll, 27, of 1537 Seventeenth street northwest, and Edward McNulty, 33, of 1402 Rhode Island avenue.

Gayest Revel Here in Years To Greet '34

Lively Entertainment Is Prepared as Optimism Rules Night Clubs.

The approaching legalization of liquor sales in the District, the improved economic situation and the New Deal's addition to Washington's official population, have combined to presage a happier New Year's Eve this year than the Capital has seen for some time.

Restaurant, night club and hotel proprietors all reported optimistically yesterday on the rate at which reservations were being made.

"People are in more of a celebrating mood this year than they have been since the depression began," said one manager.

Elaborate floor shows are scheduled in most of the resorts, some of which are only recent additions to Washington's night life. Prices ranged from $3 to $6.50 a person for entertainment and food. Some hotels and night clubs included both dinner and an early New Year's morning breakfast under the blanket charge. Few contemplated turning out the lights before 4 a. m., while others were frankly ready to stay open until the last reveller decided to leave.

Shoreham Main Room Sold Out.

At the Willard, in addition to several private parties in the various dining rooms, there will be a hotel celebration in the grand ballroom on the tenth floor. The management reported that reservations for the affair in the grand ballroom are being made at a considerably faster rate than a year ago.

The main dining room of the Shoreham was already sold out yesterday afternoon. The management is planning an elaborate eight-act floor show, Bobby Sanford's "Frivolities of 1934," with a cast of 40. Maxim Lowe's orchestra will provide music.

The Hotel Hamilton also expects more merrymakers this year. Privvate parties will be held throughout the hotel, while the management has provided its own celebration with plans for dinner, dancing to Meyer Goldman's orchestra and breakfast at 4 a. m.

2 Floor Shows at Wardman Park.

At the Wardman Park, similar optimism was expressed. There will be two floor shows with breakfast at 3. Music will be furnished by Ted Brewer's band.

The Kennedy Warren dining room, which has hitherto refrained from New Year's Eve frivolities, stepped into the field this year with announcement of dinner, a floor show and "cotillion and carnival features." Bernie Schultz's orchestra will play.

The Broadmoor will hold a dinner dance, with the closing hour to be determined by the guests. There will be special entertainment and music by Gwin Miller and his band.

"Harlem" Plans Gay Evening.

Among the night clubs the Heigh-Ho, rendezvous of the embassy and society groups, made plans for "about the latest celebration in town." There will be entertainment and music by Pete Macias.

The Restaurant Madrillon will offer supper, two floor shows and dancing to Leon Brusiloff's music. The management reported reservations are going faster than a year ago.

The Cotton Club, Washington's substitute for Harlem, will run six floor shows during the evening and early morning. Duke Eglin's band will play.

The Hangar Club will provide two floor shows of four acts each, with dinner, breakfast and dancing. The management expects to remain open "until when."

Navy Promotion Board Will Convene on Jan. 8

A selection board to recommend 12 officers of the Navy Medical Corps for promotion to the rank of captain will convene at the Navy Department on January 8.

Rear Admiral Middleton S. Elliott will head the board. Other members will be Capts. Eugene J. Grow, Isaac S. K. Reeves, Richard A. Warner, Frank E. Sellers, Edgar L. Woods and Dallas G. Sutton.

Scientists Tell of Tiny Birds Waging Warfare in Jungle

Smithsonian Men Issue Booklet on Studies in Haiti.

Birds of the Haitian jungles, including one no larger than a woman's thumb which attacks others many times its size, were described yesterday by Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. Wetmore has just issued a list of birds he and Frederick C. Lincoln, of the United States Biological Survey, encountered in the forests of the La Hotte Mountains. Their explorations were the first ever conducted in the region from an ornithological standpoint.

The Hispaniolan vervain hummingbird, second smallest feathered creature on earth, battles birds which appear huge in comparison, the scientists reported.

Among other strange creatures observed were "apartment house" woodpeckers and the mysterious Hispaniolan solitaire, which superstitious natives believe to be invisible.

"On one occasion," said Dr. Wetmore, describing the woodpeckers, "we were astonished to find a dozen pairs going in and out of nests in a single tree trunk. There was no question that the woodpeckers were colonizing, as the trunk was a veritable apartment house, with birds clambering over its surface and flying back and forth to the near-by woodland."

Natives believe that the song of the solitaire, a small gray bird, pours from some departed spirit because, they claim, the singer never has been seen. This bird is a skilled musician, said Dr. Wetmore. Paying tribute to its music, he said:

"The constant repetition of this marvelous song from the hidden avian choir constitutes one of our most vivid memories in connection with the rain-drenched forests of this difficult mountain peak."

Another interesting specimen studied is the palm-chat, which builds large stick nests in the tops of palm trees. The bird is small, but can carry 30-inch twigs to build its nest.

Cooper Bank Conference With Treasury Held Up

A second conference between Treasury Department officials, Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the restricted United States Savings Bank, and representatives of the bank's stockholders and depositors, relative to reopening this institution, has been postponed until Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

This will enable Col. Cooper to confer with other stockholders regarding his second plan to reopen the bank. Col. Cooper's suit compelling the Treasury Department to open the bank under his original plan was dismissed in District Supreme Court.

Commissioners To Ask School Site Purchase

$150,000 to Be Sought for Junior High Location.

The District Commissioners will ask Congress to include an appropriation of $150,000 to purchase a site for the Jefferson Junior High School in Southwest Washington, Melvin C. Hazen, chairman, announced yesterday.

Hazen's announcement followed a visit by George E. Sullivan, attorney for property owners who have been withholding a site already partially acquired by the District. Sullivan suggested the Commissioners obtain land elsewhere, as his clients' property had increased in value.

"The value of the dollar has depreciated considerably since the figure of $185,000 was arrived at by the former board," he said. "In fact, the value of the dollar is still on the decline, and no one can predict where it will end."

The previous Commissioners and Sullivan have been haggling over price of land between Seventh and Eighth and H and I streets southwest for several years. Two condemnation jury awards have been rejected, and the issue has lain dormant for almost a year.

The Commissioners announced also that plans for Wilson High School will be completed in January, following a visit from James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Harry N. Stull, a federation delegate.

The federation delegates urged the Commissioners to award the Anacostia Junior High School contract, despite the fact that the Budget Bureau has eliminated an item for completion of the school from the 1935 District budget. The District heads, however, indicated they would not take action without assurance that Congress would provide money to finish the project.

The District has an appropriation of $225,000 to start construction of the school and an authorization to enter a contract for $450,000. Last year, however, Congress refused to approve funds to complete the project.

Capper Backs Age Pensions For District

Senator to Ask "Model" Law in New Session of Congress.

Civilization Fails When Old Go to Poorhouse, Asserts Kansan.

Enactment during the coming session of Congress of a model old-age pension law for the District was advocated yesterday by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, who is a member and formerly was chairman of the Senate District Committee.

"It has always seemed to me that civilization has fallen down badly if it can devise no better way to protect the worker in his old age than by sending him to a poor house," the Senator said.

"By an old-age security law I mean a statute which would permit the payment of money at regular intervals to old residents of the District who otherwise would be forced to go to the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains.

Asks Adequate School Cash.

"I do not intend by this remark to convey the impression that Blue Plains is the cheerless place that we commonly know as a poorhouse. In my opinion, it is one of the best of such institutions. But old-age securities which allow the individual to maintain himself decently at home in his old age furnish an infinitely better solution to this problem."

A budget which "will make sufficient provision for our public schools and for all other necessary District services," was urged by the Senator.

Praises Allen and Hazen.

He praised the appointment of Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen as District Commissioners.

"I think these choices are very happy ones," he said. "I know both gentlemen personally and have the very highest regard for them. Mr. Hazen, as a veteran official of the District government, has rendered many years of important and valuable service.

"Mr. Allen, although a newcomer to public office, has given convincing evidence of his ability, especially in the direction of civil works activities. I believe these appointments will be most beneficial to the people of the District."

Dunlap Trims Wilson, 2 and 1, for Pinehurst Mid-Winter Title

National Star Given Hard Battle

Former G. U. Ace Fails on Five Short Putts, One Six Inches.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 29 (AP).—Giving a strong exhibition of trap play, George T. Dunlap, jr., National amateur champion, today defeated Dick Wilson, of Southern Pines, 2 and 1, to win the annual Pinehurst midwinter golf title for the eighth time in the last nine years.

The slender wearer of the National crown was in the traps four times on as many holes at the start of the 18-hole round, but he recovered brilliantly and ended the first nine all square with Wilson, who has challenged his superiority six times in the last ten years, only to be beaten five out of the six.

Misses 5 Short Putts.

Wilson, a star linksman for Georgetown University in his college days, gave the champion a battle all the way, but failure of his putts to drop consistently robbed him of any chances he might have had to dethrone Dunlap. He missed five short putts, one of them only 6 inches.

After rounding the turn all square, Dunlap went 2-up by winning the eleventh and fourteenth, but saw his advantage cut to 1-up when he 3-putted the fifteenth.

Gets a Birdie Four.

On the sixteenth, he pulled his drive into the woods, but made a brilliant recovery with his spoon, rolled his third to within 6 feet of the cup, and dropped the putt for a birdie 4.

Wilson was alongside the green in 2, but missed a 2-foot putt, and lost the hole by requiring a par 5. The match was closed out on the seventeenth, which was divided in par 3's.

Dunlap played with a set of steel-shafted clubs belonging to Tommy Armour. Previously he had been using hickory-shafted weapons. At the end of the match he said Armour's clubs "felt better," but added he did not yet have perfect confidence in their feel.

Virginia Hollinger, Miss Hirsh Victors

Will Meet for National Girls' Net Crown.

Brookline, Mass., Dec. 29 (AP).—Millicent Hirsh, of New York City, second seeded player, and Virginia Hollinger, of Dayton, Ohio, an outsider, today qualified to meet for the National Girls' Indoor Tennis championship by winning their semifinal matches.

Miss Hollinger, who yesterday eliminated Helen Grawn, the defending champion, today defeated Louise Harding, of Brookline, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3. Miss Hirsh, starting slowly, dropped the first set to Sylvia Hatch, of Winchester, but came back to win the match, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5.

The matches were played in bitterly cold temperatures, with some of the sub zero weather from outside the covered courts creeping into the building to send the mercury below the freezing point. Despite the cold, the semifinals were marked by excellent tennis, and Miss Hatch even played in shorts.

Metz and Ciuci Figure In Pro-Amateur Tie

Santa Monica, Calif., Dec. 29 (AP).—Dick Metz, young assistant to Craig Wood at Deal, N. J., paired with Jack Dunphy, Los Angeles public links golfer, and Henry Ciuci, of Flushing, Long Island, teamed with A. K. Barbee, also of Los Angeles, to score best balls of 64 and top the field in today's first qualifying round of the Santa Monica $2,000 pro-amateur tournament.

Lozada Stops Burns.

Laredo, Tex., Dec. 29 (AP).—Cecil Lozada, 135, Mexico, D. F., knocked out Bobby Burns, 137, of Fort Worth, in the second round of their scheduled 10-round fight here tonight. Raul Gomez, 126, of Monterey, knocked out Kid Carmona, 120, of Nuevo Laredo, in the seventh round of another bout booked to go 10 rounds.

Impellittiere Battered by Neusel

German Gives Away 50 Pounds, Wins Handily; Barry in Draw.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Walter Neusel, 195½ pounds of perpetual motion from Germany, gained a front row seat among the top flight heavyweights tonight when he hammered out a 10-round decision over Ray Impellittiere in Madison Square Garden.

Impellittiere, a 2-1 favorite in the betting because of his tremendous size—he stands 6 feet 7½ inches and weighs 246—never had a chance after the first round, and left the battle pit licked to a frazzle and with the boos of the some 5,000 customers ringing in his ears.

Neusel, 50 pounds lighter and inches shorter than Impellittiere, won the last nine rounds, and the decision of the judges was unanimous.

Neusel Goes to Work.

After dropping the opening heat, which saw him attempt to match the giant New Yorker from long range, Neusel went to work in earnest, and for the remainder of the fight buzzed around the Imp like a pursuit plane about a dirigible. And as he buzzed he banged. With such a magnificent target at which to shoot, Neusel couldn't miss.

He raked Impellittiere up and down with all the shots in the catalogue, and in the ninth round had the big fellow bleeding from nose and mouth and leaning at a perilous angle. Had the German not been so weary from punching he might have laid his man among the gladiolas.

Abe Feldman, New York, 181½, fought a tame eight-round draw with Donald (Reds) Barry, Washington, D. C., 200, in a semifinal. Barry's nose bled two-thirds of the way to the finish, the only exciting incident of the fray. There were no knockdowns.

Only 4,000 saw the fight.

Caras, Billiard Star, Will Play Haga Here

James Caras, of Wilmington, Del., who finished in the money in this year's world's championship pocket billiard matches at Chicago, will face Alfred Haga, District pocket billiard champion of 1932, in an exhibition match at the Arcadia Billiard Parlor next Thursday.

The event is scheduled to start at 9 p. m.

Glen Cunningham Is Awarded 1933 Sullivan Memorial Medal

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP).—Glen Cunningham, fleet middle-distance runner of the University of Kansas, tonight was adjudged the winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Medal for 1933.

Cunningham won out by the margin of a single vote over Bill Bonthron, Princeton track ace, in the closest race in the history of the award, given annually to the amateur athlete who by his example and influence has done most during the year to advance the cause of sportsmanship.

Six hundred outstanding leaders in the world of sport, representing all sections of the country, comprised the tribunal for the award and gave Cunningham a total of 611 votes against 610 for Bonthron, who forced Jack Lovelock, of New Zealand, to a new 1-mile record in a sensational race at Princeton last summer.

Cunningham, one of the greatest runners developed in this country in recent times, is the National A. A. U. 800 and 1,500 meter champion and National collegiate A. A. mile champion and record holder. Bonthron set up a new American record for the mile, 4 minutes 8 7-10 seconds, on July 15, when he finished a close second to Lovelock, who was clocked in 4:07.6.

In third place, far behind the leaders, was Alfred Jochim, of New York, famous gymnast. He received 294 votes against 291 for Pat McDonald, veteran weight thrower, also of New York.

Trailing these were Clarence De Mar, famous marathoner, 277; Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, National sprint champion, 206; Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., free style swimming ace, 191; Glen Hardin, Louisiana State hurdler, 127; Keith Brown, Yale pole vaulter, 69, and Johnny Morriss, Southwestern Louisiana A. C., hurdler, also 69.

Cunningham is the second Kansas athlete in as many years to receive the award. Jim Bausch, former University of Kansas football player and winner of the Olympic decathlon title at Los Angeles, captured the prize in 1932.

Tilden, Richards Net Pro Winners

Beat Hunter and Barnes in Indoor Tourney.

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Vincent Richards, defending champion, turned back one of the chief threats to his title hopes in the national professional indoor tennis championship tonight by defeating Bruce Barnes, of Austin, Tex., 8—6, 6—4, 8—6, after an hour and a half of stirring play.

With this victory, Richards kept a level footing with his most formidable rival, "Big Bill" Tilden, who earlier in the day vanquished Francis T. Hunter, 6—0, 6—3, 6—2.

Toward the end of the first contest, which was on the court one hour, the first-seeded Tilden was called upon to quell an uprising on the part of Hunter, who with his forehand searching out the narrowest openings, fought off match-point at 0-5.

In the doubles championship, Emmett Pare, Chicago, and Charles Wood, New York, won from Teddy Rericha, New York, and George Jennings, Chicago, 6—4, 6—2, 6—2.

Eddie Black Winner In Ping Pong Tourney

Maryland Lists 1934 Grid Games

Indiana, Florida, Navy on Old Line Schedule.

University of Maryland's 1934 football schedule, which includes games with Indiana, Florida, Navy and its traditional rival, Johns Hopkins, has been approved and released by the board of athletics. Most of the games, including the two intersectional games, were known to be on the schedule at least a month ago.

Four opponents are members of the Southern Conference and have been fixtures on the Terps' program for the last decade. The complete schedule:

September 29, St. John's.
October 6, Washington and Lee, away; 13, Navy, away; 20, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, at Norfolk; 27, Florida, at Baltimore.
November 3, Virginia; 10, Virginia Military Institute; 17, Indiana, away; 29, Johns Hopkins, at Baltimore.

Swimmers Set 5 New Marks At Miami

Leonard Spence Leading in First Two Days With Three Records.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—Five national swimming records were swept into the discard today for a total of nine, and a mark established in a previously unrecorded distance, in the first two days of the Olympic stars meet in the Miami Biltmore Pools.

Leonard Spence, New York Athletic Club breast stroke ace, was in the lead with three national records for the cumulative score, with Anne Govednik, of Chisholm, Minn., Alice Bridges of Whittinsville, Mass., and Lenore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., trailing him with two each.

Miss Govednik and Miss Bridges garnered one each today to add to their singles of yesterday. Ralph Flanagan of the Biltmore Home team, captured the only other record broken in today's competition.

Equals Own Mark.

Miss Kight, had to content herself today with the equaling of her own record of 3:88 2-5 for the 300 yard free style short course. She smashed two national marks yesterday.

Spence's victories came over the 500 motor short course route, cracking the previous mark of eight minutes flat by 12 4-5 seconds. He was clocked at the 500-yard line in his meter swim for a time of 7:04 flat.

The previous time for the distance was 7:18 3/5. Both records were established by Nelson Millard at New Haven in 1930. Spence yesterday swam the 500 meter long course in 8:01 1/5 to establish a time for a previously unrecorded distance.

Rawls Record Broken.

Miss Govednik was timed at 2:58 1/5 seconds to better the previous 200 yard breast stroke mark by 9 1/5 seconds. The former time was set in 1932 by Katherine Rawls, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., at Newburg, N. Y.

The Minnesota girl yesterday covered the 100-yard route in 1:21 flat, breaking by 4 1/5 seconds Agnes Geraghty's time at Massapequa, L. I., in 1927.

Flanagan bettered by 10 1/5 seconds Buster Crabbe's time in the 500 meter long course free style. Flanagan was clocked at 6:30 1/5. Crabbe established his record at Honolulu in 1931.

Prize Ring Safer, Cries "Woe Is Me" Baer, Much Sued

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP).—Maxwell Adelbert Baer, who wanders with equal facility from prize ring to stage to law court, is back consulting his lawyers again, and he says he's mad enough to fight.

A summons to answer within 20 days in State Supreme Court the complaint of Bee Starr, circus aerialist, in a $150,000 breach of promise suit, was handed Baer early today as he completed his chores in one of Broadway's newest and gaudiest night clubs.

The aerialist charges that Baer promised to marry her and broke his promise. She said the humiliation, distress and chagrin she suffered caused her to become ill. The promise was made on November 30, she said.

The summons did several things to the curly-headed husky from California who knocked out Max Schmeling in one of the big tussles of the past summer and who is scheduled to fight Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship next June.

First, it sent him to the office of the sheriff of New York County asking if something couldn't be done to stop people from taking legal advantage of a little fellow. He was told there was no law against suing people.

It wound up his career as a night club entertainer with a howl of "never again."

It brought him the services of a bodyguard, and aroused in him a deep and fervent desire to return to the comparative safety of the prize ring.

Finally it brought forth the statement that as far as Miss Starr, who is in vaudeville here, is concerned, he "not only never met the lady, but can't even remember ever having seen her."

What with disputes among contending managers, a trip through the divorce courts, and previous breach of promise entanglements, Baer for a couple of years has sparred with the law almost as frequently as he has with gloved opposition. But this time, he insists, they've got him wrong.

"She says I've caused her extreme anguish and distress and have brought upon her the contempt of her friends," he says. "Why I never did that to anyone but Schmeling. I don't even know her.

"I'm all through with night clubs. It's so tough now they won't even let me read my own mail any more. They hired me a bodyguard, and it's very humiliating."

G. W. and Md. Face Tests Tonight

Colonials, Minus Stein, Oppose City College in New York.

MARYLAND'S game with Indiana at College Park, and George Washington's tilt with City College of New York, share local basket ball fans' interest tonight, though the Colonials will play in Gotham.

George Washington will be without the services of Sammy Stein, star guard, who sprained his ankle in the Furman game Thursday night. Bill Parrish, husky football player who has rendered valuable services in relief roles, will replace Stein.

Rest Unchanged.

The remainder of the line-up will be unchanged with Jimmy Howell Jimmy Smith, forwards; Bill Noonan, center, and Dallas Shirley, guard. City College will present a veteran line-up, boasting six straight wins and said to be stronger than last year's five which won the eastern championship. Eleven Colonials, headed by Coach Ted O'Leary and Roland Logan, will make the trip.

Maryland faces the team regarded as the dark horse of the Big Ten Conference this season. The Terps successfully repulsed Michigan two weeks ago, but Michigan does not rate with Indiana this season, according to reports from the Midwest.

Hoosiers Have Edge.

The Hoosiers, who defeated Marshall College, 36-20, Thursday, are bringing two teams, supposedly on par, for the game, and will have a decided edge on their hosts in man power. Maryland has only eight players available. The starting line-up will be Bob Snyder and "Spider" Chase, forwards; Rufus Vincent, center; Bucky and Bernie Buscher, guards.

Motion That U. S. Stay Out of Olympic Tabled.

A motion offered by Arnold Beichman, editor of the Columbia Spectator, that the United States remain out of the next Olympic Games in Berlin as a protest against Germany's discrimination against Jewish athletes, precipitated a fiery verbal barrage from all members that finally led to the adjournment of the National Student Federation's meeting yesterday at American University. There were cries for and against the motion, which was tabled during the stormy proceedings.

H. C. (Curley) Byrd, vice president and director of athletics of Maryland University, addressed the delegates on "The Part Athletics Should Play in the Curriculum." He scored corrupt athletic policies in effect at "certain American universities," and urged a thorough house cleaning. Mr. Byrd also answered questions propounded by the delegates, who represented virtually all of the leading institutions of the country.

Reds Wanted Ruth, But Effort Failed

Cincinnati, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds in their quest for a new manager tried to get Babe Ruth, but all they got was a vociferous "No!" from Col. Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees, Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Reds, disclosed today.

He said an American League Club owner told him Col. Ruppert had agreed to give the Bambino his release if he could get a job as manager, and that Ruth had made known he would sign to manage a club for $35,000 a year.

The informant was authorized to approach the head of the Yankees. Besides the decision "No," he also brought back, MacPhail said, the information that Ruppert would let the Babe go to any American League Club, but would not consider permitting him to go over to the National League.

3 of 200 Coaches Favor Open Hiring of Players

Chicago, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Open payment of college football players was discussed today at the twenty-eighth convention of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, but gained only three favorable votes from 200 coaches and athletic directors.

"If we were paying players," said Fritz Crisler of Princeton University, "I'd be afraid that in a close game and with the ball on the 1-yard line the guard making $50 a month might start wondering how much the tackle was making and the results would be disastrous."

Crisler said that he believed the answer to recruiting and subsidizing of players was up to the coach.

Hunt Reaches Semifinal in Net Play

Wins Over George Ball and Will Encounter Abrams Today.

Parker Downs Madden in Another Straight-Set Victory.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 (AP).—Gilbert Hunt, Washington (D. C.) youth, achieved somewhat of an unexpected triumph today to advance to the semifinals of the National indoor junior championship at the expense of George H. Ball, seeded fourth in the tournament. Hunt defeated the El Paso, Tex., and Northwestern University star, 6—1, 6—2.

The manner in which Hunt won indicated that he may cause much trouble for Joseph L. Abrams, of New York, the No. 2 player, whom he meets in the upper semifinal tomorrow. Abrams advanced by defeating Lester Steifberg, of New York University, 6—2, 4—6.

Parker Is Winner.

Florida's 3-Month Session of Horse Racing Opens Today at Tropical Park

Fast Course Likely for Inaugural

Gold Step, Carrying 126 Pounds, Seen Choice in First Handicap.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 29 (AP).—A fast strip awaited the thundering hoofs that tomorrow will open the Florida racing season at Tropical Park, with an expected attendance of between 12,000 and 15,000 persons.

Gold Step, veteran from the stable of Mrs. Sheldon H. Fairbanks, and one of 1933's top sprinters, apparently was to go to the post as the favorite in the Inaugural Handicap.

Carrying an impost of 126, ten pounds more than Ever Gold, of the Shandon Farm, second in Secretary John A. Campbell's grading, Gold Step's record of the last summer is expected to persuade most of the track-goers to string along with him.

Seven Likely to Start.

Ten horses were nominated for the Inaugural, but only seven were regarded as probable starters tonight. J. E. Smallmen entered three but withdrew one, Golden Fate. Minton, coupled with Ever Gold as the Sandon entry, was likewise withdrawn, as was the Labrot entry, Monel.

Florida races 79 days at three tracks this season, with the two Miami ovals, tropical and Hialeah, splitting the period. The Gables plant will operate from tomorrow until January 24, resuming its season March 18 and continuing through April 1.

Hialeah Opens January 25.

The Miami Jockey Club plant, Hialeah Park, with Joseph Widener as chairman of the board, operates from January 25 through March 17. The Tampa oval, Tampa Shores, races a 35-day season beginning in February.

Probable starters in the feature race were:

†Fancy Flight (R. Moser), 106.
Frederick (A. Robertson), 113.
Crowning Glory (E. Steffen), 115.
Gold Step (E Porter), 126.
Levaal (M. Guess), 100.
Ever Gold (L. Ruder), 116.
†Feudal Lord (L. Schaefer), 109.

Parker Advances In Indoor Tennis

burgh. Parker allowed Madden only 6 points in the opening set, and, reeling off a series of aces, made short work of the eighth seeded player, to win 6—1, 6—2.

Parker, who has not yet been extended to three sets in the tourney and who has yielded no more than three games in a single set, meets Jack Behr, of the Roxbury School, seeded No. 5, in the upper semifinal tomorrow.

Behr won the right to meet Parker by trouncing Russell Ball, brother of George, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3.

Melvin Lapman Wins.

In the boys' division, Melvin Lapman, of New York, provided the feature of the day when he conquered Lyman W. Crossman, jr., the No. 1 favorite, after three sets, 8—6, 3—6, 6—2.

The doubles found Frankie Parker and Phil Osborne, the Lawrenceville top-favored pair, advancing to the semifinals by an easy victory in love sets. They will meet the Rodman-Hunt combination in their semifinal.

Westrope Out of Pay On Two Texas Horses

Houston, Tex., Dec. 29 (AP).—Jack Westrope, after boosting his total number of winners for the year to 301 yesterday, was shut out with his two mounts, and riding honors at Epsom Downs went to Wayne Wright and H. Jacobs, each of whom won two races.

Wright, second to Westrope in number of winning mounts, put together his double with Sarilla in the first and Moralist in the fourth. Jacobs scored with Quick Step, 6-to-1 winner of the mile feature, and Frank K, which returned $28.80 for $2 after leading the field home in the nightcap event.

This Is Not Baseball.

The Georgetown Boys Club 100-pound team defeated the Washington Boys Club 100-pound outfit, 6 to 5. Five field goals were made and one foul goal.

"Y" Big Five Wins.

The Y. M. C. A. Big Five nosed out the Atlas quintets, 28 to 26, at out the Atlas quintet, 28 to 26, at the half.

Stanford Kicker a Wizard

By Paul Gallico.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 29 (Spl.).—There was nothing much doing on the football field of Tournament Park, where the Stanford Indians were rehearsing their plays for Columbia on New Year's Day, except the quick kicking of Allustiza, which is something to behold from a football viewpoint. The big Italian looks like a swarthy Indian. Somewhere he has acquired the knack of getting a football away from him while in a crouched position as though about to run through the line or off tackle; he stands 3 yards behind the center, takes the ball on the way in, that is, takes one step forward, brings up a right leg that looks like a club and bangs the ball 40 or 50 yards. If it isn't caught it has the peculiar and nasty propensity of tumbling end over end for another 20 or 30 yards. I asked Tiny Thornhill what the secret of Allustiza's kicking was. Tiny said that he had asked him the same question. Allustiza had replied, "I dunno. I just kick it." Which seems to cover the subject.

Researches conducted in trying to verify a rumor started by a panicky Columbia alumnus that Stanford had just a big dumb football team brought out some alarming facts. Six of the players on the team are Phi Beta Kappa students. Dave Packard, end; Chuck White, half back; Bill Corbus, all-American guard; Drown, a tackle; Lee Blanchard, center, and Ken Atterbaugh, half back, all wear little golden keys which certify that they are unusually brilliant students.

Further investigation brought out the fact that the men of Stanford are actually forced to attend classes, are frequently seen reading books and have as a team as high an average in their studies as the nonfootball playing students. Most of the players have an average of "B" and above. Students who miss class work and quiz papers through football trips are required to make them up when they return.

Dave Packard, the end, quit football several times because the game was interfering with his studies. All this is most depressing. We have a pretty smart and studious football team ourselves. Intellectually pure and untainted by football commercialism. I thought that perhaps if the Stanfords were one of those big, dumb, dull-witted college teams we might be able to outthink them even if we couldn't match them physically. Now, if Mr. Steven Dzamba, one of our guards, should call out across the line of scrimmage, "Hey, mug, what was the date of Magna Charta and what is the Ionic sign of Helium," Mr. Corbus, instead of blushing and retiring in confusion and letting the play run over him, will tell him.

Golfed with Howard Jones the other day. Jones is football coach of Southern California and one of the best football teachers in the country. After the game we sat around in our underwear in the locker room and talked football and Braven Dyer asked Howard to name an all-time all-American football team offhand and without thinking about it too much. Here is the way Jones lined them up:

Ends, Shelvin, Yale; Skladany, Pitt; tackles, Smith, Southern California, and Slater, Iowa; guards, Hefflefinger and Glass, Yale; center, Walsh, Notre Dame; backs, Red Grange, Illinois, and Morley Drury, Southern California; George Gipp, Notre Dame, and Jim Thorpe, Carlisle.

The only one squawked on was Skladany, the Pitt end, who was in our estimation too recent to stand up as an all-time end. Jones admitted that he was a little hipped on Skladany and said that if he thought it over and a wanted a pair of ends who would handle any kind of a situation, he would team up another Yale boy with Shelvin named Johnny Kilpatrick in there. I was interested to hear that, because Johnny Kilpatrick, the once dashing, crashing Yale end, is now John Reed Kilpatrick, the president of Madison Square Garden. He is a big, handsome brute, gray at the temples and no man's push-around. He looks even rougher than when he was playing football.

One thing in Columbia's favor is that practically nothing is known about the team ont here. Scout reports have been meager and purely from memory. Tiny Thornhill wrote to George Owen, of the New York Giants professional football team, for information and Owen wrote back that he was helping Lou Little and couldn't give him any. This means that Columbia comes into the Rose Bowl practically unscouted. Thornhill knows Little's style of play and that is about all, but otherwise he will start from scratch. Do you think I'm weakening? Go away. I still pick Columbia to win.

Jockey Watson Rides 3 Jefferson Winners

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Uncle Donald, a 3-year-old, racing for Mrs. R. T. Flippen and prominently mentioned as a contender for the Kentucky Derby last spring, today came from behind under a well-timed ride by Apprentice A. Williams to win the 1 1-16 miles feature at Jefferson Park, New Orleans.

Riding honors at the Louisiana course went to Little R. Watson, who scored with three of his mounts. He wan the opening race with Dian at 6 to 1, the third with Mentality, which paid $5 for $2, and the final event with Chipola, paying the short odds of $2.40 for $2.

Overlin and Bashara Win in Norfolk Bouts

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 29 (Spl.).—Ken Overlin, 159, of the U. S. S. Idaho, outpointed Tommy Rios, 161, of Wilmington, Del., in the feature bout at the Virginia Athletic Club tonight. There were no knockdowns.

In the eight-round semifinal, Tommy Bashara, 139, of Norfolk, knocked out Billy Coe, 136, of New Haven, in the third round. Bashara landed a right to the jaw in scoring his knockout.

Merrick Boys Win.

The Merrick Boys Club quint defeated the Y. M. C. A. 100-pounders, 38 to 36, in a closely contested basketball game played at the "Y" yesterday. The "Y" aggregation led, 20 to 16, at the half, but the Merrick team battled back to its ultimate victory in the final minutes of play.

Shawkey New Manager of Newark

Selection of Former Yankee Pilot Ends Rumors of Ruth Taking Job.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 29 (AP)—Robert J. (Bob) Shawkey, one-time strike-out king of the New York Yankees, today became manager of the International League Newark Bears, chief subsidiary in the Yankee baseball system.

Announcement of the one-year appointment of Shawkey, who piloted the Yanks themselves for one year after the death of the immortal Miller Huggins, was made by George Weiss, vice president of the Bears and head man of the New York team's extensive "farm" holdings. Awaited anxiously by Newark fandom and International League followers, it brought an end to rumors that involved a score of personages, including the one and only Babe Ruth.

Terms Not Announced.

Under what terms Shawkey, manager of Scranton in the New York-Pennsylvania League the past two years, was signed, was not made known, but that they were enticing was indicated by the fact the 43-year-old hurler had intended to retire from baseball to speed development of a gold mine he owns in Canada.

Shawkey succeeds Albert Mamaux as manager of the Bears and takes over the reins after three successful season. In 1931, the club finished second, the next year it won the league pennant and the little world series as well, and last year it finished 14 games ahead of the field, only to lose the championship in a playoff series.

Mamaux, also a former Yankee pitcher, was summarily released at the end of the 1933 campaign "for the best interests of the organization."

Stanford Team Prepares Its Defense

Grayson Is Out With Cold, But Is Expected to Start Monday.

PASADENA, Dec. 29 (AP).—With their New Year's Day football adversaries less than 48 hours away from the battle field, Stanford's Indians today set about a two-day schedule of learing as much as possible about Columbia's plays.

Coach Tiny Thornhill postponed until the eleventh hour the necessary chore of preparing a defense for the attack he expects from Lou Little's Lions. All this week as the Redskins practiced they have been using the well-known Stanford style of play.

The big coach hoped for the final two workouts to have all his sick and injured players back in uniform so the dress rehearsal for defense could be put on with a full cast, but a stray cold germ caught Bobby Grayson in its grip, and the star ball-carrying back was temporarily out of action.

Others to Start.

However, there was no thought in the Stanford camp that Grayson would not be able to start the game Monday, and right with him will be Monk Moscrip, injured end, and probably Wes Muller, star center, who has been seriously indisposed.

No Stanford scout saw Columbia play this season, so Coach Thornhill is not supplied with a blue print of the intricate criss-cross shift from which the Lions go into the line of scrimmage, but he has a general idea of the formations, and these he has imparted to the Reds.

Not So Handicapped.

Thornhill's system of preparation for a rival team's attack is not to have one of his teams run a long series of the other eleven's plays against the Varsity, but consists simply in showing the formations likely to be used and pointing out possible plays from such a line-up. So the Pacific Coast team's cocahing staff is not so handicapped as it might be in lack of information on the Eastern attacking maneuvers.

Stanford will be all through after the Saturday workout and that, too, will be light.

Alumni Bob Up.

Columbia Alumni are bobbing up from almost every section of Southern California and many of them will have a chance to cheer for their Alma Mater for the first time since they left.

Several rooters have come from New York, among them William M. Erb, who may have to divide his support. He played football for both contestants, Stanford in 1898, 1899 and 1900 and Columbia to 1902. However, regardless of his neutrality he will be out-voted and outshouted in his own family as he will be accompanied to the game by two borthers who are Stanford graduates with no other entangling alliances.

Cagemen to Resume.

Martinsville, Va., Dec. 29 (Spl.). Martinsville Boy's Independent Basket Ball Team resumes activities here on January 4 when the strong Schoolfield Y. M. C. A. five will be played in their first of a two-game series. To date the boys have won five out of six contests played.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Dec. 29.

On the golden sands of old Miami shore—here we are, fellow, shaking off those Charles Town chills. And what a whale of a difference those 1,100 miles make! Not a dyed horse in a carload here, so I'm told. And if you mention the word "ringer" people believe you are talking about horseshoe pitching. However, good time Charles Town, better time Miami. Mike, my No. 1 clocker, has either been working hard here for the past ten days or he should start writing fairy stories. He certainly has convinced me that he and his trusty second-splitter know a few things. Until I can get a personal line on the cattle collected hereabouts, I shall have to lean toward Mike's good things. We went into conference tonight and came out with these, plus a headache apiece. BILL.

First Race—Happy Scot is partial to the kind of lightning track he will have under him tomorrow and I would not be surprised to see him lead this pack to the wire. Gets a pull in the weights from most of the contenders. Hernando is said to be right and appears to be the one to beat. The clockers have been raving over Sky Haven's works. Might make a money appearance.

Third Race—Meloy was a keen sprinter around Chicago this fall and may start the campaign here among the palms with a victory. Trials indicate this one is ready. Bichloride is cheap, but has worked well enough to warrant consideration. Pencader would prefer a route but is a possibility.

Fourth Race—Easy Come proved a very useful juvenile in Maryland and left Bowie as sharp as a tack. I am unable to find workouts here on the youngster. Needs only to run his race to have a good chance in a field of this caliber. Speedy Skippy has finished ahead of keen 2-year olds and will be the one to catch. King Saxon for the show.

Fifth Race—Gold Step, 126 pounds and all, gets the Bennings call in the Inaugural Handicap. Comes back to fancy sprinting after a rest. Ranks with the best dash horses in the business and is reported fit. Crowning Glory gets 11 pounds from Gold Step. Should be second. If there is a major upset, I look for Levaal to turn the trick. The 5½ course gives him a chance, providing he breaks quickly.

Sixth Race—Everfair was a busy plater in Maryland last fall and earned much more than oats during that stage of the season. Gets in this test with only 102 pounds and this way rigged must be rated. Papyrograph and Arab for the other awards.

Seventh Race—Bub McFarland is a horse that is always played but seldom wins. Gets in a cheap race here, however. Bolilee may cause the veteran some trouble. Major General to show.

Meet at Charles Town Netted State $23,500

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 29 (Spl.). West Virginia's first legal racing meet since pari-mutuel betting was authorized in the State, the three-week meet at Charles Town netted the State treasury $23,500, according to J. B. McLaughlin, State commissioner of agriculture, who is ex-officio State racing commissioner.

The sum received by the State represented 3 per cent of the pari-mutuel wagers made at the track as provided in the new State racing law.

Stocks Driven Lower Under Profit Taking

Tax Selling Is Lighter; Turnover Volume Cut to 1,133,505 Shares.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Stocks edged lower in the year's last full-time market. Profit taking from the recent average, coupled with dribbles of cash selling, found the market less strongly supported with buying orders, and the trend was downward most of the day.

Declines, however, were moderate; trading was dull, and the average net loss was a small fraction.

Tax selling for cash was in much smaller volume than yesterday, when the market had easily surmounted offerings of that description.

Recessions Well Distributed.

Recessions were distributed with considerable impartiality over the major groups; stocks which had been the sturdiest gainers on recent rallies generally had the larger losses, though few of the dips exceeded a point.

A number of preferred shares advanced, a not unusual sight at a year-end.

Dollars pursued a narrow course in the foreign exchange market. Wall street at present is wondering whether official revaluation of the currency's gold base may be expected soon; some thought the Treasury's latest gold order might have significance in this connection, although a more generally accepted view was that the regulation had as its aim the plugging of legal loopholes through which hoarders might seek to escape.

Utilities Near Lows.

Utility shares, which reach the year-end not far from their 1933 lows, were rather firm, although American Telephone met realizing which cost it more than a point of Thursday's rise. Consolidated Gas was up about one.

Elsewhere, net changes were largely fractional. U. S. Steel, American Can, New York Central, Pennsylvania, General Electric, Sears, Roebuck, American Smelting and Santa Fe yielded half a point or thereabouts.

Union Pacific and Du Pont sagged around a point. General Motors and National Distillers resisted. Homestake jumped 11 and U. S. Smelting gained a major fraction. Volume dropped to 1,133,505 shares.

Loadings Loss Lighter.

Last week's decrease in car loadings was somewhat less than seasonal; it followed the unseasonal rise of the preceding week and the total represented an increase of 6½ per cent over a year ago.

Reports of trade stressed the impetus which real winter weather over a large section of the country had given to retailers who had just been through a relatively busy Christmas shopping period.

Holiday volume, said Dun & Bradstreet, in many districts was the largest since 1928 the same review added: "Probably the full influence of all the Federal relief money now being distributed will not become plainly evident until after the turn of the year, but its stimulus to spring merchandise movements will be present to no uncertain extent."

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Although the Price Index Today Is the Same as When Gold-Buying Program Was Adopted, Warren Still Holds It Is Successful.

By Ralph West Robey.

Overshadowing everything else at the meeting of the American Economic Association at Philadelphia this week was the speech of Prof. George F. Warren. As the intellectual leader of the Administration in its current gold-buying program, anything he had to say was certain to be of interest and important. It was not, of course, a question of finding out what he believes—that already had been fully explained in his book on prices—but of discovering what he thinks of the theory now that he has had two months actual experience with it. His conclusion is, in a word, that it has been completely successful.

To those who have followed the course of prices under the gold-buying program such a conclusion doubtlessly comes as a distinct shock. The general opinion now, at least in so far as I have been able to find, is that the theory has not worked as promised. Among those who opposed the program at the start this failure is put down as due to the theory being unsound. Among the proponents it is explained as a failure to operate the program with enough force—either because the gold price has not been advanced rapidly enough or because purchases have been insufficient or because we must have an absolutely free gold market before there is a real test of the Warren thesis.

Warren Sees No Need For Any Apologies.

Apparently however Prof. Warren views all of these explanations and apologies as quite unnecessary. The fact is, as he sees it, that the policy has worked. One turns with considerable eagerness, therefore, to find why there is this difference of opinion—why Prof. Warren concludes the gold-buying program has been successful while almost everyone else is of the opinion that it has been a failure. The answer is comparatively simple. It is that Prof. Warren considers only such statistics and dates as will support his thesis. I do not mean to imply that he is doing this deliberately to mislead the public in an attempt to make a case for himself, but simply that his selection is not what the ordinary person would make.

In the first place he talks about the total increase in the price level sice last February, rather than from either the time when the dollar went to a discount in terms of gold or the time of the adoption of his policy. This strikes me as obviously unjust. What happened between March 4 and April 19, the date we officially suspended gold, can not be credited to the Warren policy or even to an appreciation in the value of gold in this country because, in fact, there was no such appreciation. This part of his comparison, therefore, must be discarded.

Next Question Is On Period to October 25.

This brings us then to the question of whether the Warren theory can be credited with any increase in prices that took place between April 19 and October 25, the date the firs; official price was established by the RFC for gold. I do not see how it can be. During that time there was no legal market for gold in the United States except at the statutory price of $20.67 an ounce. Further, our principal interest during that time was not so much to drive the price of the dollar down in terms of gold as to drive it down in terms of pounds sterling. In fact, it was this relationship—dollars to pounds—that was watched almost exclusively as an indication of what was happening to our currency.

It seems to me, therefore, that Prof. Warren must limit his price comparisons, in testing the effectiveness of his theory, to the period between October 25 and the present. If he does this he will find that instead of prices having advanced 20 per cent, the index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics was exactly the same on December 23 that it was on October 21, the last date before his program was announced.

In brief, in other words, the policy has amounted to exactly zero except for the temporary flurry it caused because it was interpreted as indicating we definitely were abandoning sound monetary principles. The reason it has had this result is simply that the whole theory is based upon fallacious premises.

Foreign Markets.

London, Dec. 29 (A.P.).—Quiet conditions prevailed on the stock exchange today, business being restricted on account of the suspension of trading here until Tuesday. Rubber shares, industrials, gilt-edged securities and transatlantic issues improved, while Argentine rails and foreign bonds suffered from profit taking. The market closed steady.

Paris—Firmness in the Wall street market and encouraging reports from London and Brussels stimulated slight gains on the bourse. The closing was steady.

Berlin—A more cheerful tone was registered on the boerse, selling orders decreasing. Prices averaged 2 points higher, with a firmer tone being recorded at the close.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Dec. 29 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Ohio and similar fleece wools are very quiet. All grades of these wools, however, are being firmly quoted as prices unchanged from last week. Choice lots of fine Ohio delaine are fully firm at 36 in the grease, while average lots are held at 35. Little strictly combing 56s, 60s, ½-blood Ohio wool is available, and some houses ask slightly higher than the recent selling range, 35@36 in the grease.

Bond Market Continues Rise On Light Sales

Prices Firm Along Wider Front; Trading Cut to $11,368,000.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—The bond market felt a further advance urge today and, despite some more belated cash tax selling and profit taking, prices firmed in the categories.

The trading volume contracted a trifle, sales totaling only $11,368,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues held a gain of six-tenths of a point.

While the recovery in listed loans conformed to usual year-end pattern, much of the recent upturn was attributed to growing hopes that business expansion, at least in the early part of the new year, will be substantial.

Carloadings Lose Less.

Freight carloadings for the week ended December 23, reported late today, show a less than seasonal decline. The rails were the most active of the corporation groups.

Carrier loans, up 1 to 2 or more, included some of Alleghany Corporation, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Burlington, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Great Northern, Hudson & Manhattan, New York Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific, Southern and Western Pacific.

Utilities and Industrials.

Among the best utilities and industrials were American Cyanamid 5s, up 4; American Rolling Mill 5s, up 2¼; American International 5½s, up 2¼; Loew's debenture 6s, up 4¾; International Telephone debenture 4½s, up 1⅛; National Dairy 5¼s, up 1¾.

New York Telephone general 4½s, up 1; Pathe 7s, up 1¼; Postal Telegraph 5s, up 1½; St. Joseph Lead 5½s, up 2; Utilities Power & Light 5½s, up 2; Warner Bros. 6s, up 1¼, and Western Union 4½s, up 3.

U. S. Government securities were quiet, but the majority held gains of 1-32 to 9-32 of a point.

Gains of 1 to around 3 points were shown by obligations of Dutch East Indies, Germany, Poland and the United Kingdom. There was not much activity, however, in the foreign section.

Eight Directors Resign From Phoenix Firm

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Resignation of eight directors from the board of Phoenix Securities Corporation, announced today, marks the broadest shake-up in the company's personnel since it was separated from the firm of Prince & Whitely in 1931.

A statement from the office of Wallace Groves, president and largest stockholder in the corporation, recalled that at the last annual meeting there was a proxy fight and that many of the directors opposed by the minority had now retired. The resignations, Mr. Grove said, will permit a reorganization of the management so that a majority of the stockholders would be represented.

Midland Steel Votes Dividend On Preferred

Class 1 Railways' Income Totals $39,300,000; Up 15 Per Cent.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Midland Steel Products Corporation today declared a dividend of $2 a share on the 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock. An announcement by the directors said $1 of the payment was to apply to accumulations of a similar amount from the October dividend and $1 on the dividend due in January.

Three months ago the company declared a dividend of $3 a share, of which $2 was applied on accumulations. The payment today is to stock of record of January 10, and disbursement will be made on January 16.

Directors of the Industrial Rayon Corporation declared a dividend of $1 a share on the common stock, payable January 16 to stock of record January 10. A similar payment was made in the preceding quarter, prior to which time the stock was on a $2 annual basis.

November net operating income of Class 1 railroads will show an improvement of some $5,200,000, or about 15 per cent over the results for the same month last year, it was estimated today on the basis of reports already published.

Aggregate net, figured at $39,300,000, represents a decrease of about 31 per cent from the results of October, but the seasonal decline is less steep than it was last year and the year before.

The first 69 roads to report for November had total net operating income of $35,311,000, against $51,503,000 in October and $30,382,000 in November, 1932. Gross revenues approximated $235,886,000, against $268,748,000 in October and $230,132,000 in November last year.

The Easy Washing Machine Co., of Syracuse, announced today that its directors had declared a dividend of 50 cents, payable January 15 to stock of record January 5. This is the first payment since July, 1930, the statement said, and will be "amply covered" by 1933 earnings.

Norfolk & Western Railway reports November net operating income of $1,837,967, compared with $2,759,185 a year ago.

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway system today reported net operating income for November was $2,231,044. This was a decrease from the November, 1932, earnings, which amounted to $2,982,749.

Net railway operating income for the 11 months of this year was $12,891,615, compared with $16,435,523 for the 1932 period. Operating revenues were $110,552,309, compared with $123,112,389 last year, and operating expenses, $86,351,186, compared with $93,887,494.

Prices of Commodities Decline 0.6 Per Cent

(United Press.)

Wholesale commodity prices for the week ended December 23 declined six-tenths of one per cent over the preceding week, the Department of Labor reported yesterday.

The decrease was partly attributed to reduction of more than 2 per cent in the manufactured food group and nearly 2 per cent in the farm products group. The decrease put the index at 70.4 per cent of the 1926 average of 100. Despite the decrease, present wholesale prices are 12½ per cent above the corresponding week in 1932 and is within nearly 2 per cent of the year high point for the week of November 18.

Wool Goods Trade Is Quiet During Week

New York Dec. 29.—Wool goods business was restricted last week by the usual year-end influences, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange. Buyers were occupied in taking inventory and had little time to shape piece goods orders. However, firms whose fiscal year ended on November 30 placed fair-sized duplicate orders with mills. Sales agents report that medium and low-priced goods are selling as well as can be expected, but that the high-priced fine worsteds are lagging. Improvement in this field is expected to take place soon.

"A marked betterment in the demand for cloaking and suitings for the women's wear trade is anticipated after the turn of the year," says the Exchange Service. "For many years spring business in women's wear has been slow in November and December only to burst forth suddenly in January and continue from then until Easter with little interruption. Developments of the past week are believed to indicate that a buying wave of substantial proportions is in sight. Sampling of spring and winter resort lines has been brisk, and this is believed to presage an early upturn in demand.

"Reports from retail centers in the Northern States continue to tell of increased clothing sales. Overcoat stocks are depleted in many shops, and indications are that there will be little merchandise to offer at the usual January sales. Consumers are no longer resisting retail prices of clothing due to the fact that many merchants have readjusted their prices or have taken on new lines priced in accordance with the size of their customers' pocketbooks."

Cotton Prices Sag Slightly in Fluctuations

January Closes at 10.09 as Market Is Unchanged to 5 Points Lower.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Trading in cotton was comparatively quiet today with fluctations correspondingly narrow. After an early advance to 10.29 for March contracts, the price eased off to 10.22 under late pressure, but closed at 10.26, with the general market closing steady, unchanged to 5 points lower.

The market developed an easy tone near the close under scattered selling promoted by the weakness of wheat and the afternoon reactions in the stock market. Liquidation through commission house and brokers with Wall street connections was fairly active in the last half hour. It was attributed partly to the establishing of losses, but was absorbed by the trade and after showing net declines of about 3 to 5 points, prices stiffened slightly on covering at the close.

Few Southern Sales.

A little Southern selling was reported here at the start. Advices from the Southwest said that while offerings from the interior were slight freer, the basis remained very firm.

Trade buying was attributed to price fixing which some thought was partly in anticipation of further improvement in general business conditions after the turn of the year.

Exports today 37,950 making 4,137,965 so far this season. Port receipts 17,987. U. S. port stocks 4,136,596.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was a shade lower under liquidation and selling of July by Western interests. Final prices were unchanged to 5 points lower. Sales were 16 contracts. Total sales for 1933 were 9,175 contracts against 5,059 the previous year and 4,799 two years ago. Bleachable spot nominal; January closed 4.40, March 4.62, May 4.78, July 4.98.

Wool Prices Held Firm; Little Demand

Boston, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Commercial Bulletin, of Boston, will say tomorrow:

"The manufacturers have shown little interest in wool offerings this week, although holders of wool are firmly of the opinion there will be excellent demand after the turn of the year to account for all the wool available.

"Foreign markets were generally quiet at the week-end, but prices were distinctly firm and prices seem likely to be fully maintained after the turn of the year. It is estimated that fully two-thirds of the South American clip has been sold to date.

"While the mills are slowing down at the year-end, reports from the clothing markets indicate better demand from the ultimate consumers.

"Mohair and other miscellaneous fibers and by-products are quiet but firm in price."

Michigan and New York fleeces: Delaine, unwashed, 32@35; ½ blood combing, 33@34; ⅜ blood combing, 42@43; ¼ blood combing, 41@42.

Norway Develops New Sodium Nitrate Process

Details in connection with the new process for manufacturing sodium nitrate recently developed in Norway have just been given out, according to a report from Vice Consul George M. Abbott, Oslo, made public by the Commerce Department.

The process, which will be patented in all important countries, is based on the use of artificial zeolites. Seawater somewhat concentrated, is pumped through a large container filled with a calcium base-exchange medium. When the reaction has occurred the sodium zeolite is treated with a concentrated solution of calcium nitrate, resulting in the formation of sodium nitrate and a calcium zeolite. Sea water is again introduced and the process repeated.

Receiver Asked For Maryland Printing Firm

"Maryland News" Officers Attacked in Suit by Stockholder.

Appointment of a receiver for the Maryland Publishing Co., publishers of the Maryland News, was asked yesterday in a suit filed by John W. Coffman, of Takoma Park, in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

Coffman told the court he owns 60 shares of preferred stock in the corporation, with a par value of $8,000, and 60 shares of common stock of no par value.

He alleges Maj. E. Brooke Lee and other officers of the Maryland News, have adopted a policy of "promotion of political partisan aims and projects of the political organization of which Lee is the leader, and have disregarded their duty to the stockholders to manage the newspaper for the advantage and interest of the stockholders."

The suit further alleges the corporation has operated at a loss of several thousands of dollars annually and that the operating deficits have been financed by loans from Maj. Lee.

The petition asks a receiver be appointed to make an accounting of the corporation and that the receiver be directed to disallow any and all moneys loaned by Maj. Lee to meet deficits incurred through additional expenses of the printing of news in the interest of his political policy.

It further asks dissolution and distribution of assets to the stockholders in the event the receiver finds the corporation insolvent.

Coffman, former editor of the Maryland News, said he filed the suit in his own behalf and "that of other stockholders who may desire to join me."

Maj. Lee last night said his attorneys would file answer at the proper time.

Labor's Protest Delays Signing Building Code

Labor's opposition to the proposed construction code has been carried to the White House and caused postponement of approval until after January 1, Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson said yesterday.

Members of the Construction League of America, in Washington for months seeking to have the code pushed through the NRA mill, were disconcerted by the announcement, since they contend delay in signing is retarding rehabilitation of the second largest industry in the country.

The situation, however, was somewhat muddled by conflicting statements.

Johnson told newspapermen President Roosevelt had found no fault with the code, but that he agreed to withhold action, in compliance with a request of labor unions, "until he hears what they have to say."

At the American Federation of Labor, it was denied that a representative of that organization approached the President. Instead, a spokesman asserted, A. F. of L. delegates laid their protests before Gen. Johnson and he telephoned the White House and asked the President to hold up the code.

The A. F. of L. now is waiting for Johnson to call a meeting to decide what should be the next step, it was said.

The A. F. of L. objections were aimed at the possible 48-hour week, which the code provides in cases where there has been inclement weather, and at the failure of the code to contain wage scales for the entire industry.

Packers Challenge Rainey's Charges

Code Observance and Gain in Employes Claimed.

Speaker Rainey's demands for Government operation of the packing industry because of its alleged failure to cooperate in the recovery program were challenged yesterday by William Whitfield Woods, president of the Institute of American Meat Packers.

Woods said the industry has been operating since August 1 under a temporary labor code which has increased employes 16 per cent and pay rolls 20 per cent, the United Press reports.

In addition, he said, a marketing agreement has been filed for the industry.

Feed Is Provided For Hungry Horses

Washington's needy horses will not go without feed if their owners will call at the Animal Rescue League headquarters, 71 A street northwest. Numerous donations of feed have been received and will be given to those unable to provide sufficient grain for horses.

The usual Christmas dinner was not held this season, the league announced.

Electric Power Output.

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—The electricity output for the Chicago district for the week ended December 23 was 7 per cent greater than for the corresponding week last year. The percentage comparison made the best showing in the last five weeks. The output for the period was 105,136,000 kilowatt hours.

To Sell 40,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation has agreed to sell 40,000 shares of common stock to certain officers at $16 a share plus accrued interest at 4½ per cent a year, it was disclosed today. The stock is currently quoted around $17 a share. The plan was outlined in the company's application to the New York Stock Exchange to list and additional 92,981 shares of common stock.

Marvel Signed To Face Dean On Mat

Feature Is Added to Card Next Week; Rampfer Meets Manich.

RASSLING showmanship should hit a new high at Washington Auditorium Thursday night when Matchmaker Joe Turner unravels a specially arranged 30-minute feature to his Jim Browning—Ernie Dusek main event.

Scheduled in one of the most colorful bits offered locally in many a day will be tremendous and bewhiskered Man Mountain Dean, 302 pounds of elephantine strong man, against the Mysterious Masked Marvel, Jack Curley's unidentified mat favorite.

Weight Advantage.

An impressive winner over 265-pound Joe Komar in his debut here some weeks ago, the Man Mountain will boast an approximate 100-pound weight advantage over the hooded unknown. Inasmuch as the Marvel is a speed specialist and polished worker, however, the lumbering Dean may experience difficulty in striding along with his shifty foeman.

Insofar as both the Man Mountain and Marvel apparently are launched upon ambitious build-ups here, this bout may prove the undoing of one or the other, Dean generally loosing all of his aggression during the early moments in his bid for rapid fire and decisive victory.

Semifinal Booked.

Semifinal glamour was added to the card yesterday with announcement of the booking of handsome Hans Kampfer, newly turned independent, and picturesque George Manich, an ace in the hole on any man's show.

One of the outstanding cards of the 1933 season, Handsome Hans, formerly affiliated exclusively with the Londos-White interests, probably will qualify for some enviable matches if he gets by Manich.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

THE resumption of bowling in the National Capital League at the Lucky Strike Bowling alleys last night again brought out a record-breaking set and a new joint holder of the high individual game score. Jack Gooding, Judd & Detweiler star, former holder of both league records, took it on the chin on two occasions. Ed Blakeney (Silver Spring Skating Rink) scattered the maples with games of 142, 146 and 160, for a 448 set, to shatter the old mark by one pin and Freddie Moore (Fountain Hams) pounded out a 176 game to tie the high individual game, finishing with a triple-header strike.

The Silver Spring Skating Rink [illegible], which practically is conceded [illegible] league championship, further [illegible]sed its lead by trimming firm[illegible] Sans" second place Lucky [illegible] Barbers three games. Ex[illegible] the y[illegible] a superior brand of duck [illegible] available.

"Fo[illegible], the Skaters rolled games [illegible] 674 and 658 for a total set of [illegible], the second highest team game in the District this year and only 30 pins shy of the record held by the Book of Washington team. Capt. Joe Harrison led the winners with a 414 set.

Fountain Hams team, led by Freddie Moore, swept its match with Judd & Detweiler. Jack Gooding rolled a 379 set and could but watch his league marks broken and tied. Star Service Station upset the Book of Washington team in the odd game. Carroll Daly, filling in for the winners, turned in a 149 game and 391 set, while Perce Wolfe, with 409, and Sam Simon, with a 158 game and 391 set, starred for the winners. Howard Campbell led his Lucky Strike crew with a 380 set, but could not stop Peoples Life Insurance from taking the odd game.

The Arcadia bowling alleys will be the scene of an attractive doubles match tonight when Joe and Paul Harrison pair up in an endeavor to stop the fast-moving Jake Jacobson and Harry Schreck team, of Baltimore. The visitors have been defeated but twice in 15 starts and have won from every District team to face them. Jacobson, who is in his early twenties, showed the brand of duck-spilling he is capable of in the Italian-Jewish match, rolling a 632 set. Many think he is headed for the No. 1 ranking position.

"Pop" Halley is holding a sweepstakes at the G Street Emporium this afternoon at 2:30., the winner receiving a free entry in the United States Sweepstakes, which opens at the Arcadia next Saturday. An entrance fee of $2, plus cost of three games, will be the tax for each entry.

Wasps End Court Tour, Losing Only One Game

Emory, Va., Dec. 29 (Spl.).—Emory and Henry College Wasps, with Glenn Roberts, center, featuring, have completed a successful basketball tour that extended to Birmingham, Ala.

The Wasps defeated Newport (Tenn.), Tennessee Wesleyan College, Chattanooga Vee-Eights, Lafollette and the Birmingham Reds, losing only to the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. team that has crushed all opposition this season.

Want Games.

The Ennis Tire Co. Five wants to book games with 130 or 145 pound teams having gymnasiums. Call Potomac 4134, apartment 153, between 6 and 7.

Eagles Want Game.

Three More Fives May Join League

Hyattsville Loop to Hold Meeting Next Thursday.

Three teams have indicated intentions of joining the new basket ball loop planned in Hyattsville this winter. Three more quintets are sought to complete the circuit, though play will start January 8 if four teams can be obtained.

Company F, National Guard, of Hyattsville, Hyattsville A. C., and Brentwood Hawks are the teams already lined up. Others who may join the loop are Hyattsville Southern Methodists, Hyattsville Baptists and a team from the University of Maryland.

Another meeting to complete plans and draw up a schedule will be held next Thursday night.

Hyattsville High School's basketers will meet an alumni quint tonight at 8 o'clock at the armory. A dance will follow the contest.

Morale High, Lions Expect Victory

Little Is Optimistic, Says His Team Has Yet to Be Outfought.

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 29 (AP).—Lou Little surveyed his coaching handiwork today and pronounced the Columbia football team ready for its Rose tournament game with Stanford New Year's Day.

"We have no injuries,' said Coach Little. "The morale is good. We've drilled hard on every detail of our defense and offense, and we expect to win.

"There is no fair basis of determining the comparative strength of the Columbia and Stanford teams. Tiny Thornhill's squad, I understand, outweighs and outnumbers us. It may even outspeed us, but our team has yet to be outfought this season."

Doesn't Want Alibis.

Coach Little preferred not to go into details on what he thinks the weather in Pasadena may do to his team. He does not care to have any alibis set up. If the Lions are to lose he wishes them to lose without excuses.

"It is unfortunate that Stanford should have been so hard hit with ineligibility, injury and illness," he said today, adding, "I hope sincerely that Monk Moscrip, Bobby Grayson and Wes Muller will be able to start the game because my boys are in such fine fettle."

One thing Little has neglected to mention in connection with his squad's fine condition is the fact that although he would have liked to work the players more, he was afraid to do so because of the lack of reserves.

Feared Injuries.

"We couldn't afford to take a chance," said one of Little's assistants. "The boys knew, and we knew, that injury would cut our strength sharply, so we have prepared them for the game without rough work."

"That's just the chance we had to take," Little said, "and after all I think our players have taken this trip more seriously than some of the other teams which came out for the game in other years. That helps a lot.

"Our punting has improved here at Tucson. The backs and ends have been handling the ball cleanly and the line has been coached to the minute. As for the defense, you never know if your plans are right until the game."

Jones Praised Team.

Capt. L. M. (Biff) Jones, Louisiana State's successful football coach, watched the Lions go through a light work-out this afternoon and expressed surprise the way they executed their plays without a bobble. Former head coach at West Point, Capt. Jones has seen other Little teams in action, but he said he considered this one of the best of the lot.

The last Tucson work-out is on tap for tomorrow afternoon, then the team will board a special train in the evening and arrive at the Alhambra station Sunday morning. Buses will take the squad to its Pasadena hotel and a light workout will be held in the Rose Bowl in the afternoon.

Davis Is Ready For Britten Tuesday

Better Prepared to Evade Foe's Knockout Punch, Handlers Declare.

IN one of the eight-rounders at Portner's Tuesday Rody Davis again will pit his boxing skill against the solid smacks of Joe Britten, which laid him low in a previous encounter. Davis, a flashy, promising lightweight from the Northeast sector of Washington, is far and away the better boxer of the two, but one sock on the chin whiskers rendered him null and void in their other fight.

Davis' handlers attribute Britten's knockout victory over their charge to inexperience on the part of Davis, who was wholly at a loss as to how to conduct himself in stormy weather. They claim Davis has now been schooled in the fine art of weathering knockout storms until the fog lifts and will encounter little difficulty boxing Britten into submission.

Foresee Repetition.

Many of the faithful, however, are certain that the Baltimore sock artist will repeat his previous knocking-for-a-loop performance. They point out that Britten is a 100-to-1 shot to land a solid blow sometime during the fight and claim that one such punch will make Davis' boxing skill as useful as a pair of porous-knit ear muffs on an Antarctic expedition.

Another promising eigth-rounder will find Ken Overlin, Norfolk middleweight, swapping punches with K. O. Burns of Baltimore. Overlin is a superlatively smart boxer who has amassed an impressive string of consecutive victories. His opponent is a rising young middleweight, who may upset prefight calculations by hammering the class of the bout into the resin dust.

Phil Furr, of the rugged right-hand punch, meets Tom Bashara, of the equally rugged right-hand punch, in the remaining eight-rounder. A six between Roma La Bona and Johnny Mayes will open the bill.

Elmore Under Knife.

Bristol, Va., Dec. 29 (Spl.).—Jimmy Elmore, director of athletics at Bristol (Tenn.) High School, underwent an operation for appendicitis at Knoxville (Tenn.) Hospital yesterday, and today was reported as resting well. Coach Elmore was stricken Wednesday afternoon at Morristown, Tenn., as he was en route from Knoxville to Bristol. He completed his journey to Bristol, but returned to Knoxville yesterday for the operation.

PUBLIC NOTICES

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION and Review, District Building, Washington, D. C., December 29, 1933. In accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress of August 14, 1894, and amendments thereto, the Board of Equalization and Review will be in session in the District Building (room 106) from and after the first Monday in January, 1934, until and including the first Monday in June, 1934, for the purpose of hearing and determining such complaints as may be made in respect to the new assessment of real property in said District. The books containing the returns of said assessment are open to public inspection and can be seen at the office of the board between the hours of nine o'clock a. m. and three o'clock p. m. of each secular day. To insure due consideration, all complaints shall be filed at the earliest possible date. The law requires that the equalization and review shall be completed as nearly as practicable on the first Monday in June, 1934, after which date no other or further complaints as to valuations will be received, and when approved by the Commissioners, the assessments will constitute the basis of taxation for the next succeeding period of one year, and until another valuation is made according to law. Blank forms for making complaints can be had on application. WM. P. RICHARDS, Assessor and Chairman of the Board of Equalization and Review. 29,30

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia. Washington Properties, Inc., a corporation, 2600 Woodley road northwest, Plaintiff, vs. Mrs. Helen Patton, jr., also known as Helen Grondin, nonresident, Defendant. No. 280775. Order of publication in attachment. The object of this suit is to recover a judgment against the defendant in the sum of four hundred and fifteen dollars and forty-five cents ($415.45) for rent due for apartments 113 and 719 at the Boulevard Apartment, 2121 New York avenue northwest, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain credits of the defendant attached under a writ of garnishment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is therefore this 11th day of December, 1933, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. It is further ordered that this order shall be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. ROBT. E. MATTINGLY, Judge. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) BLANCHE NEFF, Clerk. 16.23.30

Dying Year.

Another year goes down the slope, and we can only let her, and voice again the same old hope that next year will be better. We view the recent brand of years with bitter grief and sorrow, but still we're smiling through our tears, and banking on the morrow. In '28 all things were fine, on velvet we were treading; then came the fateful '29, with rough and rugged sledding. The institutions fell apart in which we fondly trusted, and every voter's applecart was overturned and busted. We said, "Dame Fortune is too rude, the deal she gives is dirty;" but still with hope we were imbued, we looked ahead to '30. And when that year came sailing in we thought our troubles over: we raised a loud and joyous din, we soon would be in clover. And when its dreary course was run, and we were sorely stricken, we said, "Well, here comes '31, and things will surely quicken." And so the dismal years dragged on, each worse than that before it; and hoping still to see the dawn, we simply grinned and bore it. We wept for every dying year, and hailed its gay successor, and said, "Relief at last is here," and proved a tinhorn guesser. And now again we say farewell to one old year that's dying, and while we toll the passing bell, our hopes are all skyhighing. The glad New Year we soon shall greet, and brave words will be spoken, and warmth will come to frozen feet, and balm to hearts now broken.

Liquor to Reduce Jazz, Classic Pianist Thinks

Chicago, Dec. 29 (AP).—Now that liquor has supplanted jazz as a stimulant, says Moissaye Boguslawski, a revival of the classics is likely.

"You know," said the pianist, "in Europe the consumption of alcoholic beverages is prevalent throughout all the nations. It seems that jazz can not get hold there because jazz, in my estimation, is nothing more than a stimulant. Now a little wetting of our senses with a stimulating drink will put life into us, and I think we will become more interested in the classics."

Lorton Additions Will Start Soon

CWA Workers to Build New Dormitories.

Construction of six temporary buildings at the District Reformatory, Lorton, by Virginia CWA workers will probably start next week, Capt. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of penal institutions, said yesterday.

The Virginia CWA board approved approved the proposal of the District Commissioners the buildings be constructed with CWA funds and Fairfax County unemployed.

Plans call for four dormitories for prisoners and two for officers and guards to relieve overcrowding.

Boy, Riding Train Rods, Is Ensheathed by Ice

Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 29 (AP).—Craighton Dennis, 18, Meadowwood, W. Va., was recovering in county hospital here today from exposure, the result of a 60-mile ride from Bryan, Ohio, last night encased in ice as he clung to rods under the baggage car of a New York Central train.

Dennis was sprayed with water when the locomotive took on water on the run. Trainmen removed the ice with a chisel and sent the boy to the hospital.

Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Holiday? The Dutch, for One

Dire Prophecies Steal Some of Joy From New Year's.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 29 (AP).—At snow-covered cross-roads and in other rural meeting places, Pennsylvania Germans are exchanging the season's greetings with the same weird warnings and prophecies that were heard when the State was but a chain of mountain settlements.

Shoveling paths through drifts, they are certain next summer will bring a generous yield of fruit, because the week between Christmas and New Year has been windy.

Housewives warn younger women that those who hang out a wash on New Year's Day will have to wash daily throughout the year.

Those who clean their stables and barns this week will have sickly cattle in 1934.

Those who wash, or take a bath and change clothes this week, are going to be sick next year and their luck will be bad.

If you put on a clean shirt for New Year's Day, look out for boils, and if you eat apples and nuts on that day, you also are in danger of boils.

Those who eat sausage on New Year's morning will be robust and strong throughout the year.

Fantastic parades will trample through the snow from village to village and there will be song and feasting in the farmhouses.

Persons whose birthday anniversary falls on Christmas will be the center of attention, because during these holidays they can hear the cattle talk.

Beliefs and superstitions brought to Pennsylvania from the Fatherland have prevailed through the centuries, though they are fading in populous places. Nevertheless, thousands observe each holiday as their forefathers did.

Roper Sees Sign In Holiday Trade

Buying Shows Confidence of Public, He Asserts.

Miami, Dec. 29 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Daniel A. Roper said in an interview today that the holiday season "has been characterized by buying in proportions not before realized for several years."

"Confidence in the President's plans is steadily growing, and most of our people, rich and poor, realize that we are bringing ourselves out of a social and economic order that did not fit our needs, into a better controlled one," he said.

The Secretary, accompanied by William A. Julian, treasurer of the United States, is here for a week's vacation aboad the U. S. Eala, a Navigation Department houseboat.

Home Loans Head Scores Obstructionists

Frizzell Asserts Financial Advisers Here Are Hampering Aid.

Through misunderstanding and lack of "adequate and intelligent information," local financial advisers are seriously hampering the work of the District office of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, Paul J. Frizzell, manager, declared in a radio address last night.

"This advice to the public has even overcome the widespread publicity designed to acquaint the public with the purpose and operations of the Home Owners Loan Corporation," Mr. Frizzell declared.

Conditions in Washington must be corrected unless all values are to be destroyed, he warned. He referred to 1,117 foreclosures in the District in the first 11 months of this year, an increase of 238 over the same period last year.

"Can any intelligent person look at this picture and be complacent about our real estate situation?" Mr. Frizzell asked. "Does not this situation justify the criticism I have expressed of those who have looked upon this corporation as an unneeded and unwarranted intrusion upon their private business?"

Opening of the District office of the corporation was greeted with "an open hostility comparable to the type of thinking that keeps a man from helping to put out a fire down the street because he does not believe it will spread to his house," the manager asserted. "This situation has improved to some extent recently, as men in responsible positions have taken the trouble to inform themselves more completely, but it is still far from satisfactory."

'Inventor' Indicted On Fraud Charge

Accused of Getting $5,000 From Fiancee's Kin.

An indictment charging Solomon Matlin with using the mails to defraud members of a Brooklyn family of almost $5,000 was returned by the District grand jury yesterday.

Matlin, the jurors were told, was engaged to marry Miss Sadie Greenbaum in Brooklyn in the winter of 1930. The next year he came to Washington, and on the pretense of defraying the cost of a patent he obtained $1,120 from Miss Greenbaum, $1,285 from Louis Greenbaum and $1,675 from Morris Greenbaum, it was charged.

The invention was to have been used on laundry machines.

Brown Selects Roster of New 4th Precinct

27 Transfers of Officers and Men Are Made Necessary.

The roster of the Fourth Police Precinct, which will be established Monday in the Southwest section was announced yesterday by Maj. E. W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Twenty-seven transfers of officers and men made necessary by creation of the new precinct also were announced. Capt. J. A. Sullivan will command the station, with Lieuts. B. R. King and O. J. Letterman, and Sergts. C. C. Gouldman, J. R. Leach, and E. K. Shelton as other members of the new personnel.

Capt. J. E. Bobo was ordered transferred to command the Fifth Precinct from administrative headquarters. The precinct station at Fifth and E streets southeast, known as the Fourth Precinct for two years, will resume the designation of Fifth Precinct, and the precinct at Seventeenth and Rhode Island avenue northeast, will resume [illegible] former name of Twelfth Precinct.

Lieut.'s John Flaherty and L. [illegible] Kelly, and Sergts. T. T. Dalhouse, [illegible] M. Larkins and J. J. Agnew will work with Capt. Bobo at the Fifth Precinct.

Transfers of officers made necessary through rearrangement of station houses were announced as follows:

Lieut. Emil Desch, transferred from administrative headquarters to the Eleventh Precinct; Lieut. L. [illegible] Redman, transferred from Sixth Precinct to administrative headquarters as night inspector; Acting Lieut. N. O. Holmes, from administrative headquarters to the Tenth Precinct; Lieut. W. C. Balderson from Tenth Precinct to Sixth Precinct; Sergt. W. H. Bailey, from Fourth Precinct to Tenth Precinct; Sergt. T. T. Hefferman, from Traffic Bureau to Seventh Precinct.

Byrd Ship Works Free From Gales and Fog

Aboard Admiral Byrd's Flagship Off Antarctica, Dec. 29 (By Mackay Radio) (AP).—Released from gales and fog, which have slowed her progress, the flagship of the Byrd Expedition resumed its southeasterly direction yesterday, within the Antarctic Circle.

"A dark, full-lipped Italian woman sat by the bedside of her baby daughter in a dingy Paris flat six years ago and made herself a black and white sweater while she watched over the sleeping child."

That sweater was the beginning of one of the most important dressmaking establishments in Paris . . . made by a woman who actually climbed from poverty and obscurity to wealth and fame . . . on a pair of knitting needles!

"A school teacher in Naugatuck, Connecticut, driven almost frantic by the restlessness of a 6-year-old pupil, asked the youngster if he would like to draw soldiers on the blackboard."

Today, twenty-two years later, the creator of that military parade on the blackboard of a Naugatuck Valley schoolroom, is Hollywood's supreme dictator of style. He tells Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford and other screen luminaries what to wear . . . and when . . . and how!

"Her first showing of gowns was beautifully ignored by the French press. The only time her name was mentioned in the papers was in a paid advertisement seeking American girls to wear her designs."
